Search Continues
MACKINAW CITY, Mich. (AP)—Boats and planes searched today for more survivors of yesterday's freighter collision, but rescue workers believed that the seven seamen still missing had perished in the frigid waters of the Straits of Mackinac. Three men were known dead as a result of the mishap in the fog-shrouded straits, the narrow stretch of water which separates Michigan's two peninsulas.

Reserves Safe
ALAMEDA (AP) — Despite the Viet Nam crisis, there appears to be little chance that reserves will be called up for active duty. Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said yesterday. "We have not gotten to that point yet. At least for the foreseeable future, we have ample forces at our disposal."

240 U.S. Planes Bomb North Viet Air Base, Targets

Two Navy Jets Are Downed In Heaviest Attack To Date

SAIGON (AP)—More than 240 U.S. Air Force and Navy warplanes bombed an air base and other targets in North Viet Nam today in the heaviest air attack on the north to date. Two U.S. Navy F8 Crusader jets were downed by antiaircraft fire.

One Navy pilot parachuted into the sea and was rescued, the other was presumed lost.

The Air Force and Navy planes carried out eight attacks in all.

Navy pilots hitting at the Vinh military air base about 160 miles south of Hanoi reported it 70 per cent destroyed.

This was the second strike against an airfield in the three-month air war against the Communist north. Earlier Vietnamese air force Skyraiders hit the air base at Dong Hoi air field near the frontier. A spokesman did not say whether any Communist aircraft were on the ground.

SECOND STRIKE

A U.S. Marine was killed when Viet Cong guerrillas fired on a group of leathernecks touring hamlets just outside Da Nang air base, handing out chewing gum, candy and books.

In two separate incidents in central Viet Nam, Communist land mines killed a U.S. Army Special Forces man and seriously wounded two other American soldiers.

A Marine spokesman said an eight-man group headed by a lieutenant colonel went to the Le My village complex with five Vietnamese.

VILLAGE COMPLEX

The Marines had no trouble in the first hamlet, but as they entered the second, they drew heavy fire from a house, where an estimated five Viet Cong riflemen were hiding.

In another development, Donald Dawson, a California civilian searching the jungles for his lost pilot brother, was reported a prisoner of the Viet Cong deep in Communist Territory.

Dawson, 25, went into the jungles about two weeks ago with a Vietnamese girl interpreter after receiving word that the body of his brother, U.S. Army Lt. Daniel L. Dawson, 27, had been found.

Stalin, Mao Praised In V-E Day Rites

MOSCOW (AP) — A Kremlin audience applauded the names of Joseph Stalin and Mao Tze-Tung today but sat on its hands as Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party chief, promised more aid to North Viet Nam if necessary, for its defense against U.S. attack.

Spontaneous applause for the two oft-denounced Communists, the late Soviet dictator and the Chinese leader in the Moscow-Peking dispute, occurred during a speech by Brezhnev, first secretary of the Soviet Communist party.

He spoke for 126 minutes to 6,000 persons assembled in the Kremlin to celebrate the 20th anniversary of V-E day.

Among those present and getting special applause was Stalin's top military commander, Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, whom former Premier Nikita Khrushchev had pushed into oblivion. Khrushchev himself went unseen and unmentioned.

Brezhnev reiterated Soviet policy on Viet Nam, with denunciations of American policies there and in the Dominican Republic, Cuba and the Congo.

He said the Soviet Union is aiding North Viet Nam "in defending the country against aggression."

No Comment
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States had no official comment today on the announcement from Santo Domingo that a new "national government of reconstruction" had been sworn in in the Dominican Republic.

Bobby Kennedy Raps LBJ's Unilateral Dominican Act

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy says the United States should have consulted the Organization of American States before sending troops to the Dominican Republic, the New York Times reported today.

A Washington dispatch by John D. Morris said the senator, in an interview, expressed deep concern over the administration's unilateral intervention in the Dominican Republic.

Kennedy recalled that his late brother, President John F. Kennedy, had the concurrence of the OAS in moving to force the removal of Soviet missiles from Cuba in 1962.

"I think there should have been consultation prior to any action we would take in the Dominican situation," Kennedy was quoted as saying. "I don't think we addressed ourselves to the implications of what we did."

One such implication, he said, was the possible undermining of relations with friendly Latin-American governments.

Kennedy was elaborating on a theme he sounded in a Senate speech Thursday in connection with passage of a special $700-million military appropriation Johnson had asked primarily for use in Viet Nam. He said then the OAS was not properly notified about U.S. moves in the Dominican situation.

He said every senator agrees with Johnson's determination to prevent establishment of a new Communist state in this hemisphere.

Armed Robbery Linked To Liquor Store Job

An armed robber who held up Budworth's Grocery in Sausalito yesterday has been "positively identified" as the same slender bandit who robbed a Mill Valley liquor store clerk April 6.

Police Lt. Ted Zink said today that three persons whose names he would not disclose have identified the Sausalito robber from a composite drawing made after the Mill Valley store was hit.

Robert L. Nissen, partner in the store at 301 Caledonia Street, was ordered to unlock the cash register by the soft spoken man while he removed $139 in cash.

The robber then pulled back the slide on his weapon, believed to be a .32 caliber automatic pistol, and put a round in the chamber. He put the pistol in his right front pocket and fled.

"He was apparently ready to use it," said Zink later.

The youth, in his 20s, was about five feet, 11 inches tall and weighed about 160 pounds, Nissen said. He wore jeans, a white T-shirt, a light blue or gray shirt and a zipper type jacket. He had bubble-type sun glasses.

Mrs. Ruby Greving, clerk at Del's Liquors No. 2, 653 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley, gave a similar description of the man who held her up in April.

Nissen said the man came into the store at 12:45 p.m. while he was cleaning vegetables in the back of the store. Nissen then walked into the main part of the shop.

"He pulled a gun on me and told me to go in the back room," he said. "I did. Then he must have gone to the register and found it locked. He hollered for me to open it and I did."

The man emptied the till and ran from the store, turning onto Bonita street. Nissen called police.

Junta Takes Over Dominican Reins

COMBINED AP & UPI

SANTO DOMINGO—A five-man military-civilian ruling body installed in a surprise move by the Dominican's military junta has called on Col. Francisco Caamano's leftist rebels to help restore peace and national unity.

Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrerra Friday night was named president of the new group, which called itself a "government of national reconstruction." Imbert described Caamano as "a good personal friend" with whom he was ready to talk at any time.

NO COALITION

Caamano, on the other hand, claims that his forces speak for the Dominican Republic as its legitimate government. He has said that his rebels will accept no coalition government formula involving the military junta.

"We could not do this, not after defending the constitution at the cost of nearly a thousand lives," Caamano said.

In the fighting a U.S. Marine chief warrant officer was shot and killed at the nearby port of Haina last night when five rebel infiltrators tried to penetrate the Marine beach support area, a U.S. Marine spokesman reported today.

DRIVEN OFF

The Marines opened fire on the intruders and drove them off but the spokesman said another infiltrator who came in by sea is believed to have hidden himself in the area.

Sniping and other attacks on American positions wounded three paratroopers and a number of Dominican civilians.

Rebels hurled two concussion type grenades early today at a command post in front of Marine positions on the edge of the international safety zone, the Marines reported. Two Dominicans were hurt.

A spokesman for the 82nd Airborne Division said light sniping continued during the night along the corridor through the city and over the Duarte Bridge leading to the San Isidro air base. The three wounded paratroopers were hit by this fire.

The total causalties now stood at 14 dead Americans — seven Marines killed in action, five paratroopers killed in action, a

Senator Kuchel Wins Round In Libel Battle
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif., won his first battle yesterday in his court fight against four men he said libeled him.

Norman H. Krause, 44, a former policeman accused of conspiring to libel Kuchel, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of using the name of a U.S. senator willfully and wrongfully in a manner that will and did offend. He also wrote a letter of apology to Kuchel.

Krause, along with Francis Capel, 57, Zarephath, N.J.; John Fergus, 41, and Jack C. Clemmons, 41, were indicted by a grand jury last February on libel charges.

Terra Linda Fire Chief Is Injured
Terra Linda Fire Chief George Walser was knocked unconscious by a wildly whipping fire hose yesterday in a freak accident at the swimming pool of the Terra Linda Recreation Center.

He was in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, but doctors thought he may have suffered a skull fracture.

Firemen were called to the center at 11:25 a.m. yesterday to aid employees when the walls of the pool started to crumble from water pressure in the nearby soil after it was drained for cleaning. The problem was made worse when a pump, with which employees tried to refill the pool hurriedly, stopped running.

Firemen hooked hoses to a hydrant and poured enough water in the pool to equalize pressure. In the process, however, pressure in the hose sent it whipping about and struck Walser in the head.

Life guard John Mulder treated Walser for shock and a cut on the head, then firemen took him to the hospital. He regained consciousness on the way, they said.

THEY MET AT MIDNIGHT—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Matthiesen, celebrating their golden wedding today in Black Point, met when he was a Piedmont fireman and she took midnight lunch to her father who was a Piedmont policeman. Matthiesen, at 72, is still at work, for an instrument company in Black Point. (Independent-Journal photo)

Midnight Lunch Leads To Lifetime Of Meals

A marriage that started 50 years ago in Piedmont was honored at a reception this afternoon at Druids Hall in Novato.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Matthiesen of 64 Manzanita, Black Point, were married May 8, 1915, in San Francisco.

The reception is being given by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Matthiesen of Pleasant Hill, and their daughters and sons-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Pritchard of Vallejo, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenze Pedersen of Black Point and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Listmans of Novato.

The couple met on midnight lunches when Ernest was on the Piedmont Fire Department. He was born in Cedar Bluff, Neb., in 1893. The family moved to the Bay Area when he was three years old.

Myrtle Taggart used to take midnight lunches to her father, who was on the Piedmont Police Force. She was born in 1896 in Oakland to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taggart. Her father still lives with the Matthiesens.

After several meetings at the midnight lunches, Ernest and Myrtle started going together. They were married two years later.

Matthiesen later worked for the Kern County Highway Patrol, before there was a California Highway Patrol. He served in the Army during World War I. Later he worked for Marion Steam Shovel Co. and Brown Brothers Welders, both of San Francisco.

In 1940 the couple moved to Black Point, and operated the Cliff House bar and restaurant where the boat ramp is now located under the highway bridge. They sold this in 1945 and he worked as a bartender in various clubs in Novato. He now works for Mechanical Instrument Co. in Black Point.

Both have been active in the civic life of Black Point. Matthiesen is a member of the Novato volunteer firemen, and Mrs. Matthiesen is a member of the firemen's auxiliary. He is past noble grand arch of the Novato Druids and past grand trustee of the state lodge. She is a past president of the Black Point Women's Club.

Tiburon Fire Budget Is Up

A preliminary budget of $126,708.66 for the coming fiscal year, up from the present $103,483, was approved Thursday night by directors of Tiburon Fire District.

The tax rate is expected to remain at 66 cents per $100 assessed valuation, Fire Chief Frank J. Buscher said.

The budget is to be adopted at the next regular directors meeting at 8 p.m. June 3 at the main fire house on Tiburon Boulevard.

Increases came with planned addition of a captain and more paid men to the department, planned addition to the second fire house on Trestle Glen and Paradise drives, and reconditioning of a tanker truck, Buscher said.

Directors budgeted $58,436 for salaries; $14,200, maintenance; $24,072.66, capital outlay; $30,000, Reserves.

Home On Leave

Navy airman apprentice Wallace L. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Davis of 8 Washington Street, Novato, has completed recruit training at the naval training center in San Diego and is home on leave until May 17, when he will report to Lakehurst, N. J., for parachute riggers school.

They've Been Married For 50 Years

Frank W. Schrader of 1 Yolanda Drive, San Anselmo, is celebrating two 50-year anniversaries this year.

Tonight he and his wife, the former Frieda Von der Mehden of San Francisco, will celebrate their golden wedding at a party at the Meadow Club in Fairfax.

Earlier this year, Schrader, a native of San Francisco, received his 50-year pin from the San Rafael Masonic Lodge.

Fifty years ago he and his San Francisco-born fiance were married in their hometown. Five years later they moved to San Anselmo and have lived there ever since.

Schrader is co-owner of the Schrader Iron Works in San Francisco, which was established by his German-born father, Otto. He has never officially retired but keeps a watchful eye on the business.

They had two children, Robert and Wilma. Robert died when he was a young father of one child. Wilma married Elmer Hubbell of San Anselmo and had four children.

Mr. and Mrs. Schrader's daughter, five grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, their brothers and sisters and nieces and nephews are expected to the party tonight.

Teachers Fail To Back Privileges

A majority of 38 Redwood High School teachers answering a student's poll agreed that seniors should not be allowed special privileges.

Only 43 per cent of the responses to the questionnaire indicated support for the privileges seniors now enjoy.

Eighteen teachers said they believed members of this year's senior class abused their right to use the senior privilege card which has been issued to seniors for several years. Fourteen teachers said they saw no abuse. Four apparently had no comment.

Most often mentioned abuse was use of the senior quad as a social gathering place and for sunbathing rather than for study.

2 Bound Over In Burglary

Peter A. Wadlewski, 20, and Robert G. Lezzini, 19, were bound over to Marin Superior Court Thursday for trial for Easter weekend burglary of the apartment of Candace Bruchler and Lynda Jordan at 770 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, San Anselmo.

Lezzini, however, failed to appear for the preliminary hearing and Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court ordered his $1,100 bail forfeited and issued a bench warrant for his arrest.

New bail was set at $2,500.

Wadlewski, of 42 Tamalpais Avenue, Fairfax, and Lezzini, of 3 Deer Park Lane, Fairfax, allegedly took clothing, records, a record player, Jewelry and a guitar—total value of $700—from the apartment after an acquaintance found an apartment key.

Session Set On Second Crossing

Marin County supervisors Monday will meet with Marin's representatives on the Golden Gate Bridge District Board to discuss legislation permitting the district to study a second crossing.

Bridge directors are slated to meet with the board at 4:30 p.m.

The supervisors will start their meeting at 2 p.m. There will be a recess for supper, and the meeting will reconvene at 8 p.m.

First item on the evening agenda is consideration of entering as a friend of the court in a brief seeking to set aside Proposition 14, the legislation approved by state voters last November. The Marin County Human Rights Commission has asked that the county join the attempt to have the housing law set aside as unconstitutional.

The Kentfield General Plan will again be before the board in the afternoon session. Approval is expected this time.

Supervisors are also to discuss a joint powers agreement with the Marin Hospital District Board on construction and operation of a county mental health clinic.

Jury Is Deadlocked In Klan Murder Trial

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (UPI)—Two former members of the pro-segregationist (white) Citizens Council held out for acquittal yesterday, causing the trial of a Ku Klux Klansman for the slaying of Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo, a white civil rights worker, to end in a hung jury.

One of the two, Billy R. Cheatham, said, "I would have stuck with an acquittal till hell froze over."

Cheatham, a bookkeeper from Fort Deposit, Ala., said he felt from the very beginning that an FBI informant, the prosecution's chief witness, was lying when he saw Klansman Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 21, kill Mrs. Liuzzo.

County solicitor Charleton Purdue said last night he and circuit solicitor Arthur S. Gamble Jr. would decide whether to try Wilkins again.

"As of now, we plan to have another trial," Purdue said.

Mrs. Liuzzo, 38-year-old mother of five from Detroit, and the wife of a Teamster official, was shot to death as she drove an automobile along U.S. Highway 80 the night of March 25. She was helping operate a shuttle service for Negroes who had participated in the controversial Selma to Montgomery civil rights march led by Dr. Martin Luther King.

Cheatham and Dan Lee, who said he also is a former member of the council, both voted for acquittal and their votes resulted in the 10-2 deadlock reported after the jury had deliberated for more than nine hours in the case.

Wilkins, 21, of Fairfield, Ala., and two other Klansmen were linked to the slaying in testimony by FBI informant Gary Thomas Rowe, 34, who had infiltrated the Klan for five years in the Birmingham area.

Street Lights Being Studied

Directors of the Sleepy Hollow Homes Assn. Thursday night agreed to look into having street lights put upon Butterfield Road, and to warn residents not to drive the wrong way on Martling Drive.

The group has received several complaints about wrong-way drivers.

Also discussed were problems caused by Sleepy Hollow residents who park boats and trailers on the street. Directors decided to learn whether such parking is regulated by any county ordinance.

Vandals Strew Soap Around

Vandals Thursday broke into two new houses at 15 and 19 Peacock Drive, San Rafael, took containers of soap and rinse liquids from automatic dishwashers and strewed their contents over walls and carpets.

Foreman Ralph W. Conner of Minnerly Construction Co., 2 San Marino Court, San Rafael, told police the mischief did $100 damage.

Air Joy Ride Lands Flyer In Trouble

HONOLULU (UPI)—A former fighter pilot who buzzed the plush Waikiki Beach otel strip and clipped off the top of a radio tower said today he "just had an urge to fly again."

James A. Ashdown, 34, an advertising salesman, yesterday took off in a World War II B25 bomber from Honolulu Airport and flew it perilously low over the beach area for about half an hour.

Phone calls jammed the Honolulu police switchboard from irate Waikiki residents complaining of the erratic flight. One resident of a high - rise building said he could look down on the plane from his bedroom window as it skimmed along the beach.

Ashdown suffered minor facial cuts when the plane clipped 20 feet off the top of a radio tower, shattering the craft's turret bubble and ripping a 33-foot gash in the fuselage.

Federal Aviation Agency authorities said the plane also narrowly missed the control tower at the Honolulu Airport.

Police finally caught Ashdown as he taxied up and down the airport runways after a bouncy landing.

He was released on $500 bond and scheduled to appear in district court Monday morning.

Purse Stolen With $1,000 Pearls Inside

A purse which held a $1,000 string of pearls was stolen last night from a car parked in front of 90 Lagoon Road, Belvedere.

The owners, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Rose of Berkeley, told Belvedere police they were inside the home visiting Melville Marx Jr. from 7 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. They didn't realize the purse was missing they said, until they had driven back to Berkeley.

Belvedere Police officer E. R. Fontaine found the purse discarded in a clump of bushes about 200 feet up the street from where the car had been parked. The necklace however was missing.

Fontaine said he thought the purse was taken by youngsters prowling the neighborhood, because another car on the street was entered.

That car, owned by George K. Whitney of 84 Lagoon Road, had a canvass tarp slashed open. Maps and other papers were taken from it and scattered in the street, Fontaine said.

Mrs. Rose's necklace was said to have 30 pearls in graduated size, bound by a gold rose clasp with a ruby in its center.

Dancer Arrested

Gail O'Leary, 22, of 1221 Vallejo Avenue, Novato, arrested early yesterday while doing a "topless" dance in Daly City, was not talking today—but her mother was.

Mrs. W. P. Richardson expressed mixed emotions about her daughter's job as a "swim" dancer at Daly City's Copperwood Lodge.

"Well, after all," she said, "she's over 21 and married. If she wants to do this sort of thing it's her business. A lot of the girls seem to be doing it and getting paid and I guess it's their business."

Miss O'Leary was stopped and arrested in the middle of her act by police raiders. Booked on a charge of lewd and disorderly conduct, she was released on $550 bail.

Miss O'Leary is to appear in Northern District Municipal Court in San Mateo on May 17.

Fire District Budget Goes Up By $8,000

Preliminary budget for 1965-66 of $86,500, more than $8,000 higher than this year's budget, was approved last night by the Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District Board, according to Carl O. Heynen Jr., fire chief.

Heynen said the expected normal growth of the assessed valuation in the area would probably allow for a cut in the present tax rate of 70 cents per $100 valuation and still meet the budget.

Largest allocation in the tentative budget is $62,500 for salaries of the district's eight employees. Allocations of $14,500 for maintenance and $6,500 for capital outlays are included, Heynen said.

Next meeting of the board will be at 8 p.m. June 4 at the firehouse.

Suspect Returned From Tallahassee

Larkspur Police Chief Howard Clark flew home from a brief trip to Tallahassee, Fla, last night, bringing with him Warren B. Beard, 27, who was wanted in Sausalito, San Rafael, Larkspur and Corte Madera on suspicion of writing bad checks.

Chief Clark said Beard, who is suspected of having written over $1000 in bum checks in Marin last Summer, had been arrested in Florida on another bad check charge.

Beard was booked in county jail last night on a charge of writing bad checks. He is wanted in Sacramento on a similar charge, Chief Clark said.

Redwood Log Dedication Set At Span

A group of Del Norte County businessmen will dedicate a 20-ton redwood log at the Vista Point lookout at the north end of the Golden Gate Bridge at 10 a.m. Monday.

The dedication is part of a visit by the group to San Francisco to inform the public that the highways to the Redwood Empire are open and the area ready for the tourist season, after last winter's floods.

"The public image of damage to the area has given cause for concern to the end that the travelling public may feel flood damage has made the area inaccessible," the Redwood Empire Assn. reported.

"Today all highways are open and travel from San Francisco to Grants Pass, Ore., via the Redwood Highway can be made with only minor delays."

State Sen. Randolph Collier (D-Yreka) will accompany the group, which will convoy "Sheherazade," Del Norte County's 40-foot long and 13-foot high mobilized camel across the Golden Gate Bridge and into San Francisco.

Wounded Youth Formally Charged

Timothy Vincent Ferranti, 19-year-old youth shot by a San Rafael police sergeant Monday while attempting to flee, was formally charged yesterday with felony auto theft.

Ferranti was in fair condition today in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital.

Bail was reduced by Judge Leonard A. Thomas of Marin Municipal Court from $3,850 to $1,100. Request of Jerome Durham, public defender, that the Redwood City youth be released on his own recognizance was denied.

Sheriff's officers said they will continue a constant watch on the youth at the hospital.

JUNTA

Navy man killed in a hand grenade accident and another killed in a fall off a ship. The wounded toll stood at 71, 23 paratroopers and 48 Marines.

Other members of the new junta are Julio Pospigo, 61, a lawyer, book publisher and mayor of Santo Domingo in the regime of exiled ex-President Juan Bosch; Carlos Grisolia Poloney, 51, a provincial governor under the deposed government of Donald Reid Cabral; Alejandro Zeller Coco, 41, an engineer; and Col. Pedro B. Benoit, air force officer and holdover from the three-man junta which resigned yesterday.

Imbert, 44, did not explain why the military junta resigned, but said the new group was appointed and sworn in by Supreme Court President Julio Acuello.

Called "Tony," Imbert is one of two survivors of the band of plotters who ambushed and killed Generalissimo Rafael Leonidas Trujillo in 1961. His stature as a result of the Trujillo assassination is regarded as significant in the loyalist move to broaden the area for a possible agreement with the rebels.

Imbert, a longtime friend of Bosch, was instrumental in Bosch's overthrow. He ascribed to the complaint of Gen. Elias Wessin y Wessin and other military leaders that Bosch had been too soft on Communists.

Pospigo's present political alliances are unknown, but some Dominican loyalists attending the swearing-in ceremony in the heavily guarded National Congress building said they considered Pospigo a militant in Bosch's Dominican Revolutionary party. This would add to the loyalists' search for broad support.

The leader of the party, Jose Francisco Pena Gomez, bitterly denounced the new regime, however. In a broadcast over rebel radio Santo Domingo, Pensa said General Imbert should not risk his prestige in a "shady deal" against the interests of the Dominican people. He said that no government could exist without the support of the people.

Finish Waistlines Without Belts For The Hot Summer

By EUNICE FARMER

Belts are hot in the summer and tend to wrinkle your fabrics.. Here are two easy and attractive ways to finish the waistline for those of us who haven't given in to the one-piece dress.

1. The easiest finish is to baste your waistline seams up toward the bodice. Machine stitch about ⅜ inch above the waistline seam, catching in the seams. (a) This gives a finished look and actually looks almost like a cording at the waist.

2. Cut a bias strip of your fabric 2 inches wide and piece the bias if necessary for your length. Fold in half and baste the cut edges together. Pin this folded strip of gais on the bodice of your dress, the cut edges will touch the waistline seam.

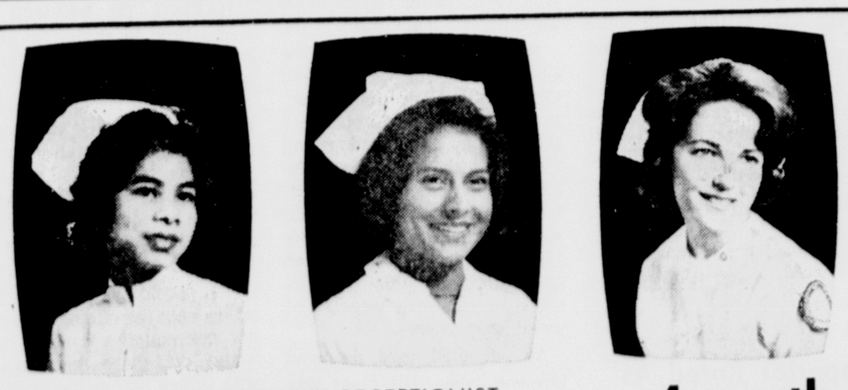

Machine stitch folded bias strip to your dress taking a ¼ inch seam on the fold. (B) Baste folded edge down, but do not press hard. The softer, rolled edge is more expensive looking! Loosely slip stitch the folded edge to your dress by rolling the edge back slightly. This will conceal the stitches and the fold will not look like it's been sewed down. If you have a zipper at the center back, you may finish with a little bow.

Mrs. N. C. Ball, Watertown, N.Y., is this week's winner of a Tailor Trix pressing board.

When making school clothes for my small daughter, I bind the edge of last year's petticoat with leftover fabric from the dress. If the petticoat is too short, I merely add a ruffle instead of the fabric binding. It may be worn as a slip or cut off at the waist and attached at the waist seam of the dress as many of the more expensive little girls' dresses are.

For the loveliest sweater of the year, begin with a white jacket-type sweater. If you're not a knitter, you may begin with a purchased sweater. Take four long strands of mohair yarn in three of your favorite colors and braid them together very loosely. (They will be about 1½ inches wide when braided.) Tack this braid lightly to the outer edges and neck of your sweater.

Courthouse Square Must Be Given Careful Thought

WHAT WILL BECOME OF the Courthouse Square in San Rafael when the last of county offices there are finally moved out to the Frank Lloyd Wright civic center?

The force of economic circumstances unquestionably will be in the direction of selling it to the highest bidder for business development.

The county government probably will have pressing need for the immediate cash that would come from sale to the high bidder.

The county will need the cash to help pay for civic center developments.

THERE IS STRONG REASON to believe, however, that this would NOT be in the best ultimate interest of San Rafael and Marin County.

Downtown San Rafael—if it is to keep up with the times — has other needs more pressing than another business block of wall-to-wall concrete buildings.

San Rafael's downtown esthetics need attention. San Rafael's downtown parking situation needs further attention. San Rafael's downtown traffic congestion needs relief.

Courthouse square could be utilized to help rectify two of these three deficiencies.

With imaginative design, the park-like perimeter of the square could be preserved and enhanced, especially on the corner of Fifth and Court where it was obliterated by the last building addition.

If it proves too expensive to develop underground parking as was done at Union Square and elsewhere in San Francisco, sufficient imagination should be able to devise an attractive drive-in, park yourself structure set well back from all four surrounding streets.

San Rafael's present downtown double deck parking structures leave much to be desired esthetically.

Their ugliness was not and is not totally necessary. With a bit of thought and imagination it is quite possible to make attractive structures of them. Other communities have shown the way.

A multi-story parking structure in Courthouse Square would NOT necessarily have to be ugly. It could be an attractive public structure worthy of community pride—as is the civic center.

His imaginative model of the proposal was widely displayed and praised.

Not long ago he quietly got out the model, dusted it off and began to give thought to expanding his plan to include the Courthouse square for redevelopment when county offices finally depart.

He hasn't finished his work on the new phase yet and of course will make no public presentations until he has tied up the loose ends to his satisfaction.

His is the kind of thought and work that are needed if San Rafael is to avoid losing the square to one more block of wall-to-wall business buildings.

NOW IS THE TIME for the county, the city, the chamber of commerce and other interested groups and individuals to turn on their think machines.

San Rafael and Marin need something better than simple sale of the courthouse square to the highest bidder for commercial buildings.

San Rafael has not yet suffered the horrible downtown business decline which has blighted many southern California cities when new outlying shopping centers like Northgate and Corte Madera drained off the downtown area's economic life-blood.

If San Rafael is to continue to escape that fate, some imaginative use of Courthouse square will be needed—along with other strong, quick, decisive measures.

Esthetics, parking, traffic. These three things can make or break downtown San Rafael's future. It is as simple as that.

WHAT IS A WIFE WORTH?

The average housewife puts in a 99-hour week and is worth $159 to her family, according to a survey conducted by the Chase Manhattan Bank.

Furthermore, it estimated that the 30 million homemakers of the country, while performing an irreplaceable service, make a yearly contribution to the economy of nearly 250 million dollars.

The estimate was based on wages varying from $1.50 to $2.50 an hour in such duties as: nursemaid . . . dietician . . . food buyer . . . cook . . . dishwasher . . . housekeeper . . . laundress . . . seamstress . . . practical nurse . . . maintenance man . . . gardener . . . and chauffeur.

Far more than any statistical chart can indicate, the millions of homemakers throughout the country and over the world constitute one of mankind's greatest hopes for peace and happiness.

Since God has ordained that the woman is the heart of the family, husbands and children should acknowledge this fact by appreciation, cooperation and, in particular, by sincere love and affection.

"Husbands, love your wives."
(Ephesians 5:25)

Awaken me, O Jesus, to the irreplaceable value that homemakers contribute to the good of the world.

Civic Center's Need Answered In Show

Editor, Independent-Journal:

With regard to Mr. Lyttle's column titled, "The Civic Center Needs A Horse," in Monday's Independent-Journal — the Civic Center has a horse!

Robert Howard's wonderful mobile sculpture has been galloping in the wind on the second floor terrace ever since the sculpture exhibition opened last Saturday.

You might say the Civic Center has a whole zoo this month, I saw bears, birds, bulls and lions, along with a few other strange animals. It's a wonderful thing to have in Marin County.

Bay Fill Bill Explanation

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your recent editorial on Senate Bill 309, of which I am the author, has been brought to my attention. This bill would create a San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission to prepare a plan for future use of the Bay and its shoreline, and to regulate filling of the Bay while the plan is being prepared.

As your editorial indicates, the use of the Bay for commercial shipping is of great importance to the economy of the Bay Area. This fact is recognized by the State of California, and by the Congress of the United States, which has directed the Army Corps of Engineers to dredge the shipping channels in the Bay and to keep them open for navigation. The State of California has no legal right to interfere with this Congressional directive.

Despite this, your editorial argues that "proper safeguards" should be written into the bill to protect commercial shipping. This is precisely what all the opponents of the bill are allegedly seeking — "proper safeguards" to protect their own special interests. This is the argument advanced by those who want to fill the Bay for factories, for housing developments, for airports, for harbor facilities, for freeways, for recreational developments, and for garbage dumps. Each advocate of filling proclaims, in effect, that he is willing to have all other fill projects regulated, BUT his is so important that it should be permitted to go ahead uncontrolled.

It is precisely this indiscriminate filling of the Bay that has created the problem Senate Bill 309 is designed to overcome. This bill does not call for a blanket halt or moratorium to all filling. It does say that any person or any governmental agency wishing to fill the Bay for any purpose must first obtain a permit from the Bay Conservation and Development Commission pending the time that a plan is developed for the 275 miles of shoreline of the Bay. It is my strong belief that this procedure is fair to everyone. It is my further belief that no individual or government agency should be given an automatic exemption from this requirement.

Your editorial also indicates that Senate Bill 309 might cause undue hardship by requiring port authorities to obtain permits for minor repairs to pilings or piers. The bill specifically provides that minor work of this sort would be permitted without hindrance. The San Francisco Port Authority is in support of the bill.

San Francisco Bay will never be any larger than it is now. It has shrunk over one-third since first discovered by The Sir Francis Drake Expedition. The pressures for filling will increase steadily as the population in the Bay Area increases. Surely the public interest requires that we no longer permit indiscriminate filling of this great natural asset. Senate Bill 309 is designed to control filling of the Bay and it is my hope that, in the interest of present as well as future generations of Marin County residents, you will wholeheartedly support passage of this bill by the Legislature.

Special Pleading For Marincello

Editor, Independent-Journal:

With regard to your editorial of April 24 re: Marincello, I find that the expression most appropriate to characterize this effusion is "special pleading." According to my dictionary, this expression means "a presentation that submits one point or phase of an issue as if it submitted fairly and fully the entire issue."

To be sure, extravagant and even ridiculous points have been made, both in support of, and in opposition to, the Marincello project.

Your editorial assumes, however, that the only extravagant and ridiculous charges and assertations have come from the opponents of this venture.

The truth is that both some of the proponents and some of the opponents of Marincello have indulged in arguments that have no reasonable basis whatever. Upon request, I shall be glad to supply a bill of particulars.

Reporter Rated As Potential Ernie Pyle

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I hope you all at the I-J realize what a prize you have in your Southern Marin reporter, Bruce Coleman. I have admired his writing for a long time for its wry humor and charming style, especially in his weekly reporter's column. And I was aware that he is accurate and faithful in his write-ups of the various civic and political affairs such as city council meetings and the like.

But I was really filled with admiration for the way he wrote the feature story about my United Nations experiences recently. He distilled the sense of my current attitude on the subject perfectly, as well as the highlights of an event over 20 years ago. This ability is a rare talent in a newsman — all too often journalism records only the bare facts and lets the subtler nuances go.

I think you'd have an Ernie Pyle if you'd give him his head.

Johnson Completely Reverses Strategy To Avoid Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP)—Probably no man in the White House ever wished more for public approval, or was more conscious of critics, than President Lyndon B. Johnson.

It does much to explain his switch in tactics. After ordering Marines into South Viet Nam and bombing of North Viet Nam, he had to be prodded into talking. Since sending troops into the Dominican Republic he hasn't stopped talking.

WHEN BOMBING BEGAN last February, the White House simply issued a statement that it was in retaliation for a guerrilla attack on a U.S. air base in South Viet Nam.

As the weeks passed and the bombings continued and the Marines went in Johnson was pelted with criticism at home and abroad, although he got much approval. But he played so mum pressures piled on him to start explaining.

He finally did no April 7. But the criticism continued. Then he did the exact opposite in public relations last week when he decided to send troops into the Dominican Republic, splintered into chaos by revolution.

He went on the air to explain April 28, April 30, and again May 2. All these broadcasts were at night, the last one Sunday night. It meant breaking into programs. On the last broadcast, 30 minutes long, not all networks carried him.

But the way he built up to main emphasis on why he used troops in Asia and Latin America was almost identical in both cases.

IN VIET NAM he first put the emphasis on saving the South Vietnamese people from communism but finally put it on American determination to stop the spread of communism.

In the Dominican Republic he first put the emphasis on saving American lives there and later said the goal was stopping the spread of communism in the Americas.

But, remembering the criticism he got for not talking sooner on Viet Nam, Johnson's time-table of public statements on the Dominican Republic can hardly be interpreted as anything but an anxious search for approval.

First, three broadcasts — April 28 and 30 and May 2—and on the last day an off-the-record walk around the White House with reporters, explaining his problems.

A 30-minute broadcast May 2 and on May 3 an unexpected appearance before a labor conference to defend his actions in Latin America. But Tuesday, May 4, was truly a busy talking day.

He sent a message to Congress, asking it to vote $700 million for the Viet Nam fighting, but first he brought squads of senators and representatives for a briefing on what he was going to repeat in the message anyway.

HE LEFT NO DOUBT here that what he wanted, more than the money, was approval. He explained he could get the money from other funds already approved by Congress. He explained his motive.

Nothing, he said, could do more to show national unity—which means support for him—than an "overwhelming vote" for what he asked.

"To deny and delay this," he went on, "means to deny and delay the fullest support of the American people and the American Congress to those brave men who are risking their lives for freedom in Viet Nam."

He said all those voting for his request would be telling the world Congress and the President stood united in frustrating communism.

While the House approved the money Wednesday, and the Senate will quickly, several senators expressed misgivings about having their votes interpreted as blanket approval for waging undeclared war anywhere.

After his Tuesday session with the members of Congress Johnson led reporters on an hour-long trek around the White House again, talking about Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic and his responsibilities, and defending his actions against criticism.

IT WAS an extraordinary week, for a President, an extraordinary performance.

BARKER ON CHINA

Mao's Regime Gives Labor New Dignity

By GEORGE BARKER

EVERYONE WHO IS physically fit in Red China must spend some time doing manual labor in the fields, in a factory or on a construction site. From an American point of view this seems like a pretty terrible thing to do. We are a people who resist being forced to do anything we don't want to do.

But let us look at it from the Chinese point of view. In old China, as in Hong Kong today, there were two main classes—the wealthy, educated ruling class and the poor semi-educated people, such as peasants, factory workers, craftsmen and common laborers. Between these two layers was sandwiched a thin middle-class, composed largely of small shopkeepers.

An educated man despised physical labor. His class was raised and pampered by amahs (maid servants) who spoiled him and babied him and did everything to make herself indispensible to him in order to keep her job. She quite literally did everything for him but blow his nose. The educated boy's life was no snap however. He grew up in a world of books, studying, studying, studying — with emphasis on the Chinese classics. Competition in school was quite stiff. How well he did would determine his future station. When he wasn't at school, he was still immersed in books. And when he didn't do very well in a subject, his parents hired special tutors to help him.

HAVING TO DEVOTE so much time to study, he grew up with little manual dexterity and mechanical aptitude or, even physical strength. Violent sports went against the grain. A daily regime of stylized, nonstrenuous physical exercise, called Chinese shadow-boxing was the extent of physical education. (It can still be seen in the parks of Hong Kong.)

How could such a society, where only the effete, intellectual rich had the learning, but would not dirty their hands with things like motors, generators or electrical equipment, and had little understanding of physical labor, be expected to pull itself into the 20th century? Obviously, it could not without a drastic overhaul of the social system.

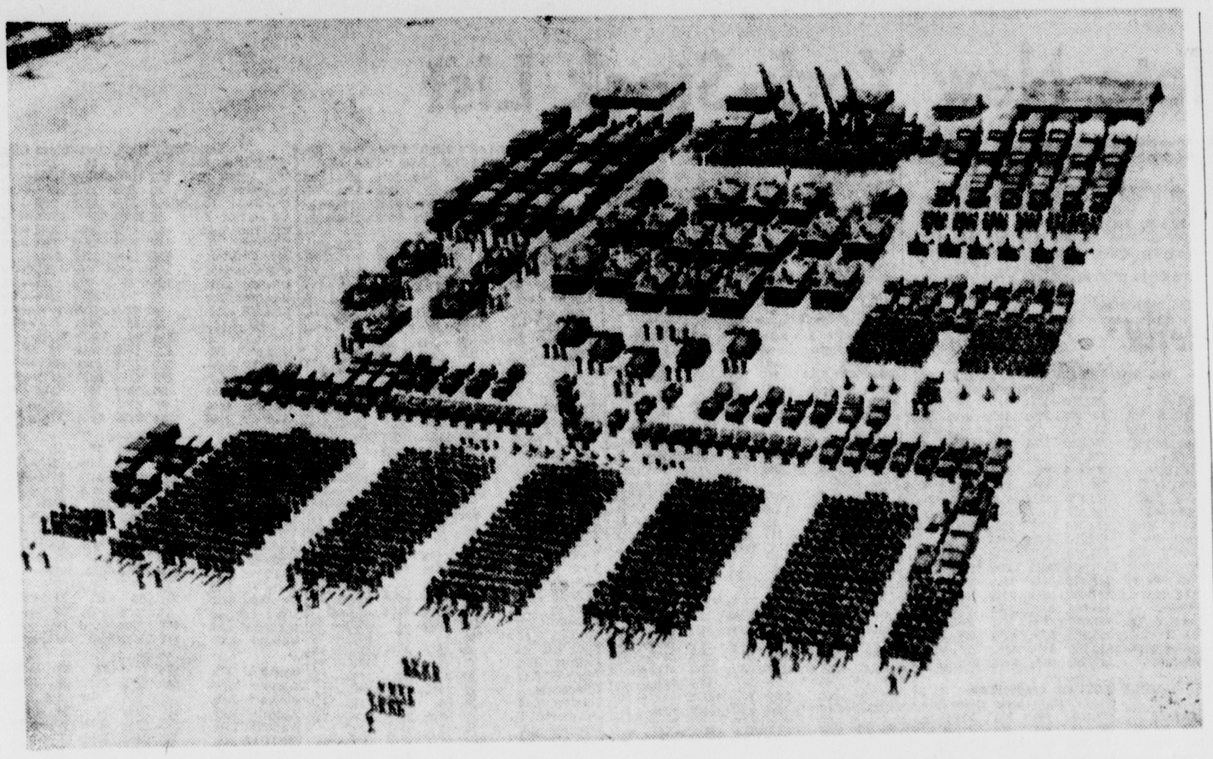

This overhaul was provided by the communist revolution, but old ways die hard and it developed that even a peasant who had been educated by the Mao regime tended to take on the traditional privileges of the old elite. To avoid a rebirth of a new class of effete, bookish elite and to try to make certain that people in all walks of life, particularly the Party cadres, have a healthy respect for physical labor, the Reds have put all their propaganda machinery and forces of subtle coercion to work in a campaign to, "Learn from the peasants and the workers."

IN THEIR SOUPED-UP zeal the Chinese may look a bit ridiculous as seen from our vantage point. However, though they exploit labor terribly, the Reds have given it a semblance of dignity which was lacking before.

The Country Parson

"We used to feel sorry for folks who had nothing—that was before so many had less."

Marine Landing Team Self-Contained

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marine battalion landing teams, like the one that went ashore in the Dominican Republic, are much like small self-contained armies. They have their own tanks and artillery, motor transport, medical detachment, engineers, supply and other elements.

They have 30 days of supplies available aboard the Navy amphibious ships that are their homes while afloat with the fleet.

Among other things, these supplies include from 700 to 1,000 tons of ammunition for everything from pistols to howitzers.

A battalion landing team is built around a 1,200-man infantry battalion.

It can be strengthened to as many as 2,000 men, depending on the different kinds of units attached to it, and this in turn depends on the mission, the terrain and the likely enemy.

The battalion involved in the Dominican Republic was part of an amphibious group including a helicopter carrier, three transports and two landing ships carrying heavy gear.

It is standard practice to have such a unit afloat at all times in the Carribbean, the Mediterranean, and with the 7th Fleet in the Far East. Sometimes, during prolonged crises such as the one in South Viet Nam, more than one battalion landing team may be kept afloat near a troubled zone.

The Marin infantrymen are carried ashore by helicopter, by landing craft or by a combination of both.

State Working To Change Re-mapping Rule In Nation

By ANN H. PEARSON

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—In California, when they don't like something, they do something about it.

And when they do something, they do it in a big way.

When the United States Supreme Court handed down its "one man, one vote" ruling for both houses of a state legislature, a lot of Californians didn't like it.

They decided the federal Constitution should be changed. So:

The State Senate dispatched teams of "traveling salesmen" lawmakers to sell the message from Dixie to Hawaii.

Business and farming interests organized into a statewide "citizens committee for balanced legislative representation" to press nationally for a federal constitutional amendment.

To pay for the fight, they began building a war chest estimated at between $100,000 and $200,000.

And they retained the nationally known and successful San Francisco public relations firm of Whitaker and Baxter Campaigns, Inc., to help.

The upshot is that California —under court order to remap its own Senate by July 1—has become a headquarters for the amendment effort. And Californians, can take much of the credit for stimulating a national drive that has moved the once-longshot amendment within striking distance of congressional approval.

"So many of the states just sat there and said you can't do anything about it," said State Sen. Thomas M. Rees, D-Los Angeles.

"Our main job has been to make contact with other people and tell them someone cares. When they found out we cared, they moved."

The conviction motivating the Californians is stated fairly simply: within bounds, a state has the right to constitute its own legislature to meet its own needs.

Much of the California drive has been behind the scenes. It has focused on two points: pressure on the U.S. senators and congressmen who must approve the constitutional amendment by a two-thirds vote of each house, and pressure on state legislatures to adopt resolutions asking Congress for the amendment.

The main methods have been travel — to the nation's capital and the states — and telephone calls to federal and state lawmakers in a position to act and to persons in a position to lobby them for action.

There must be constant coordnaition. As a headquarters, the Californians are constantly making head counts of the votes they need, keeping tabs on what has been accomplished and where attention should be directed.

At the start, the Senate was most active and personal contact was stressed.

Two state senators, attending a February conference on cotton (California grows it too) in South Carolina, left the bool weevil long enough to drop in on the legislatures of South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia.

They found surprise that people "so far away" cared.

A senator and an assemblyman visited six New England legislatures.

They reported back that their visits had resulted in the introduction of resolutions in Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Maine, and support for one already introduced in Vermont. Massachusetts and Connecticut said no.

Another senator reported a good reception from Hawaiians.

Others made several trips to Washington, D.C. — to testify publicly and lobby privately for the amendment.

Late in April, the Senate GOP leaders and an assemblyman visited the "eastern establishment" to push for action in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

Senate President pro-tem Hugh Burns, a Fresno Democrat, reported "one hundred per cent support" following a trip to Texas, where a resolution has been adopted by both houses.

And Sen. George Miller Jr., returned from the nation's capital to declare on the State Senate's floor that his colleagues must intensify their efforts to recruit "spokesmen" in Congress to speak out in terms of a "constitutional crisis."

He said the real issue was whether the voters of a state should be denied the right to shape their legislative structure.

But a Senate itinerary to visit all 50 states was dropped support began growing for as a national groundswell of the amendment. Instead, telephone wires started humming.

"We are in telephone contact with key people in every state in the Union," said Rees. "Just from phone calls we have been responsible for resolutions moving through."

The citizens committee and Whitaker and Baxter have been working independently from the Senate, but in close coordination and along the same lines.

"All of us are using our own best approaches to people in other states who can take up the cudgels in their own area," said Whitaker.

This means a California lawmaker may call one in Dixie, while at the same time a California business leader may call a counterpart in another state who is in a position to approach his own legislators or congressional delegation.

Whitaker's firm twice conducted successful statewide campaigns to defeat California ballot propositions for a population-based Senate — a mandate from state voters that the Senate cites in its current fight to avoid reapportionment.

Whitaker won't tell the exact sum in the war chest. "We are confident we can raise whatever it takes to do the job," he said, "and if Congress approves the amendment, whatever is necessary to put on a comparable drive for ratification."

War Shadows As V-E Day Marked

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Twenty years ago in a red-brick school house in Rheims, France, three German generals sat at a long table and signed a document that meant the end of World War II fighting in Europe.

On the 20th anniversary of V-E Day, the memories of a war's end were accompanied this week by increasing involvement of U.S. troops again in Southeast Asia and the Caribbean.

In the Dominican Republic by week's end, about 20,000 U.S. servicemen were on duty and expected to remain so for some time.

President Johnson won approval in Congress of a $700 million military money bill to which he attached an informal vote of confidence in his policies.

The Organization of American States Thursday finally agreed 14 to 5 to the U.S. proposal for an inter-American force to back up and eventually replace the American troops in and around Santo Domingo.

In formal recognition of the V-E Day celebration, President Johnson talked to Europe via the new Early Bird television relay satellite and called for a great "Atlantic civilization." Without naming names he criticized French President de Gaulle for policies which tended to divide the Atlantic Alliances.

Around The World Around The Clock

Haneyville, Ala.—An all-male, all-white jury deliberated for more than 10 hours but declared itself hopelessly deadlocked in the civil murder trial of Ku Klux Klansman Collie Leroy Wilkins. It was expected Wilkins would be brought to trial again along with two others accused in the fatal shooting of Selma march worker Mrs. Viola Liuzzo.

Minneapolis-St. Paul—Tornadoes struck the suburbs of the famed twin cities. At least 13 dead and 400 injured were left in their wake.

London—Prime Minister Harold Wilson won a narrow 310-306 House of Commons vote on his socialist administration's white paper suggesting 90 per cent of the British steel industry be put under public ownership.

San Salvador—An earthquake near this capital city of El Salvadore claimed 100 lives and injured 300 persons.

Cincinnati—Dr. Sam Sheppard, convicted of wife-slaying in a sensational 1955 murder trial, was ordered back to prison by the U.S. Court of Appeals which reversed a lower court ruling that had freed him.

Meany Relaxes Threat On Boycott At Geneva

By MORTON A. REICHEK
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — AFL-CIO President George Meany has relented on his threat to boycott next month's International Labor Organization meeting in Geneva over what he considered U.S. coddling of Communist delegations.

Meany had warned last month that he would pull organized labor out of the United States delegation because he was dissatisfied with efforts of the State and Labor departments to prevent ILO's Communist members from turning the world group into a forum for "political propaganda."

He has now notified the Labor Department that the AFL-CIO's regular representative at the ILO, Rudy Faupl, will join the U.S. delegation at the 49th annual session of the world organization, to be held June 2-24. Five other AFL-CIO officials will serve as advisers to Faupl.

The 108-nation ILO is an agency of the United Nations. Its function is to promote the worldwide improvement of working conditions and living standards. Delegations to the ILO are made up of representatives of the government, workers, and employers in each member nation.

Specifically, Meany was angered by a U.S. government agreement to give the Communist nations additional seats in ILO committees. Soviet bloc countries failed to gain representation in a recent ILO election of members on 10 committees which take up technical questions dealing with major industries.

When ILO secretariat officials warned that omission of the Communists from the committees would disrupt the organization's operations, U.S. government representatives agreed to add seats for eight Communist bloc representatives.

The deal was made without Faupl's approval. Meany made his threat to withdraw from the ILO when he learned about the agreement.

Meany frequently takes a harder line on U.S. relations with the Soviet Union than government and industry leaders here. He argues that "worker" and "employer" representatives to the ILO from Soviet bloc nations are simply frontmen for their governments, and have turned the ILO into a farce.

On Friday, Meany met with President Lyndon B. Johnson to discuss the administration's legislative program. Government sources assume the president persuaded Meany to back down on the ILO issue. Meanys letter to the Labor Department, announcing the decision to send an AFL-CIO representative to the ILO, came right after the White House meeting.

Earlier, Meany had conferred on the matter with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz. Both have reportedly assured Meany their departments will consult more fuliy with the AFL-CIO on ILO policy matters from now on.

"Meany still lives in the past," says a top-level government expert on international labor affairs. "He doesn't realize that changes are going on. Whether we like it or not, if we are to have international organizations, Soviet bloc nations will have to have the right of representation."

This is presumably the argument administration leaders made with Meany. Withdrawal of U.S. worker representation at the ILO would have wrecked U.S. effectiveness in the world labor group, administration officials contend.

Red Summit May Produce Fireworks

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

An Asian-African summit conference this summer in Algeria is likely to produce a loud anti-American chorus. But there is every chance that fireworks involving the Soviet-Chinese Communist quarrel will mean the event will do far more damage to world communism than to the United States.

The West, excluded from the conference, will look on as intensely interested spectators. But probably the Soviet Union too will be on the outside looking in. The way matters shape up now, the Russians already have lost a battle with the Chinese for representation at the meeting.

Thus, the conference may be another phase in the splintering of the world Communist movement. It could bring Moscow and Peking close to a climactic showdown.

This meeting of heads of state, called a "second bandung," is scheduled tentatively to open June 29 in Algiers with heads of state and delegations from more than 60 Asian and African nations. But the real fight will take place at the foreign ministers level a week before, when the Russians are expected to lose their battle to be represented as an Asian nation.

The conference gets its name from a meeting in Bandung, Indonesia, in April, 1955, when political leaders from 29 nations met on "problems of special interest to Asian and African peoples." There were conflicts then, too, but today's are far more meaningful.

Indonesia will battle to keep out Malaysia. A number of African nations will try to exclude the Leopoldville Congo. There will be conflicts involving India and China, India and Pakistan, Pakistan and Afghanistan, just to mention a few. But above all, what will be watched will be the continuing battle for influence involving pro-Soviet Communists and the pro-Chinese. There seems little doubt at this time that the Chinese will dominate.

For months the Chinese have worked diligently through diplomatic channels in Africa and Asia to undermine Soviet prestige and bolster the claim that the USSR has no right to be called an Asian nation. The Red Chinese have been trying to slam the door to Asia in the Russian face, and in Africa have contested with Moscow for influence, patently using racism and mistrust of the white man as a weapon.

The Russians will try hard to get a foot in the door. They will be supported by India and probably some of the new African states, but the Chinese have laid their groundwork well and probably will prevail.

The first Bandung Conference, at a town 75 miles southeast of Indonesia's capital of Jakarta, was initiated by the Colombo Plan nations—India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon and Indonesia—who in 1954 invited representatives of 25 other nations to a meeting.

Excluded were Israel—to avoid offense to Arab nations — Nationalist China and South Africa. These nations will be excluded again. India and Burma insisted on inviting Red China over Ceylon's objections, but the Ceylonese gave in when Japan also was invited to attend.

Other participants in the original Bandung meeting were Afghanistan, Cambodia, Egypt, Ethiopia, Gold Coast, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Libya, Nepal, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syria, Thailand, Turkey, North Viet Nam, South Viet Nam and Yemen. The conference accomplished little beyond setting up a sounding board for pro-Communist propaganda and building Red China's prestige. It was, however, the beginning of today's Asian-African bloc in the United Nations.

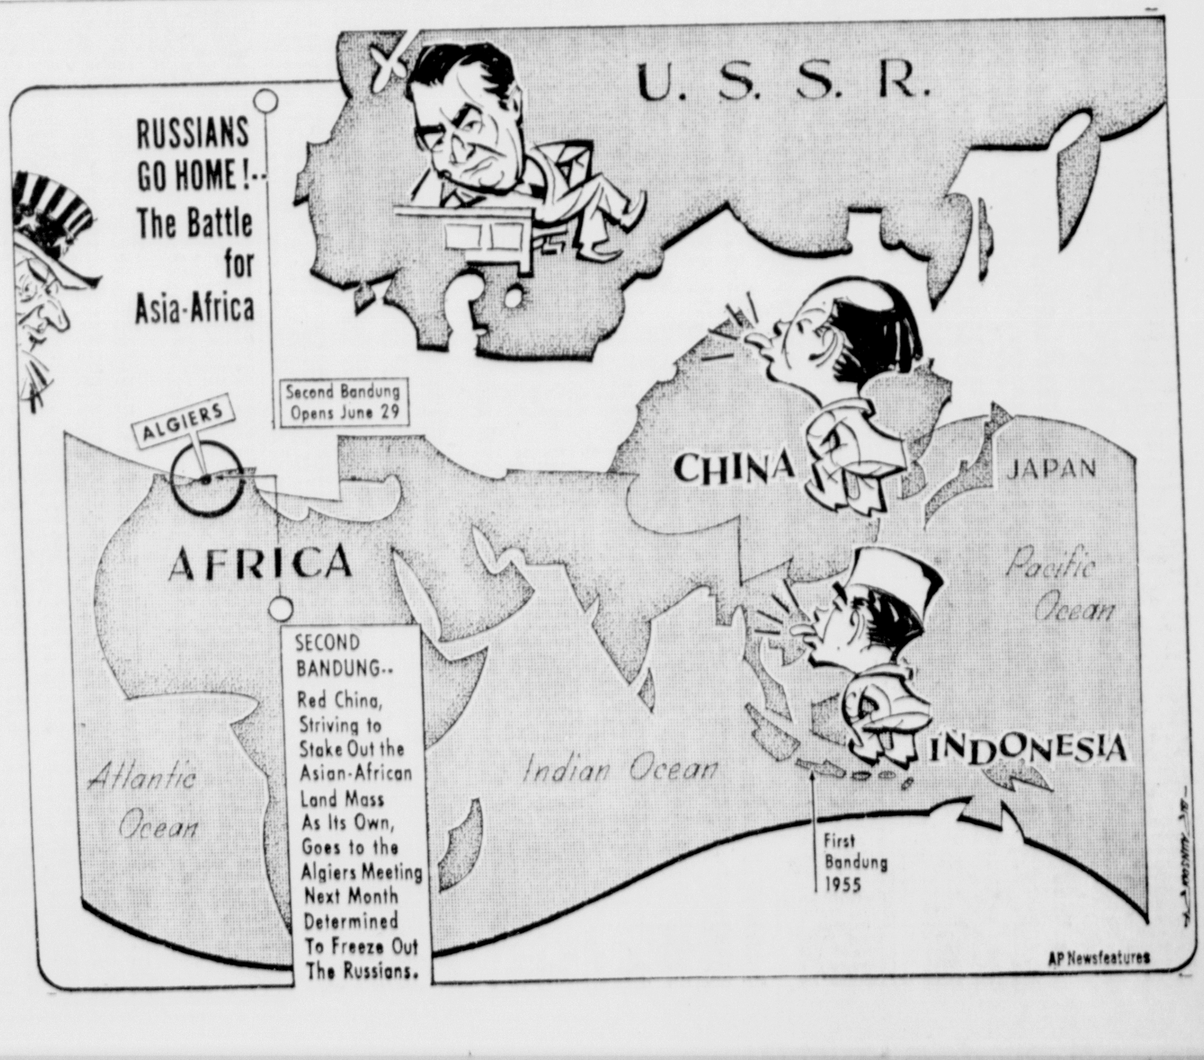

A preliminary "economic seminar" of representatives of more than 60 Asian-African nations in Algiers in March gave an indication of how the political wind was blowing. Red China clearly dominated that meeting.

The economic seminar produced a long series of draft resolutions which echoed slogans seemingly manufactured in Peking. These concerned arms and financial aid to "national liberation movements," a call for breaking relations with "colonialist countries," and advice to new nations to build themselves up by "relying on one's own resources."

This has been a defiant Peking slogan ever since the Soviet-Chinese rift led to the withdrawal of Soviet technical and economic aid from China.

The economic seminar also produced a resolution urging that the "Asian-African solidarity movement" be extended to nations of Latin America "and in particular to Cuba."

The baton at this meeting clearly was in the hands of the Chinese. Pro-western voices will be present in June, but in all probability will be drowned out. And so, apparently, will be the pro-Soviet voices.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 8, th 128th day of 1965 with 237 to follow.

The moon is in its first quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

Former president Harry Truman was born on this day in 1884.

On this day in history:

In 1879, George Selden of Rochester, N.Y., filed papers for the first automobile patent. It was granted in 1895.

In 1945, President Harry Truman announced the end of the war in Europe and this date became the official "VE" Day.

In 1958, Vice President Richard M. Nixon touring South America was stoned and spat upon by leftist students in Lima, Peru.

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey, Western District headquarters. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

An American Team Captain Is Master In Own Right

John Gerber, non-playing captain of the 1965 American team (soon to play for the world championship in Buenos Aires), played on the team that won the championship in the 1964 U.S. national tournament.

The Gerber team showed its sure grasp of bridge fundamentals in this hand at the national tournament:

Opening lead — ♣ K

The contract was five diamonds at both tables, and in both cases West won the first trick with the king of clubs and continued with the three of clubs to the ace.

THIRD CLUB

At the first table East led a third club, and South made the contract.

South ruffed the club, cashed the ace of hearts and proceeded to ruff three hearts in the dummy and discarded the other heart on dummy's ace of spades.

Since the Gerber team was North-South at this table, the team got credit for scoring a game.

KEENER DEFENSE

At the second table, where Gerber was East, the defense was keener. Gerber saw that the three of clubs meant that West had started with four of clubs.

If West had started with only K-Q-3, he would have led the queen of clubs at the second trick instead of the three of clubs.

Gerber saw, therefore, that no good could come of leading a club to the third trick.

SHIFTED TO TRUMP

Instead, Gerber shifted to a trump. Now South could ruff only two hearts in the dummy. Eventually, he had to give up a heart trick, going down one.

You don't have to be a tournament expert to know that it's better to defeat a game contract than to let your opponents make it.

If our team sticks to tried and true principles of this kind in the world championship we may bring the Bermuda Bowl back to North America late in May for the first time since 1954.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player doubles.

You hold:

♠ K 9 2
♡ Q 8 3 2
♦ 10 3
♣ A 7 4 2

What do you say?

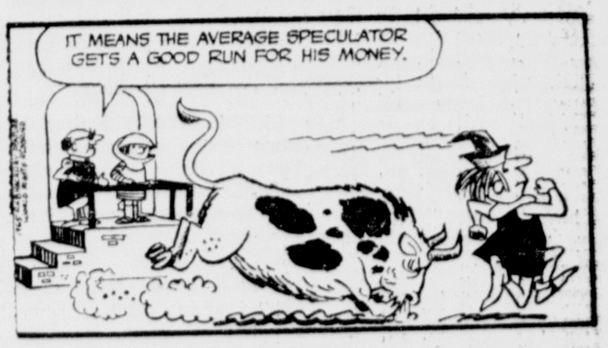

Answer: Redouble.

Your 9 points make it clear that your side has 25 points and that the doubler, with 15 points, has stepped right into the middle with a "busted" partner. Don't let him get out with a whole skin.

Mays Hot, But .237 Hitter Beats S .F.

By RON BERGMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Successfully masquerading so far this season as a .357 hitter, Dick Tracewski credits his secret weapon, known as U-1, and more aggressiveness for a .12 point jump in his batting average.

His .237 lifetime major league average remains in all official record books, so the 30-year-old veteran of nine minor league seasons he's still insulted because he's still batting eighth in the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers' lineup.

"With seven good left-handed hitters ahead of me, where else can I bat?" asks the right-handed Tracewski, who's never hit .300 in professional baseball.

Playing third for the National League leaders only because John Kennedy is hurt, Tracewski singled over the winning run last night as the Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 4-3.

Apparently, there was some question whether to walk or pitch to Tracewski with two out in the eighth, a man on second and the score tied 3-3. Pitcher Claude Osteen was next up.

After a discussion with left-handed reliever Bill Henry, San Francisco Manager Herman Franks decided to pitch to Tracewski, who hit safely over shortstop. Osteen struck out.

U-1, by the way, was the 34-ounce, thick-handled bat used for the winning hit. Tracewski started using it at the end of last season, which he finished at .247.

Before the contest, a message from the National League office was read to the rival managers. It warned against a repetition of the bean ball war last week in Los Angeles when the Dodgers took three of four from the Giants.

This would have had more significance today if Juan Marichal would have pitched. But the ace Giant right-hander has a slight groin injury that means an extra days rest and Ron Herbel opposed Don Drysdale instead.

Marichal warned he would throw at Drysdale to avenge Willie Mays, who had to evacuate the batter's box in Los Angeles to avoid being skulled.

Mays got plenty of inside pitches Friday after hitting bases-empty home runs the first two times up against Osteen, now 3-2. This gave Mays the major league home run leader.

The Dodgers came up with three runs in the fifth off starter Jack Sanford that overcame Mays' homers in the second and fourth.

John Roseboro's first hit in a perfect three-for-three night and the first off Sanford started the inning. Roseboro scored after a wild pitch and a single by Derrell Griffith that was mishandled by right fielder Jesus Alou.

Jim Lefebvre, who had walked, scored from third on a topped infield bleeder by Osteen. Griffith came across on a single by Maury Wills.

The Giants had tied it in the seventh on a double by Jim Davenport, who scored from third on a pinch-hit by Cap Peterson.

CEPEDA ON DISABLED LIST—OUT 30 DAYS

The San Francisco Giants' star first baseman—Orlando Cepeda—has been placed on the disabled list because of a stiff knee.

Cepeda's surgeon said yesterday that another knee operation would not be necessary. The 27-year-old Puerto Rican had cartilage removed from his right knee during the off season.

So far this year he had started only two games. He limped badly when he ran.

Cepeda led the Giants in 1964 with a .304 batting average. He hit 31 homers and batted in 97 runs. He was 3 for 10 this year—all singles.

The doctor prescribed more rest for Cepeda and putting him on the disabled list will keep him out of the lineup for at least 30 days.

Dick Hart Nixes J.C. Offer; Novatan In Secret Service?

Sports in shorts . . .

Redwood High School's Dick Hart has turned down the head basketball coaching job at Santa Rosa J.C., offered to him after Glen Albaugh moved on to Hayward State College. Hart's Redwood cagers romped to the Marin League title last season.

MORRIE SHEPHERD

A NOTE from ex-Tam High star Paul "Peaches" Valenti, now head cage coach at Oregon State, says he doesn't remember how his nickname ever got started and asks that we refrain from using it in future articles.

Incidentally, Paul "....." Valenti still visits his family in Larkspur each summer and while on business trips in this area.

SAN ANSELMO'S Johnny Boccabella, rated by many baseball men as a "cinch" major league star when he signed with the Chi Cubs for a $25,000 bonus in 1963, is having trouble hitting Texas League pitching with around a .250 average. The ex-Marin Catholic, Santa Clara slugging first baseman at the time he turned pro gave himself four years to make the majors or quit the game for the business world. Time is running out, but I still think Big Jawn can make the grade.

DRAKE HIGH grid star Lee Jamison has switched affections and now plans to enroll at Oregon State instead of Colorado.

PETE LIMM, lame duck grid coach at Terra Linda High, has an added incentive when he leads the North Marin All-Stars against the South Aug. 26 in the Ross Valley Kiwanis football feature. His rival coach will be Drake's Bob Franceschini and, says Pete, "I really want to beat "Fran." In three years of varsity football at Terra Linda, Drake is the only school we haven't beaten." Limm will move up to College of Marin next September.

CONGRATS TO the Ross Valley Kiwanis for picking up sponsorship of the summer grid game matching the graduating and south of Marin and also to Bob Troppmann of Redwood High for originating the idea. "I've been trying to get a game like this in Marin for 15 years," said Tropp, his dream come true.

AND WHILE we're passing out posies, a big bouquet to Willie Hector for his appointment to the coaching department at Tam High, scene of many of his athletic achievements back in the late 1950s. Willie looms as future head grid coach at Tam.

MORRIE SHEPHERD, Drake's dedicated track coach, is busier than a bird dog these days. He's in charge of the upcoming North Coast Section meets and snowed under a pile of organizational work.

ANY TRUTH to the rumor that Novato High baseball coach Harry Moore will enter secret service work? Any coach who will refuse information to the press about his pitcher's no-hit game just HAS to excel in undercover work. The deeper, the better. When quizzed for details of the recent game by an I-J reporter, Moore's reticence was exceeded only by his poor sportsmanship.

As a result, his no-hit pitcher was deprived of wide-spread recognition in the two major San Francisco papers and the county-wide I-J. I know when I was a kid (eons ago) the name in print was a big thrill. But Moore, apparently miffed at the I-J for some picayunish reason, suddenly and without warning shut off his usually reliable source of information for three major newspapers.

Most coaches strive for good relations with the press. But Novato's Harry Moore delivered a haymaker. Which is alright. But we weren't looking.

LEFTOVER NOTES from the Ernie Nevers testimonial at the Fairmont Hotel Thursday night — and wouldn't the Sabbath have been a better day for it for a "Nevers On Sunday" theme? Oh.

A large crowd from Marin was on hand to salute ol' Ernie, including a group from the Meadow Club and a table-full sponsored by Josh Billings, the big Marin builder, an old pal of Nevers and himself a former major leaguer with Detroit in the Ty Cobb era.

A few of the locals spotted throughout the crowd of 1,000 were Dr. Harry Hensler, Dr. Hal White, Herb Christ, Mr. and Mrs. Worth Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Anselmo, Dante Tognoli, Clyde Jones, Jim Fahrner, Doug Cowan, Nate Blumenfeld, Jim Lange, John J. Connolly, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chatoian.

One of the shocks—and laughs—of the evening came when color slides of Nevers' career at Stanford were shown. Some culprit seaked in a color shot of one of Mayor Shelley's pompon girls from North Beach. Must have been Cal gal 'cause she was a sturdy golden bare.

Nevers told about how his old pal, Ole Hausgrud, purchased the Duluth, Minn. pro grid franchise for $1. The franchise is now the Washington Redskins and worth millions.

Ernie also told about one of the home runs Babe Ruth hit off him the year the Babe hit 60. "He hit the ball so hard," chuckled Nevers, "the ball almost tore my head off. It kept climbing and climbing and finally landed out in the street."

Big Fight Shifted To Maine

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — The storm-tossed Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston heavyweight title fight — banned in Boston and committed to a May 25 date — has found refuge in this Maine textile center.

With about $4.5 million in ancillary rights at stake and time running out, backers of the rematch ended a court battle yesterday by pulling it out of Boston. They needed a stage quickly, whatever the size, to rescue their closed circuit television committments around the country.

Gov. John H. Reed of Maine stepped forward and within a few hours the site was shifted to this community of about 14,000.

Reed said Atty. Gen. Richard Dubord has "assured me that he anticipates no legal problems." He added that his state "is very pleased that Inter-Continental Promotions Inc. has made the decision to come to Maine for this spectacular international event."

The locale is now the Lewiston Youth Center, which seats 5,000 instead of Boston Garden with a 13,909 seating capacity.

Suffolk County Dist. Atty. Garrett Byrne had sought an injunction blocking the fight in Boston, charging Inter-Continental Promotions Inc. of Chester, Pa. was promoting the fight without a Massachusetts license.

Inter-Continental said the promoter was local veteran Sam Silverman.

The litigation was in its third day before Judge Felix Forte Friday when attorney Paul T. Smith, appearing for Inter-Continental, announced to the court that "This case now has become moot because the fight is not going to be held in Boston."

Asst. Dist. Atty. Jack Zalkind indicated the fight still could be staged in Boston "under auspices other than Inter-Continental."

Conrad later expressed doubt if any major championship bout will ever be attempted in Boston.

Bobby Unser Unhurt In Indy Spins

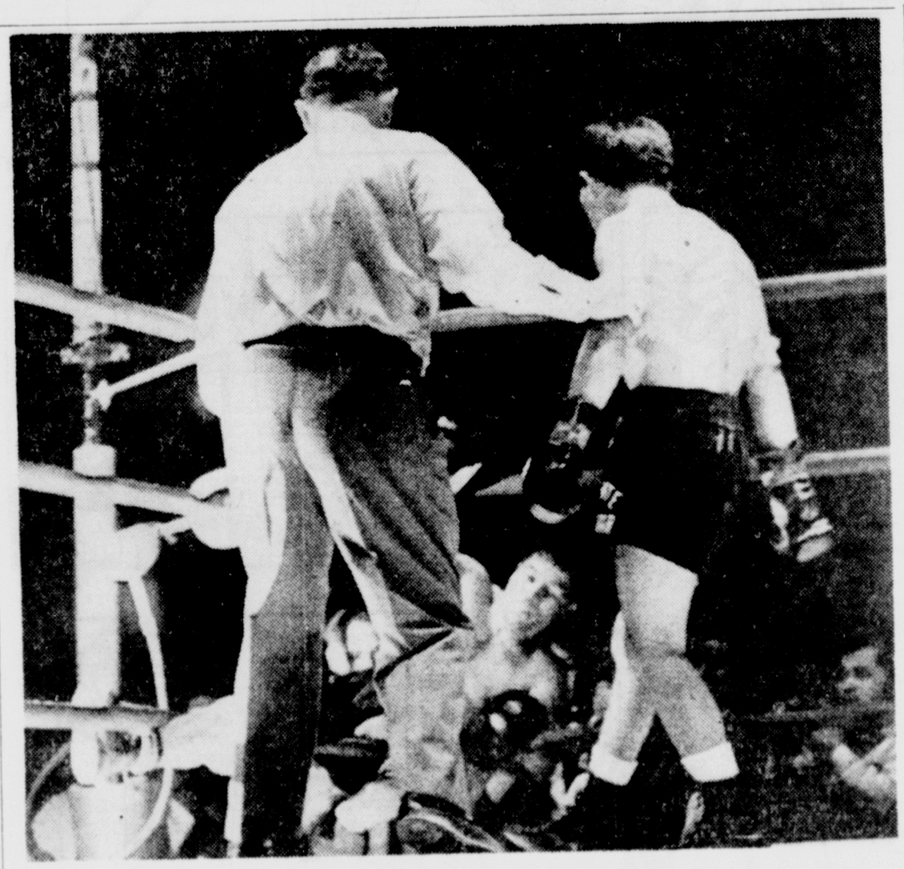

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., spun twice in his new Novi at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway yeterday, but escaped without injury and the car was not damaged.

The brakes locked up and sent Unser sliding 180 feet. Later an oil line split as he went into the first turn and gave him a 600-foot skid. He went into the grass each time and did not come close to the wall.

Jud Larson of Indianapolis lost his fuel when the rear torsion strip on his Wynn's rear-engine Offenhauser snapped and the rear end of the car dropped and dragged on the track. The fuel did not catch fire.

Jim Clark of Duns, Scotland, drove one lap at 156.5 miles per hour, the best practice time of the season, in his rear-engine Lotus-Ford. Al Miller of Roseville, Mich., turned in a lap at 154.11 m.p.h. in the Alderman Lotus-Ford.

George Snider of Fresno, Calif., completed his rookie driver's test in the Gerhardt rear-engine Offenhauser. He went out again and turned a lap at 151.2 m.p.h.

CHALLENGER FLOORED — Referee Tommy Hart moves in as featherweight champ Vincent Saldivar looks down on challenger Raul Rojas in 15th round of last night's title fight in Los Angeles Coliseum. Saldivar stopped Rojas at 2:50 of the 15th round. (UPI telephoto)

FEATHER CHAMP KEEPS TITLE IN L.A. FIGHT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'd like to fight Laguna as a featherweight or even Jofre," said a jubilant Vicente Saldivar last night after retaining his featherweight title with a 15th round knockout over Raul Rojas.

"But I want to stay a featherweight, that's my natural class," Saldivar continued as a doctor worked on a cut below the fighter's right eye.

The champion dominated Rojas of San Pedro, Calif., throughout their bout and had a decision clinched when referee Tommy Hart stopped it with just 10 seconds remaining.

After three slow rounds, Saldivar, a classy left-hander, opened up. Throwing his quick jab in Rojas' face, he kept the challenger off balance and then shot his lightning left.

Asked what he thought of Saldivar, Rojas replied: "He's a good fighter, but not a great champ. I knew I could take everything he could throw.

"Sure I'd like another fight with him. Just because you lose one you don't quit," he concluded.

The fighters differed on whether the referee was right in stopping the bout, but Saldivar was unleashing a vicious attack at the end. Rojas, although staying on his feet, was offering only token resistence and was badly hurt.

The win was the champ's 25th in 26 fights and 17th by a knockout.

In a flyweight co-feature, Tokyo's Hiroyuki Ebihara knocked out Alacran Torres of Guadalajara, Mexico, in 2:31 of the seventh round of their scheduled 12-rounder.

Jim Hall Wins Pole For Laguna Feature

Hall turned in the fastest qualifying time — 1:09.19 — during time trials around the 1.9 mile course on Fort Ord.

Hall, a millionaire, won $500 for his time.

Behind Hall came Monterey driver Don Wester in a Genie with a clocking of 1:09.54. Walt Hansgen of Houston, Tex., piloting a Lotus-Ford, was next in 1:10.52. San Francisco's Dave Ridenour in a Genie was clocked in 1:13.07.

Earlier during practice for todays six race amateur program, Lorry Grube of Oakland was injured in a spectacular accident just past turn eight.

Grube's Lotus flipped six times. He was removed from the wreckage, badly shaken. After treatment at a local hospital he was released with two broken wrists and a concussion.

His car was destroyed. It did not catch fire.

Ed Leslie of Monterey trailed Miles with a time of 1:15.02. Ernie Kesling of Los Gatos was third with a 1:15.34 time.

Murphy, Smith Lead 2-1 Win

By MAURICE WEINGER

Combining daring base running with tremendous pitching, Redwood High School moved into sole possession of first place in the sizzling Marin County Athletic League baseball race by edging Terra Linda, 2-1, last night at Albert Field, San Rafael.

The contest was a tension packed encounter between the two teams which came into the game tied with 5-1 marks, but pitcher Scott Murphy outlasted Mike Ainslie through seven tough innings to emerge the winner before a capacity house of some 1,100 fans.

While Murphy did the job from the mound as he struck out 10 Trojans and didn't allow a walk, it was the flashy base running of Russ Smith in the fourth inning that put the Giants ahead for good.

Smith opened the inning with a hard shot up the middle and moved to second when Don Roby walked. Ainslie, trying a dangerous pickoff on second, hit shortstop John Forry's glove, but the ball bounced into center field and Smith was safe on third, and Roby on second.

With Jack Baglietto protecting the plate, Ainslie took a little too much time on his second pitch and the fleet running Smith, breaking beautifully, stole home, beating the throw to catcher Pete Marcovich by three feet for the Giants' 2-1 lead.

Marin 2-Mile, 880 Records Shattered

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Two varsity records were smashed and another tied as prep cindermen wound up two days of qualifying for the Marin Athletic League track and field championships yesterday on a windy San Rafael High School field.

Top eight men in all the events will meet in the finals next Saturday on the same San Rafael oval.

Dave Barni of San Rafael surpassed the old record in the two-mile run by almost 22 full seconds when he strode to a 9:52.8 clocking, eight times around the quarter-mile track.

Mike McCauley, a Redwood distance man, cracked the barrier in the half mile with a 1:58.8 time. It erased the old MAL record of 2:00.8 set by Bill Gillingham of Tam in 1963.

Dean Lazzarini, the flash from Drake, won the 100 and 220-yard dashes with times of 9.9 and 22 flat. The speedy co-holder of the 100-yard dash record could only tie his mark on a track that was softened from races the previous day when Class B and C runners used the oval. Lazz has a 9.7 to his credit already this year.

One Class B record was broken as field events for the Bees and Class C boys were held. Steve Duff of San Rafael hurled the discus 129 feet, 5 inches to surpass the previous MAL record by 11 feet, 5 inches.

Feature of the Class C portion of the meet was a 10-1½ pole vault by freshman Paul Vanderbilt of San Rafael, good for a county record. It only took 8 feet to qualify for the finals next Saturday but the youngster wanted to crack the record, and he did.

Kerch Pitches Drake Victory

Drake High School batters did the hitting and Gary Kerch did the pitching as the Pirates bombed the Tamalpais High School Indians 13-0 yesterday in San Anselmo.

Kerch was in control all the way, allowing only two hits, striking out eight and walking two. The two hits were in the fourth inning when Tam loaded the bases but failed to score. That was Tam's only threat.

Drake scored 7 runs in the fourth frame on just two hits. But Tam gave up four walks and committed 2 errors in that inning. Drake's attack was led by catcher Al Simontacchi with three hits and two runs batted in, and Russ Damos with two singles. Kerch helped his own cause by getting the game's only extra base hit, a triple in the fourth.

game when Steve Mattos laid into a fast ball and sent it 375 feet against the right center-field fence for a long triple and scored when Ainslie wild pitched the ball over the head of both batter Baglietto and catcher Marcovich.

Murphy's only troubled inning was the third when the Trojans tied up the score. Fred Daniele copied Mattos' fete by crashing a triple, this one into left-center for 425 feet. Marcovich grounded out, but Ainslie hit a solid liner to second baseman Pat Puccinelli, who in his excitement to get the base runner, lost the ball and then had to throw the hitter out while Daniele scored the tying run.

Ainslie was in trouble in the sixth and seventh innings, but got out of the jam on some nifty fielding by his teammates. In the seventh, Baglietto walked and Bill Kilcoyne tried to bunt. The ball went to Ainslie, who threw to first baseman Dan Herrera for one and back to third baseman Craig Hill where Baglietto was running for a double play.

Redwood coach Al Endriss was quite elated with the victory. "Murphy pitched a great ball game. In my opinion, he's the best pitcher in the county," the Giant mentor exclaimed.

Dolinsek Sparks Novato '9'

John Dolinsek, highly touted first baseman for the Novato Hornets, banged a double and single and knocked in a run to help his team to a 5-1 triumph over San Rafael yesterday on the Bulldog's field.

Tim Witt got the only extra base hit for San Rafael, a triple in the sixth inning.

Novato hurler Chuck Ashworth allowed only four hits in going the distance on the mound. He help his own cause with two singles in three trips to the plate.

Five Marks Fall At Fresno Meet

By JACK STEVENSON

FRESNO (AP) — Western university track and field stars stage an assault on their record books tonight in the second phase of the West Coast Relays, having been shown the way by college division performers.

Five meet records fell in the collegiate division last night. Ben Miller of Idaho State won the 120-yard high hurdles in 14 seconds flat. John Rambo of Long Beach State high jumped 6-9, Rainer Stennius of Los Angeles State broad jumped 24-10¾ and Lee Johnson of Redlands put the shot 58-2.

The San Diego College medley relay team set the fifth meet record with a time of 9:57.7.

Johnson scored a double victory by also winning the discus with a throw of 154-9, while San Diego State also won the 880 relay in 1:26.6.

Top threats to world records tonight come in the two-mile relay with Oklahoma State the top contender and New Mexico all in contention.

This meet, in its 39th running, is sanctioned only by the United States Track and Field Federation. The AAU, which won't permit dual sanctioning, has stayed out.

FAVORED TEAM

Favored in the university team division are the Lobos of New Mexico, who could become the first non-California team winner. San Diego State won the collegiate division team crown with 38 points to 32 for Fresno State.

A crowd of 6,000 watched the opening night action at Fresno State's Ratcliffe Stadium.

Idaho State's Miller provided the big surprise. A 6-3 junior who enrolled on a football scholarship, he only recently took up hurdling (for something to do in the spring).

His performance, although not approaching world standards, did clip four-tenths of a second off the former meet record in the collegiate division.

Rambo broke by an inch the collegiate division he set last year while Stennius, a Finn attending college in California, shattered the former broadjump mark of 22-4. He outjumped that mark four times.

In the medley, a race consisting of 440 yards, 880, 1320, and a mile, the San Diego team of Bruce Hafer, Rick Herrmann, Gavin Riley and Ted Hack beat the meet record of 10:00.3 set by a team from the same school last year.

In the 880 relay, San Diego state ran a team of Eddie Logan and John Gedney, Wilbur Smith and Larry Godfrey.

Foreigners Share Lead In Colonial

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The Colonial National Invitational Golf Tournament moved into the third round today with two foreigners — Bruce Crampton of Australia and George Knudson of Canada — leading the pack with one-under-par totals of 139.

Grouped at even par 140 were Ben Hogan, shooting for his sixth victory here; Tony Lema, Julius Boros and Gene Littler, who hasn't won a tournament since 1962.

Bo Wininger, Jay Hebert and Gardner Dickinson were tied at 141, with Dave Marr, Bert Weaver, Doug Sanders, Jerry Edwards and Miller Barber next with 142s.

Crampton's two-under-par 68 over the tough Colonial layout Friday moved him to the front after Knudson faltered from his first round pace and shot a one-over-par 71.

Arnold Palmer apparently faded out of contention by shooting a 74 and dropping eight strokes behind the leaders at 147.

Presbyterians Set Novato Church Funds Campaign

National Board Representative To Lead Construction Drive

Novato's Presbyterians are not happy that their longtime church has become the young city's civic center, but they are anxious to construct a new edifice for themselves.

The Novato Presbyterian Church, the city's oldest Protestant congregation, on Tuesday will kick off a campaign to raise funds to build a new sanctuary. Rev. William D. Millen, of Caldwell, Idaho, will spend two weeks in Novato to head the fund drive, as representative of the Board of National Missions of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. He will be assisted by his wife, serving as clerical assistant and secretary.

The campaign will begin with a mass meeting in the church at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, to organize the congregation's 650 members and as many friends as possible for the activities of "Campaign Sunday," May 16.

Training sessions for canvassers will be held by Dr. Millen on Wednesday and Friday nights.

On May 16, the canvassers will have luncheon at the church, then disperse for an intensive, one-afternoon session of fund raising among the church's members. Dr. Millen will remain in Novato until after May 23 to direct the follow-up activities on the fund drive.

The Novato Presbyterian Church was organized with five members early in 1896 and in February of that year authorized construction of a church building on Sherman Avenue. With later addition of a manse, classrooms and educational building, the structure served as the church's home until 1963, when it was sold to the young City of Novato, which has turned the buildings into a City Hall and police headquarters.

In January, 1963, the first unit of the church's new home, an educational building, was completed on Wilson Avenue; the congregation has been worshiping there.

The forthcoming bond campaign is designed to finance construction of a sanctuary on the property, complete payments on the education building and pay for landscaping the property.

The campaign's director, Dr. Millen, served for 25 years as pastor of churches in Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Idaho, before entering service with the church building campaigns department of the Board of National Missions. He was educated at Monmouth College, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, University of Tulsa and Philadelphia Divinity School. He has served on the Board of Christian Education and Board of Foreign Missions for the church, and as a member of the Department of Ministerial Relations. He is a trustee of the College of Idaho.

Breakfast Will Feature Pastor To Latin Flock

The annual Mother and Daughter Breakfast of the Women's Assn. of Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur, next Saturday, will feature a talk by Rev. Roger Granados, assistant pastor of El Buen Pastor Church

The guest is responsible not only for serving the congregation of the church, but also for efforts to help a large Spanish-speaking population not affiliated directly with any church. He will be accompanied by his wife, the former Josephine Aleman, of San Bernardino.

Rev. Granados was graduated from San Francisco Theological Seminary in 1956, and until 1963 served as director of the Neighborhood House in Tracy, head of the Migrant Ministry for San Joaquin County, a member of the city's planning commission and chairman of the Tracy High School Citizens Committee for Better Education. He was named Tracy's "Young Man of the Year."

The annual Redwoods Mothers and Daughters Breakfast will be served at 9:20 a.m. in Alexander Hall at the Seminary in San Anselmo; reservations are available through the association's circle chairmen and guests may be invited.

Decorations and other features of the breakfast will carry out the theme of Rev. Granados' talk, "Life with the Latin Americans."

Bishop Dedicates Seminary Units

BERKELEY (AP)—The presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States dedicated Tuesday a new $1.2 million dormitory and refectory at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific.

The Right Rev. John Eldridge Hines of New York called upon the church, clergy and members to take "direct action in the human crimes of the day." He said the church has to be more than an observer of the cultural and social revolutions.

The dormitory, part of a $4 million development program was named for the late Bishop Edward L. Parsons, Episcopal bishop of California from 1924 to 1940.

Larkspur Circles Set Dinner-Play Outing

Members of Fellowship Groups Four and Six of Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur, will meet for smorgasbord dinner tomorrow evening at the San Francisco Theological Seminary, and then attend the seminary's Festival Theater presentation of Elizabeth Berryhill's "The Cup of Trembling."

After the last curtain, the groups' members will adjourn to a home for coffee and discussion of the play. Another of the church's groups attended the play last weekend.

Six Cadets Confirmed At San Rafael School

Six San Rafael Military Academy cadets have been confirmed by Rt. Rev. Richard A. Kirchhoffer, Assistant Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, the academy has announced.

Those confirmed were: Edwin Bruck, 27 Marinita Avenue, San Rafael; David Johnson, 107 Bret Harte Road, San Rafael; George J. Corlett, Boise, Idaho; Paul Kingren of El Cerrito; Bruce McKleroy of San Francisco; and Martin Matthews of Sacramento.

Religiously Located

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Two of the city's churches have judicious locations: Christ is located on Church Street while Christ the King Church is on Providence Road.

Christian Hootenanny Enlivens North Beach

By PAUL R. JESCHKE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The hottest folk singing group in San Francisco's bawdy entertainment center of North Beach is a swinging Salvation Army quartet.

On street corners, in a bar and in an Upper Grant Avenue coffee house — home of the Beatnik, Bohemian and topless dancer crazes — swells forth the rollicking rhythms and close-knit harmony of the Salvation singers.

The melodies and harmonies are familiar to everyone who has ever heard a jukebox or watched a folk singing act on television, but the words are slightly foreign to this Bohemian jungle:

"Christ died on Calvary, hallelujah.

"Brought redemption for you and me, hallelujah?"

"It's really not new; the Salvation Army has been substituting religious lyrics to popular music since its inception 100 years ago," said the group's supervisor, Capt. Janice Burr.

"What they've done is to eliminate the traditional Salvation Army brass and tambourine which so many people are used to associating with our street corner groups," she said.

"People really seem to accept us," said Joe Noland, who plays the bass. Doris Tobin, plays the guitar, Ron Bawden is another guitar player and Cliff Lloyd, whistles and handles many solo parts.

Joe's point was quickly proved when the proprietor of the Condor, a bar recently raided by police for featuring dancers in topless bathing suits, invited the singers inside for several numbers before the regular show started.

"Oh, Moses went out one day, "Doing the work of the Lord."

The patrons of this crowded bistro looked shocked at first, but slowly joined in with the singing and clapping.

"They've got guts, all right, real guts," said a waitress in tight-fitting leotards who nearly spilled a tray of drinks when she heard the lyrics. Before the number was over she was tapping her long legs to the steady beat of "Doing the work of the Lord."

The scene was much the same at a smoky center for cynics called "Coffee and Confusion." The "new wave" gathers regularly in this dimly lit den for beat lectures and hootenannies.

The Salvation singers scampered up to the tiny elevated stage, surrounded by abstract and pop art murals, and began singing to the tune of "Michael Rowed the Boat Ashore"; "Do You Ever Need a Friend?" The applause far exceeded that for the entertainers who preceded them.

"Customers usually think I'm putting them on when I tell them the Salvation Army is singing here tonight," said Coffee and Confusion's manager, Ivan Yulz, who himself sings "risque ditties." "But after they heard it, they really dig it."

The Salvation singers perform in the coffee house without their customary heavy tunics and military-style hats and wear, instead, the crimson red "blood and fire" jerseys of the Army. "It helps to produce an atmosphere of informality where we are most likely to be accepted," Noland said.

The group started singing together about two years ago, while in training at the Salvation Army school for officers in San Francisco. They will break up in June, when all four will be ordained ministers in the Army and go to separate posts.

All four Salvation singers expressed hope that this new look for traditional Salvation Army methods will continue. Inquiries from Army groups across the nation have been received.

"It's hard to know exactly what good we've accomplished," Capt. Burr said, "but I know the Lord approves."

Belvedere Parish School Gains National Attention

St. Stephen's Episcopal Parish in Belvedere has made day school history in two important ways according to an article published in the current issue of the national magazine "The Living Church." These are the establishment of a non-graded parish school and the legal challenge, "Does the Church Have a Right to Educate on Weekdays?" which is the title of the periodical's story.

Dr. Dorothy S. Blackmore, professor of education at Dominican College in San Rafael, and consultant to the parish day school, wrote in the article:

"Unless it has something essential to offer which the public schools cannot provide, a parish day school cannot be justified. This essential component of a child's education is the religious dimension, the witness to God's presence in every phase of life. St. Stephen's was founded on this premise, which is to be particularly emphasized in this case because St. Stephen's is surrounded by excellent, creative public schools."

In the non-graded organization, children between 4½ and 8 years of age proceed as ready, through instruction in reading, arithmetic, oral and written language skills, social studies, science, French, art, music and physical education.

It is the legal position of St. Stephen's Parish that the operation of the day school is merely one manifestation of the responsibility of the church to educate its children, a responsibility not confined to any one day of the week. The parish contends there is no conflict with the city zoning ordinance, because a use permit was issued previously for church functions. Litigation, initiated by property owners in the vicinity of the church, is still pending although the non-graded school is completing its second successful year and accepting registrations for the fall reopening.

Plaintiffs' position is that the Church does not have the right to give instruction to its children except on Sunday. The law suit has attracted national attention among churches of all denominations.

Automation Not All Bad, Minister Says

ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — Automation, despite the danger of creating unemployment problems, carries with it the promise of dignifying human life, a Chicago Theological Seminary professor told the Brethren-Friends-Mennonite consultation here.

"Surely anything which assists man in achieving the fuller dimensions of which he is capable must be in keeping with the Creator's purpose," said Dr. Victor Obenhaus. "The human machine is much too valuable to be wasted on some of the processes to which it has been applied in the past."

Graduate Pens Book On Comic Strip Faith

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — More than 80,000 copies of "The Gospel According to Peanuts" have been sold and the paperback now is in its seventh printing, according to the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

The book, first published in January by John Knox Press, explores the theological significance found in selected strips of the popular cartoon "Peanuts." It is the work of Robert L. Short, 32, a graduate student at the University of Chicago Divinity School.

Choirs Of Marin To Sing For U.N.

Marin County has been designated as an area to participate chorally in a convocation of religion for world peace marking the United Nations 20th anniversary.

The convocation will be held at 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 27, at the Cow Palace and will draw representatives from leading religions all over the world. United Nations Secretary General U Thant will be one of the speakers.

For the convocation, which is to be televised nationally and carried by means of Telstar to 100 nations, a choir of some 2,000 to 2,500 voices will be assembled.

Wilbur F. Russell of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo has been named coordinator for all choirs in the county wishing to participate.

"Anyone wishing to sing who is not a member of an organized musical group should join one," Russell said, "since singers must be affiliated with a group."

Russell requested interested choir directors in the county to contact him as soon as possible at the seminary in order to reserve music which he will have for sign-out in lots at Montgomery Chapel.

Massed researsals will be held in Marin County on Saturday evenings of May 15, June 5 and June 19 with attendance at two obligatory. Massed rehearsals will be held in San Francisco on June 25 at the Cow Palace and on June 26 at Temple Emanuel with attendance at one mandatory.

Announcement will be made soon on the places the rehearsals will be held in Marin County.

Episcopalian Synod Ends 46th Conclave

Delegates to the forty-sixth annual Synod of the Episcopal Church's Province of the Pacific wound up their sessions Thursday at San Francisco's Grace Cathedral after spending a full day on Wednesday examining the means of implementing their world-wide program of "mutual responsibility and interdependence in the Body of Christ."

Wednesday evening they heard the Anglican Bishop of Matabeleland in Africa, principal speaker at the Synod banquet, touch on the many phases of concern where all 19 of the national churches that make up the Anglican Communion can be of mutual or common help.

Earlier in the day, L. Dale Pederson, Eugene, Ore., lawyer and chairman of the Episcopal Church's national Division of Laymen's Work, told the 400 delegates, clerical and lay, at their luncheon that the laity must respond to the call for their service to Christ with a fervor equally as great as that of the ordained clergy.

The afternoon sessions at the Nob Hill cathedral were devoted to panel discussions of practical means of implementing the mutual responsibility theme adopted by the 1963 Anglican Congress at Toronto as the guidepost to world-wide Anglican action in the next decade.

Thursday convention delegates joined with representatives of the Episcopal Churchwomen of the province in joint sessions during the morning, with the women meeting separately in the afternoon. The Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, installed the new slate of officers for the women's group.

Civil Rights Talks

Marin attorney Joseph Forest will speak and show slides of his experiences in Mississippi, where he and other attorneys went last year to gather depositions from Negroes deprived of voting rights, at the meeting of Junior High group members of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin, 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the church in San Rafael. Tom Blaney, who drove a truck to Mississippi, will also speak and show pictures.

Dialogue Sermon Series To Open At Sausalito

A series of dialogue sermons are planned for the early services at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church beginning at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

Rev. David C. Jacobsen, Pastor, announced that the early elements in the Morning Worship will be simplified and shortened to allow for a half hour discussion following the sermon.

The sermon-dialogues under the new format will open with a 10-week series on The Ten Commandments.

The new plan applies only to the 9:30 a.m. worship. The 11 a.m. service will follow the conventional format.

Man-God Ties Noted By Christian Science

The question of whether mankind can actually exist without God will be explored in depth at all Marin County Christian Science churches tomorrow. The subject is "Adam and Fallen Man."

The responsive reading includes this line from James: "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." The theme is carried through in the Bible Lesson to the final citations from Psalms: "He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noonday."

home BUYERS in Northern Marin are ALREADY living in Marin County by a ratio of almost 5 to 1

(More than from San Francisco)

Latest Research* shows that 71.9% of home buyers in Northern Marin are ALREADY LIVING in the County.

BUYER ORIGIN	%
Marin County	71.9
San Francisco	14.6

- The Prime Market then, for home sales, is Marin itself . . . and the I-J Classified "gets home" to the people who buy the MOST HOMES in Marin . . . Marin families themselves.
- And the PRIME MEDIUM for reaching Marin families is the Independent-Journal, covering 2 out of 3 homes in the County!!
- The I-J daily circulation in Marin County is GREATER than that of the San Francisco Chronicle and the Examiner COMBINED!
- NO WASTE — NO HIGH PRICED SPACE GOING TO NON-PRODUCTIVE AREAS.

ROOM TO SPARE
Here's a tremendous home for a family. 3 bdrms., 2 baths—plus 2 large unfinished rooms (1 with fireplace) and roughed-in plumbing, could be ideal in-law set-up. Roomy kitchen, extra large eating area. Plus large living room with mountain view. Over ⅔ acre with lovely pool site and possibility of extra home site. Would be nice spot for horses also. German Navy Men Tour Civic Center

"I've never seen anything like it," said Lt. Zor See Hans Shauberger.

The men were from the German warship Deutschland, on a world cruise and now in San Francisco Bay. They toured the Civic Center guided by Supervisor Ernest N. Kettenhofen and Civic Center guide Ellen K. Teed.

Miss Teed was able to converse with the navy men in German, but the men all spoke English well. That is a requirement of military service in Germany, they explained.

The men came to the Civic Center after a lunch at the California Maritime Academy in Vallejo. Kettenhofen is chairman of the board of governors of the academy.

Man Faints: 'Lack Of Food'

A 45-year-old Kentfield man fainted while trimming lettuce in a San Rafael marked Thursday. Police said his condition was attributed to "lack of food."

Dewey Creps of 933 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard was examined at San Rafael General Hospital, after collapsing at Rakestraw's Loch Lomond Market, 688 Point San Pedro Road.

He was sent home—presumably to get something to eat.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Statistics Show Women Aren't Immune To Heart Disorders

VAN DELLEN

The frequency of heart attacks among men has tended to obscure the importance of this condition among women. According to the Statistical Bulletin, 212,000 females died of coronary heart disease in 1963. One-fourth of all women die of this disorder.

Most heart attacks are secondary to hardening of the coronary arteries. It is well-known that arteriosclerosis is a problem for women approximately 10 years after it becomes a troublemaker for men. The death rate for females under age 55 is one-fifth that for males in the same age group. Neither is immortal and in time the death rates for both sexes gets closer and closer. At ages 85 and older the ratio is reduced to seven-eighths, but in the interim many more men than women have died.

WHAT PROTECTS the female from developing arteriosclerosis for those 10 extra years? It is due in part to her sex hormones (estrogens). These hormones have been used with some success in the long-term therapy of middle-aged men who survive a heart attack. The majority discontinue the product when they develop bosoms.

Some physicians prescribe estrogens after the menopause, hoping to further delay arteriosclerosis. Ovaries are less active. If this were the only cause of hardening of the arteries, the plan might gain wider acceptance among the medical profession.

OVERWEIGHT increases the risk of developing coronary heart disease. The same can be said of high blood pressure and diabetes. Women are subject to less stress and have that famous safety valve to reduce tension—tears and back fence or bridge discussions.

Coronary artery disease symptoms are the same in both sexes. Chest pain or a feeling of pressure beneath the breastbone should not be neglected by a woman just because heart trouble is more common in men.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

WEAK OLDSTER

R. B. writes: Is there any way to build up strength in a weak 81-year-old man?

REPLY

Yes. He should be examined for evidence of infections, anemia, and glandular or circulatory disorders. Correctable defects should be attended to, especially if they are sapping his strength. If no abnormalities can be found, a physical fitness program will help, particularly the use of an adequate diet.

MENOPAUSE

Mrs. A. writes: Would a person who had a hysterectomy 12 years ago still have symptoms of the menopause?

REPLY

Yes, but you neglected to mention the specific symptoms. As a result, it is possible to blame them on the menopause, nervousness, or both. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a leaflet on the menopause.

COSMETIC DEFECT

P. S. writes: What can be done about those little blood vessels in my legs and thighs?

REPLY

These tiny venules usually are dilations of pre-existing vessels. They are a cosmetic defect and of no health importance. They can be destroyed by electrolysis or injection treatment, but the results are not always satisfactory.

ACNE CONDITION

L. P. writes: What helps alleviate acne?

REPLY

Keep the skin clean and dry by washing frequently with a medicated soap and applying an acne lotion at night.

Today's Health Hint—Medications should not be kept on night tables.

Driver Booked After Crash

William F. Sheehy of Novato was booked on a charge of felony drunken driving Thursday night after his car rammed one stopped in front of 230 Bon Air Center, Larkspur.

A passenger in the stopped car, Mrs. Marie Nizenkoff, 51, of 48 Woodland Avenue, Sausalito, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a back sprain after the accident at 9:10 p.m. She was sitting in the car with the driver, Theodore C. Nizenkoff, 32, of the same address.

Sheehy, 36, of 298 San Felipe Way, Novato, was released on $1,100 bail and ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Girl Joins WAVES

Carol Barbara Anderson, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Anderson of 35 Rudnick Avenue, Novato, has enlisted in the Waves at the San Rafael Naval recruiting station, 1116 Fourth Street.

She will receive basic training at the Wave recruit training command in Bainbridge, Md. Miss Anderson graduated from San Rafael High School last June.

Help And A Quiet Place To Study

See Page M2

Marin's Study Center Program

By MARY LEYDECKER

What is a study center?

As it is run in the Sausalito School District at Richardson Bay and Manzanita schools, it is a quiet place to study, to talk with other students, to get help with math and spelling and to come to know and work with a tutor who cares about you.

Now in its second year, the Marin Study Center has been expanded from just fourth and fifth graders to include third and sixth grade students as well. On Tuesday afternoons after school about 150 pupils gather with volunteer tutors at Manzanita, in Marin City, and Richardson Bay schools.

ANOTHER LARGE group from Tamalpais High School meets one evening a week, also at Richardson Bay School.

Many organizations, individuals and school personnel have been involved in bringing the program this far, since it first started in the fall of 1963.

Conceived by an advisory group in Sausalito, it now involves people from all over Marin County.

The advisory committees, one each for the elementary and high school programs, first thought of the study centers as places for youngsters to receive additional stimulation and help with their school work.

AS THE PROGRAM has evolved, both fast and slow learners have taken advantage of the centers. The slow ones receive help with reading and other basic subjects from tutors who work with from two to five children at a time. The faster ones are aided by being able to find additional resource materials in the libraries and an opportunity to work on special projects.

Tutors, who are recruited by the Marin Chapter of American Red Cross for the Manzanita and Richardson Bay centers, come from many walks of life.

Mrs. Andrew Kozak of Sausalito, who was chairman of the Sausalito advisory committee, says that high school students have been especially good with the younger children. This year there are pupils from several of the county's high schools serving as tutors as well as students from College of Marin and Dominican College.

OTHER TUTORS are in the grandmother age group and some are retired teachers. Many, however, are people with no special training in teaching, but who love children and have a knack for working with them.

Mrs. Julian Bowie, a resident of Marin City, now serves as a tutor after being pleased with the progress made by her own daughter at a study center.

All of the tutors at the two elementary schools receive special Red Cross instruction before they join the staff there.

"We can always use more volunteers," Mrs. Kozak says, "because we hope to achieve a ratio of three-to-one for students and tutors."

"ACHIEVING RAPPORT with the students has not been a problem," Mrs. Kozak adds. "Instead, the children come to feel very strongly that a certain adult is 'their' tutor and are extremely disappointed if the tutor is ill and unable to come."

Another very important feature of the program for the children is the serving of refreshments, a volunteer service done at the two schools by women from Episcopal churches in Mill Valley and Sausalito and the Sausalito Presbyterian Church.

"After a full school day, youngsters are hungry," says Robert Thomson, principal of Richardson Bay School and dean of the study center there. "We are most grateful to these volunteers who come faithfully every week to give the children cookies and punch."

EVERY TUESDAY afternoon a line starts forming at the cafeteria as soon as school is dismissed. From there the pupils go to various classrooms and libraries which are used for the center. Groups of from two to five students work with each tutor.

At Richardson Bay School there is a note of serious purpose among the students, who are all there on a completely voluntary basis. Homework assigned by their teachers is brought out, and the tutors are immediately busy giving assistance and checking arithmetic problems.

At Manzanita School, where the third and fourth graders gather, no homework is assigned at this level. So the program operates somewhat differently.

There, tutors use their own ingenuity to gather materials which will stimulate learning.

"GAMES AND books are brought by tutors," Mrs. Kozak explains. "Games are wonderful for learning numbers."

Another group of children may be painting with their instructor. Or still another group is planning a special trip to a local place of interest, such as the Boyd Museum.

Alfred Anderson, principal of Manzanita School, acts as dean of this center.

How has the study program affected classwork of the children involved?

According to Principal Thomson, it is probably too early to see dramatic results. But teachers at his school have noted an immediate improvement in classroom attitudes.

"THE IDEAL outcome of the program is to enlarge to include another afternoon a week," he says.

He also said that some progress is being made in attracting the 'under achievers' to the center.

"These are the very children whom we want to come the most, but, of course, they are often the last ones who want to spend more time at school. They are beginning to come one at a time, though."

At the high school level 75 students from Tamalpais High School meet on Monday nights at Richardson Bay School under the leadership of Cyril Beattie and Richard Newman, teachers at the high school.

Other teachers as well as volunteers act as tutors. The Tamalpais Parent-Teacher Assn. and Mill Valley branch of the American Assn. of University Women have also been leaders in the high school student center.

IN ADDITION to the church, school, and Red Cross groups who helped evolve the program, Mrs. Jacqueline Smith, director of the Marin City program of the Marin Council of Community Services, has been a leader of the study center program from its beginning.

Red Cross participation in this sort of activity is something new for that organization.

Mrs. Oscar Olsen serves as recruitment chairman for the volunteer tutors and says that the "National Red Cross has a great deal of interest in the Marin Study Center as it is the first time Red Cross has entered this type of activity." Influential in bringing Red Cross into the picture was a board member, Mrs. T. C. Wellman, who has long been a community leader.

FROM THE small beginning in the fall of 1963, the study center program has been carried on with many willing hands but with very limited resources. Recently, however, the high school and elementary school advisory committees merged under the leadership of Rev. David Jacobsen, Sausalito Presbyterian Church, in order to apply for funds from the Economic Opportunities Act.

If such funds are obtained from the federal government, they will be used to hire a part-time coordinator for the three centers.

"We are very hopeful that our program will meet with approval as we feel that this sort of a community-based activity is the best sort of way to use funds for 'war on poverty,' " Reverend Jacobsen says. "If by stimulating youngsters to take fullest advantage of scholastic opportunities, we can certainly go far toward preventing drop-outs and subsequent unemployment due to lack of training."

A MAJOR CONTRIBUTION to the success of the Marin Study Center program is made by the Episcopal and Presbyterian church women who serve refreshments to the youngsters, who are hungry after their regular school day. Mrs. William D. Funk and Mrs. James Smith, aided by junior high school helper Barbara Dickens, prepare to serve fruit punch, while Betty Bowie awaits her treat.

YOUNG COLLEGE AND high school students are especially effective as tutors for the elementary school pupils in the Marin Study Center program, the Red Cross, in charge of recruiting the volunteers, has found. They establish an easy rapport, as is seen here as Robbie Lee listens intently to Sheila Giannini.

Artists Sketched While The Actors Waited For Godot

A marriage of the arts took place recently at San Anselmo's Festival Theater when members of the College of Marin adult education art classes observed and sketched a rehearsal of the company's current production, Samuel Beckett's "Waiting For Godot."

Members of both intermediate and advanced life drawing classes, accompanied by instructor Frank Milner, were introduced to Festival Theater by Jiri Herrmann of Kentfield, who is a member of the class as well as administrative director of the theater.

Betty Fuller, director of "Waiting For Godot," commented on the Beckett play, and explained that what the art students were to see would be a working rehearsal, with stops to check lines and actors' "business."

The rehearsal began.

The two leading actors in "Godot," Louis Bennett as Estragon and Kenneth McClellan as Vladimir, proceeded to act out one of the scenes. The students, scattered about the 300-seat theater, began to record their impressions of what was happening on stage.

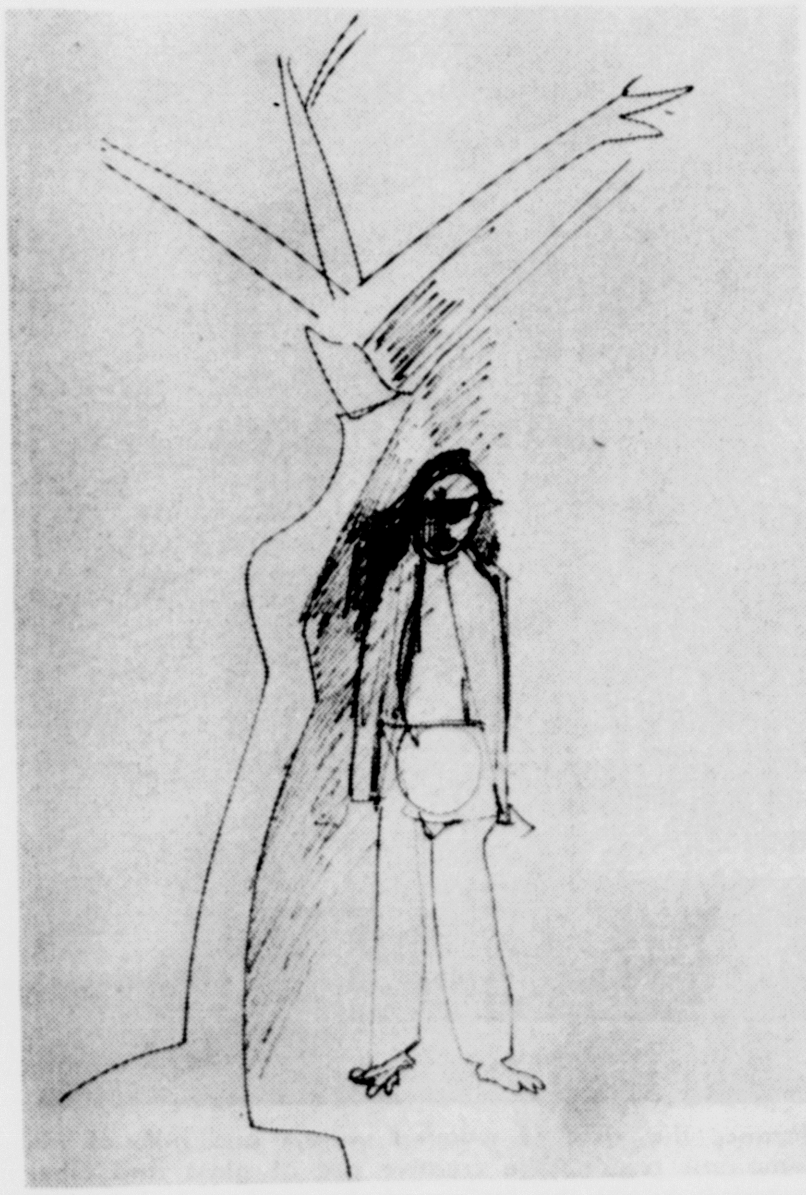

Festival Theater is featuring an exhibit of some of the works produced at this meeting in its lobby during the current run.

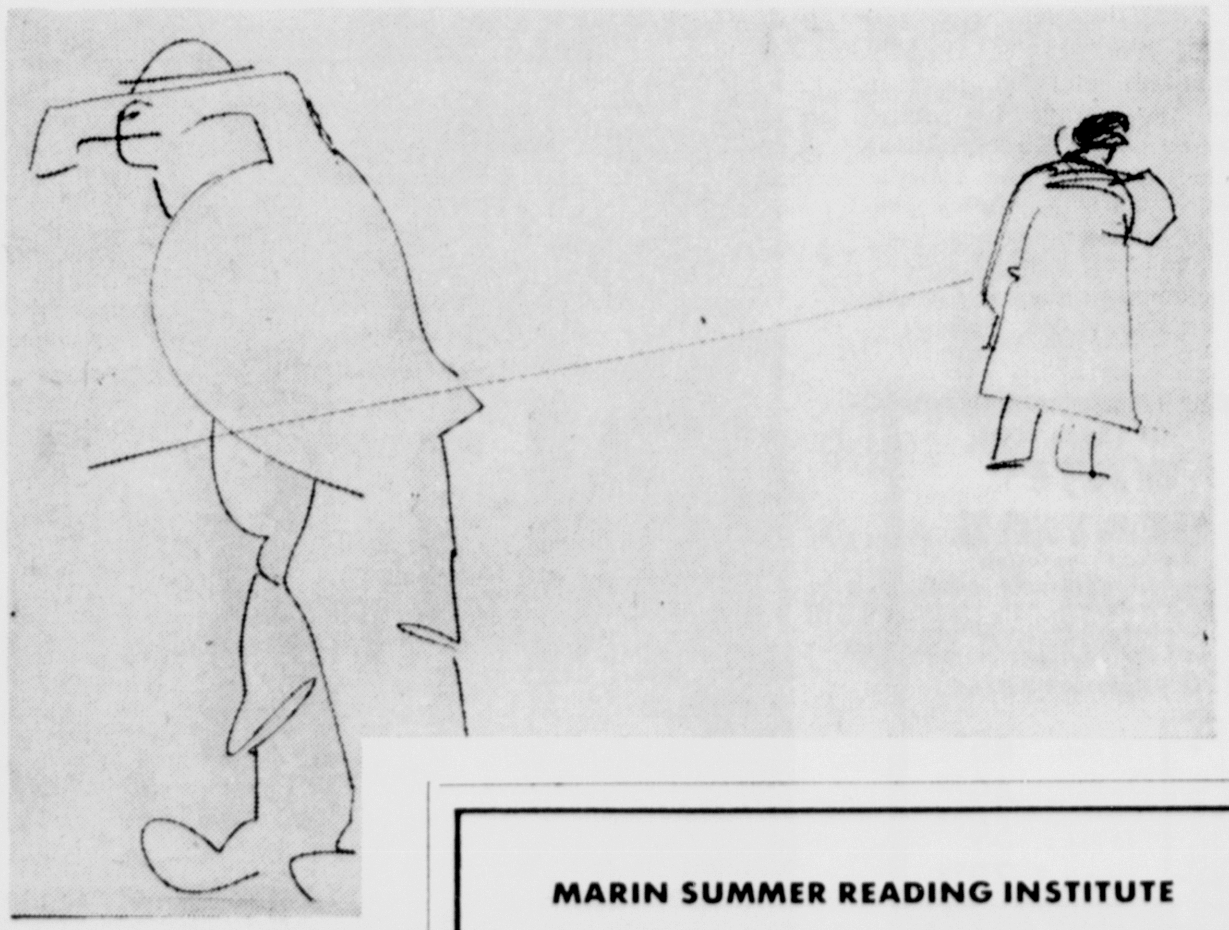

Classes in art at the College of Marin adult education division are open to any adult upon payment of a nominal fee.

'Waiting For Godot" will play at Festival Theater on weekends through May 30, alternating with Elizabeth Berryhill's drama, "The Cup of Trembling."

A TWO-IN-ONE DESIGN by architect Van Norden Logan provided the perfect solution to the problems posed by this Kent Woodlands building site. The living and sleeping areas are separated, yet the home is under one roof. And the spectacular views are fully utilized. The lucky owners are the Willard Axnesses. Photos by Gerald Ratto)

Making Use Of The 'Impossible Site'

Two-In-One Design Fits Its Location Perfectly

It appeared to be an impossible building situation.

The Kent Woodlands site overlooked a spectacular view, but was quite small. Furthermore one half the area was 10 feet above the other.

How could a practical living area be created?

After study, architect Van Norden Logan envisioned a two-in-one design concept. The plan incorporated the view, yet completely separated under one roof the living function from the sleeping area.

From its elevated position above the garage the living room commands a sweeping 240 degree vista over the valleys, ridges of the Ross Valley and water of northern San Francisco Bay. From the rear deck one obtains another fine view of the tree covered Mt. Tamalpais region.

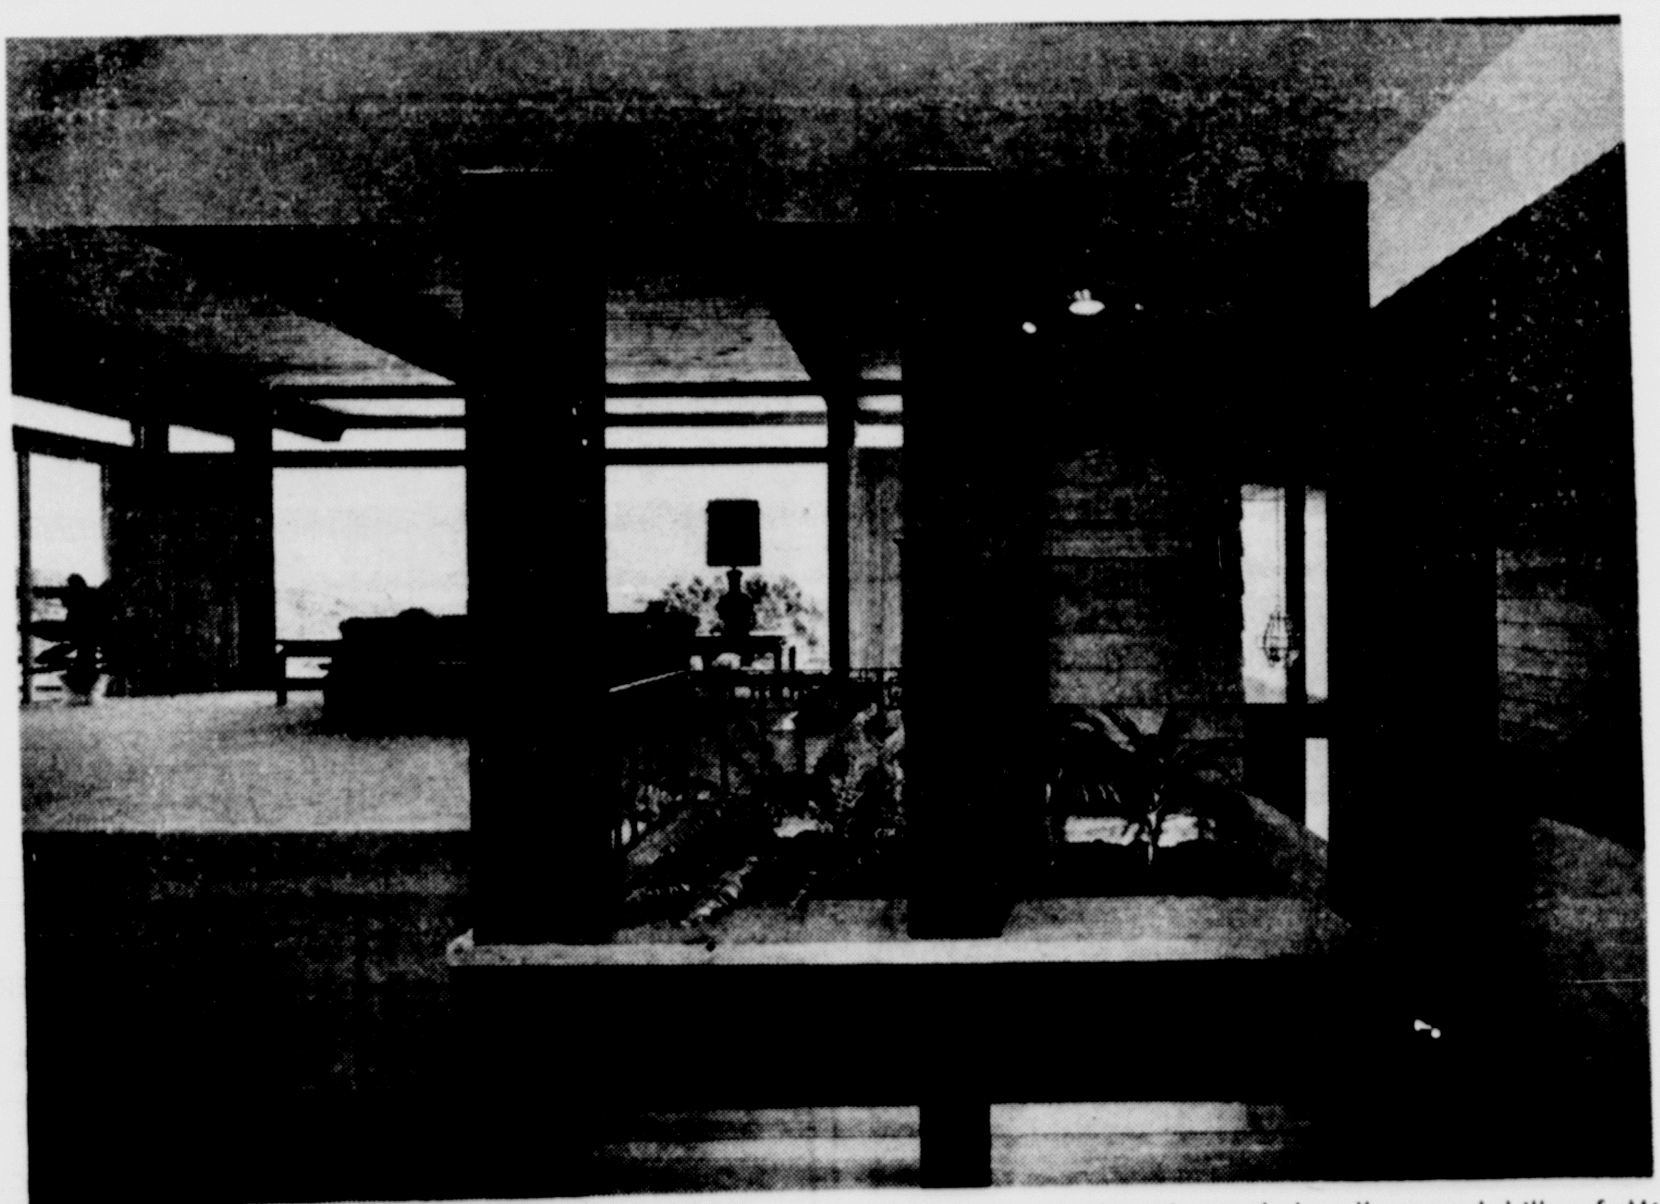

Creative uses of glass and materials were successful in developing a feeling of bringing the outside beauty to the inside.

The sleeping portion of the home is totally divorced from the living and entertaining area.

Logan feels that this design feature permits the children to sleep peacefully while parents are entertaining or watching television. Although physically separated from the living area the master bedroom also commands a majestic view.

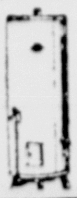

Since fireplaces add considerably to a home's charm and congeniality a fireplace was designed into the family room as well as the living room.

Owners Mr. and Mrs. Willard Axness decided to develop the spacious area beneath the living spaces into a combination den and wine cellar, additional bath facilities and storage. They also worked closely with Donald Endemann who designed the attractive landscaping features.

LOOKING FROM THE dining room, you peer through the planter and the spacious living room of the Van Norden Logan-designed Willard Axness home, and you see in the distance the vista of wooded valleys and hills of Mt. Tamalpais region. The creative use of glass and other materials brings the feeling of the outdoor beauty into the home's interior.

'Mum Grower From Michigan

Mrs. Neal Van Horn of Larkspur is a relative newcomer to Marin County, and one of the newer members of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin currently busy preparing hundreds of rooted cuttings to be offered to the public at the organization's annual 'Mum Plant Sale to be held next Saturday in San Rafael's Montecito Shopping Center.

But if new to the Marin society, Mrs. Van Horn is far from new to the lore of chrysanthemum culture.

As a resident of Redford, a suburb of Detroit in Michigan, she grew chrysanthemums for 20 years before coming to Marin.

"BACK HOME" she was a very active member of the Michigan Division of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Assn., serving its Redford Branch in many capacities including two years as president and three years as flower show chairman.

Not only an accomplished flower grower and arranger, she is also a recognized judge of flower shows for both the horticulture and arrangement sections.

Much of her past experience has been in staging fall shows for the YWCA and church and community groups. Her own garden yielded an abundant variety of chrysanthemums and autumn foliage, useful for background decorations.

More than 100 varieties of 'mums were to be seen at her Michigan home each fall.

NOW SHE regrets that she did not belong to the Detroit 'mum society, but she explains that the club meetings were held on Sunday afternoons, the one day she felt she should be at home with her husband and family.

Here in Marin, chrysanthemum society meetings are scheduled for the second Monday of each month, and she is in frequent attendance.

Her credentials as a graduate flower show judge were achieved after an intensive three years of study under two Michigan State University professors at the Woman's City Club of Detroit, the study course being sponsored by the Woman's National Farm and Garden Assn.

Not the least among her accomplishments is an artist's ability to put on canvas in oils and water colors the flowers and arrangements she loves so much.

DURING HER year's residence in Marin, just as they were previously in Michigan, local flower shows have been big events in Mrs. Van Horn's life, as she always takes her sketch pad, and makes outline drawings. Then at home she will make an oil or water color of the flowers she has seen at the show.

It gives her double pleasure, and serves as a permanent reminder, she says, to be able to translate her love of flowers and color from memory and sketch pad into a permanent record.

Some of the paintings she brought west are of the lilacs and tulips from her old garden back in Michigan.

Mrs. Van Horn, now living at 110 Sycamore Avenue, Larkspur, with her husband, daughter and grandson, was particularly entranced and delighted by the quality, color and size of the exhibition and "football" chrysanthemums she saw at the society's San Rafael show last October, the first such 'mum show she had attended in California.

"YOU ARE so fortunate," she says, "in being able to raise all of the chrysanthemum flower forms, the anemones, the large spoons, and especially the giant spider or Fuji 'mums out-of-doors. Even the 'hardies' grow better here."

Continuing, "Why out here one can grow 'mums from July, starting with the 'earlies,' on through to December. Wintering-over problems are less, enabling a gardener to save more of his stock from year to year, since the ground frost and heaving that kills off our 'mum stools back in Michigan are eliminated by the milder winter weather."

"But by the same token," she admits, "there are more insect problems in California, and one thing we didn't have to contend with in the midwest was snails and slugs, but one still had to spray for aphids."

The art of making cuttings and potting comes naturally to Mrs. Van Horn, whose grandparents were growers and florists in Cincinnati, Ohio, for many years. She remembers working in the greenhouses with her grandfather as a little girl, making slips and cuttings, and potting young plants for the trade.

NOW SHE is busy, not only putting in cuttings from established growers' gardens of the very extensive variety that will be offered in the Marin plant sale as healthy rooted young plants.

It's a whole new world of varieties that has opened up to her, however, and she is looking forward to growing such as the striking Alabama, a straw-beige spoon with oxblood tips, or exotic Cathey, a quilted, in old copper with brilliant red spoons; both so beautiful in arrangements.

The white spiders, such as Pinnacle and Bride's Veil in the fine tube form, and lovely Silver Strand and White Goddess in the bold tube, the yellow-bronze-red shades, with such beauties as Sondra Gail, Desert Song, Archie Woolman, Genghis Khan, Knoonan and Explorer are all names to anticipate she says. And she's simply fascinated with the beautiful greens she saw at the fall show, achieved through growing in pots and shading as the bud shows color such exciting-sounding names as Green Goddess (an incurve exhibition), Nightengale (a medium spider), or the very new Dr. Ira B. Cross (a green spider just out in '64, named after the famous hybridizer who lives in Berkeley).

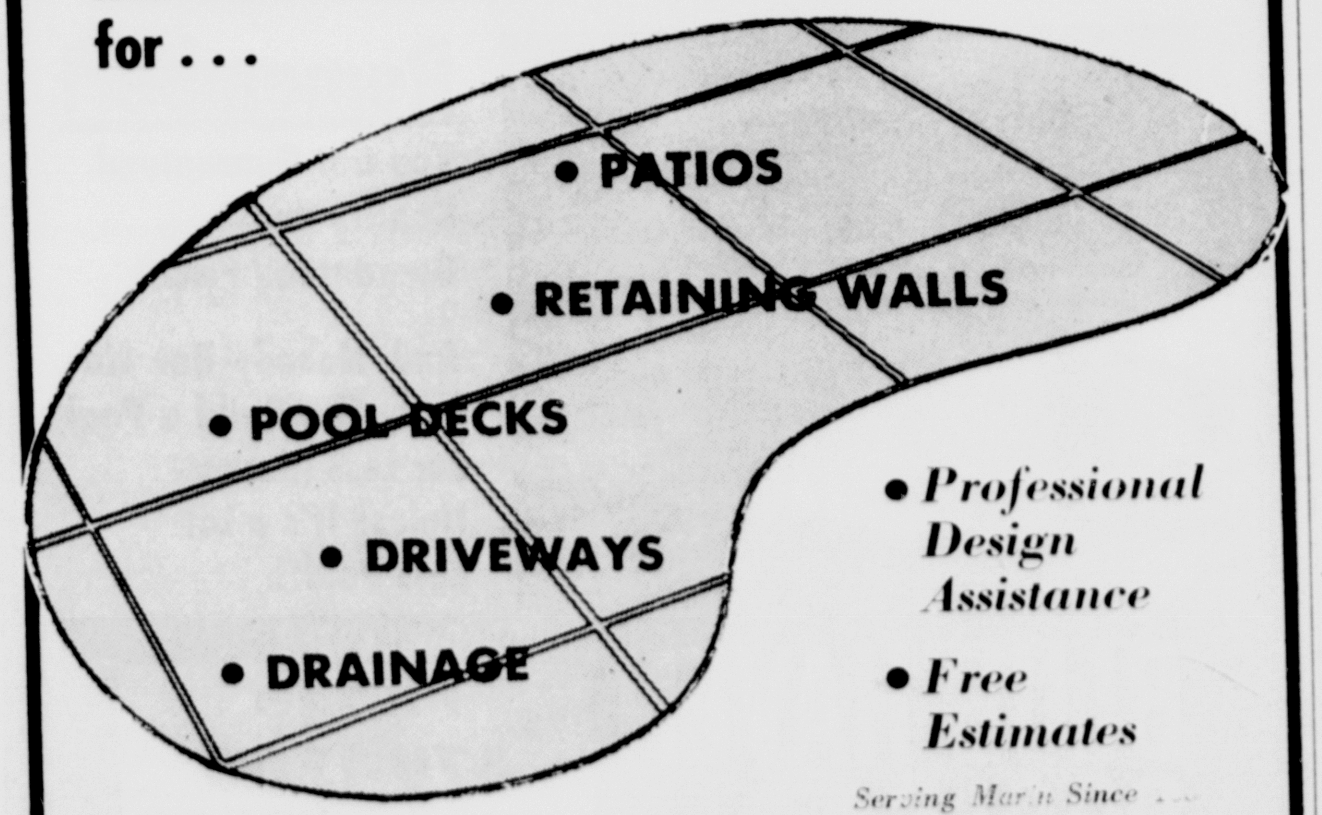

AMONG THE 'hardies' she raised back East that we know

LONG A SUCCESSFUL chrysanthemum grower, arranger and show judge in Michigan, Mrs. Neal Van Horn of Larkspur has discovered a whole new world of 'mum varieties, as well as many of her old favorites, in her new locale in Marin. MRS. NEAL VAN HORN often combines her interests in art and floral culture by doing paintings of flowers and arrangements she has seen at shows. Some of her work can be seen here as she puts her artistic abilities to work on a poster publicizing next Saturday's Chrysanthemum Society of Marin plant sale.

Midwestern 'Mum Fancier Enjoys Benevolent Climate Of Marin

here are the Space Age 'mums, Asteroid, Astronaut, Moonflight, Spaceflight and Star-lite, developments from the University of Nebraska, especially hybridized for colder climates but just as good in Marin; Apache, a cactus petaled flame bronze; Bronze Giant, a two-tone bronze incurve; and Charles Nye, a large bright yellow incurve.

Irene, a small white button is still another familiar favorite. But she confesses herself unfamiliar and fascinated with so many of our outstanding cultivars, especially the anemones such as Powder Puff, Joan Castle, and Alice Searle, with the larger pom poms such as Thyra, the lavender, its sport, Bronze Thyra, Personality (another good lavender) and Yellow Arcadia, with the smaller Pink and Yellow Dot buttons.

Another exciting new prospect for Mrs. Van Horn is the tree or standard, and cascade forms grown from Magic Carpet, Magic Light, Sozan, Maiko and White Daphne.

AS A NEW member of the Marin society, Mrs. Van Horn will benefit by the members' pledge to give each new member a minimum of 12 starts in 'mums. And she plans to take advantage of the low price of many choice cultivars that will be on sale next Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in front of the Crocker-Citizen's National Bank, Montecito Shopping Center.

"I just don't know where I'm going to put them all," Mrs. Van Horn says. "I want so many of the new kinds and large disbuds, yet I'll still grow many of the hardy garden varieties I used to have back home."

And the society is planning to have at the sale more of the garden varieties for those who wish to use 'mums in with landscaping for color mass and prolific cutting blooms.

They Still Do The Waltz And Fox Trot

The Frug Hasn't Completely Replaced The Favorite Dances Of Yesteryear

No, mom and dad, the gyrations of the frug, the twist and their ilk aren't the only dances the youngsters are doing these evenings.

The samba and the rhumba are still with us—even the waltz and the fox trot.

Such long-established favorites will be very much in evidence when Mrs. Bari Frohlich's Junior Cotillion of Marin holds its Gala Trophy Ball this evening in the San Rafael High School gymnasium. The event, open to the public as a fundraising event for the Marin Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults Inc., will include, in addition to the ballrooming dancing, demonstrations by Junior Cotillion couples of many of the dances.

In the photos below, you are given a preview of some of them —many of which will bring back nostalgic recollections among members of the "pre-A-Go-Go" set.

THE GAIETY of the samba is demonstrated by Amy Marshall and Steve Lockett of Junior Cotillion of Marin. While the present-day samba is a far cry from the primitive dance brought to Brazil by African slaves, its evolution can be traced through the original "semba" and the moxixe.

A DRAMATIC "over-sway" provides impressive climax to a demonstration of the tango by Jackie Bridges and Bob Beadle. The official Syllabus of the U. S. Ballroom Council says the tango was originally a Gypsy "solo dance" which came to Argentina and the New World by way of Spain. (Photos by Russ Booth)

THE SMILES worn by Denise Abbott and Don Bridges indicate the popularity of the swing that continues among young people. A ballroom dance of American origin, it is traced by the U. S. Ballroom Council to the "Lindy Hop" as it was called by dancers in Harlem's famed Savoy Ballroom in honor of Charles Lindbergh.

THESE SERIOUS young waltzers are Sally McLellan and Steve Porter. The waltz is the oldest and remains the most beautiful of the still popular ballroom dances. France, Italy and Bavaria all claim the honor of having been the birthplace of the waltz. The German claim is the one most generally accepted.

PLEASED BY their performance of the "conversation step" in the fox trot are Lisa Heide and Dennis Kean. The fox trot was born in 1913 when an entertainer named Harry Fox, appearing in the Ziegfield Follies, introduced the fast step pattern. Through the years, the "trotting" step was slowed to a walking pace.

EXECUTING THE "front cross-over break" of the cha-cha-cha are Julie Giomi and Brian McCarthy. The cha-cha-cha is related to the mambo and was originally known as the "triple mambo." Its present, slower form was introduced in 1953 by the Cuban orchesta — Orquestra Americana — with great success.

"WHY SHOULD A LITTLE COFFEE MAKE A DARK BROWN STAIN?"

Simply because the stain didn't show much and because there was no cream nor sugar in the coffee, is no reason not to rush your dress to your dryceaners. As you learned, hanging the garment in the closet and forgetting to send it to be cleaned, caused damage difficult to repair.

When a coffee stain is permitted to remain in a garment — your was wool —the tannin-bearing compounds in coffee "set," causing the brown stain to darken and become noticeable.

Ordinary dryclean ing will not remove this stain, however, by special handling, if the color of your dress is fast to a mild bleach, your professional drycleaner may be able to remove the stain. He has the skill and the proper materials to remove a coffee stain if the color is fast to the mild bleach he will prepare.

You could have avoided this trouble if you had not delayed in sending your dress to your cleaners as soon as it was stained.

A Volunteer's Tour Of Our Facilities For Mental Health

By PATRICIA W. REYNOLDS

Chris Mathews admits that until he became involved in volunteer work on behalf of the Marin Assn. for Mental Health, he had only the vaguest ideas of what constitutes mental illness, and what is being done about it.

"I thought that there were only two areas of treatment," he admits, "the overcrowded and understaffed state hospital, and the $25-an-hour psychiatrist."

Now, however, Mathews knows that mental illness is being attacked on a much broader front.

PART OF THAT knowledge came from a tour he made of Marin's mental health facilities, after enlisting in the campaign committee of the Marin Assn. for Mental Health which will be soliciting public support of the mental health program during the month of May.

Mathews, manager of the Peacock Gap Country Club, is a new resident of Marin County.

But he did not hesitate to volunteer his time for the mental health campaign. And once enlisted, he went about his responsibilities seriously, beginning with a campaign of his own—to acquaint himself with the mental health programs of his new county.

What he saw was a number of existing — and proposed — facilities in Marin, designed to fill the "gap" between the state institutions and "the couch."

MATHEWS ACQUIRED more than a knowledge of existing facilities and programs, however. In his discussions with the professional people he encountered, he also gained a increasing awareness of the extent of the mental health problem. Mental illness, he was told, fills one-half of all the hospital beds in our nation. It causes at least 50 per cent of business absenteeism, resulting in an annual cost to industry of five billion dollars. One out of every 10 Americans is afflicted by mental illness sometime during their lives.

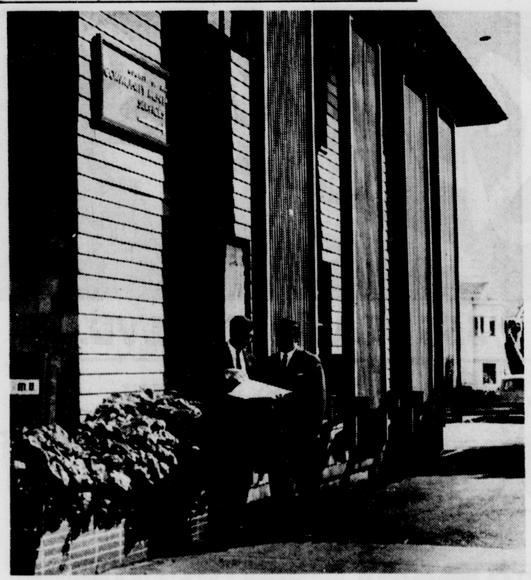

On the brighter side of the picture, he also learned that intelligent people have overcome the age-old stigma attached to mental illness and have come to recognize the value of the "in-between" services such as the ones he observed during his tour.

He wound up convinced that the agencies he had visited were operating with a minimum of funds, and were making every effort to provide expert counseling and treatment on a scaled-to-income basis.

HE ALSO FINISHED much impressed with the wealth of clerical and other work performed by Marin volunteers.

He was told that the Marin Assn. for Mental Health is a member of the National Assn. for Mental Health Inc. and works hand-in-hand with the several Marin agencies in providing educational and informational services, in recruiting volunteers for all phases of the mental health fight, and in referring emotionally disturbed persons and their families to the proper sources of assistance.

Armed with these facts and with the resulting sense of urgency, Mathews, like his fellow volunteers, will be contacting his fellow Marin citizens this month in quest of financial contributions to continue and to step up a vital community campaign.

BEFORE BEGINNING his tour of Marin's mental health facilities and programs, Chris Mathews, right, volunteer campaign worker for the Marin Assn. for Mental Health, is briefed by Dr. Clyde Miller, director of community mental health services in Marin. Included is the proposed community mental health center at Marin General Hospital in Greenbrae, recently approved in principle by county supervisors and for which state and federal funds are being sought.

THE MARIN MENTAL HEALTH Center at Ross General Hospital is a scaled-to-income service where professional counseling and psychiatric evaluation are available to children and adults. Chris Mathews listens to an explanation from Stanley Seiderman, the administrator, of the use of some of the "tools" in the treatment of young clients. Mental Health volunteer Mathews is manager of the Peacock Gap Country Club.

AT THE PSYCHIATRIC WING of the Ross General Hospital, Mathews listens as Dr. J. M. Stubblebine, chief of psychiatric services at Ross General, discusses with pride the attractive, well-staffed facilities and tells of the success that has been experienced in treating patients in their own community near family and friends. Mrs. Carl Carlson, left, is a mental health and hospital volunteer who is one of those helping to maintain a link between the emotionally ill citizen and his community through understanding and helpful kindliness.

A PROGRAM BY WHICH sheriff's deputies are instructed in how to recognize emotionally ill persons has been initiated by the Marin Assn. for Mental Health. An officer, responding to a call, is sometimes confronted by an emotionally ill person, and his understanding of the problem becomes of paramount importance. A special class is taught by a psychiatrist who has volunteered his time through the mental health association. Here, Chris Mathews watches Capt. Sidney Stinson and Deputy Ernest Nielson at the Marin County sheriff's communications center, through which the calls are relayed.

AT HIS FIRST STOP at the Family Service Agency, volunteer Chris Mathews listens with interest to an explanation by social worker Constance Bruce of the services provided by this facility. A skilled and understanding social worker can, Mathews learns, help people to recognize and cope with their emotional problems before they become a serious mental illness.

AT THE CATHOLIC Social Service of Marin, visitor Chris Mathews is pressed into service as a model for a photo demonstrating how by treating the family as a whole, the trained social worker assists the family members in understanding themselves and each other. Completing the "family" as models are Mrs. Kathryn Hebel, a social worker, and young David and Rachel Zrnich.

AT THE CONSTRUCTION SITE for the new family rehabilitation center in the Lucas Valley, Mathews joins Dave Fogel, left, county director of institutions, in an inspection of plans for that new facility. There teenage boys and girls with emotional problems will stay while receiving psychiatric evaluation and professional counseling. At the same time, their cooperating families will also receive counseling. The idea is to encourage and assist families in solving their problems together.

"CAREERS IN MENTAL HEALTH" is a program for students, conducted in cooperation with school counselors by the Marin Assn. of Mental Health. It is designed to interest youths in mental health occupations and help meet the critical need for trained personnel in the field. Mathews watches as Mike Convis, counselor at Sir Francis Drake High School, discusses the profession with students Ed Armstrong, Sue Herrmann, Jack Gearhart and Ann Paine.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR Mrs. Sutton Christian of the Marin Assn. for Mental Health shows volunteer worker Chris Mathews some of the fund-raising posters that will be used by Mathews and his colleagues during Mental Health Month in May as they seek public support for the multi-faceted program. At the busy association office in downtown San Rafael, Mathews learned something of the involved paper work required to keep the services operating smoothly and in coordination. Much of this work is done by volunteers. And not the least of it is the distribution of literature aimed at arousing public awareness of the mental illness problem. (Photos by H. M. Twillman)

THE BOOK PAGES

Two Scottish Heroes Of Past And Present

By DON KEOWN

ROBERT BRUCE by G. W. S. Barrow, University of California Press, 502 pages, $7.50.

JIM CLARK AT THE WHEEL by Jim Clark, Coward-McCann, 210 pages, $4.50.

The biography of a historic figure dead more than 600 years whose personality and deeds have been beclouded by gaps in existing chronologies and by centuries of myth-making is a mammoth undertaking.

G. W. S. Barrow, British historian and educator, has tackled a particularly complex and controversial character in his "Robert Bruce," and has performed that formidable task with rare scholarship and considerable literary skill.

Actually, Barrow begins his book with the death of Alexander III in 1286, then follows Scottish history through the ensuing 20 years during which Scotland was without an effective leader except for the remarkable and heroic William Wallace who finally met death at the hands of the English whom he had harassed so mightily.

At a time of defeat, Robert Bruce, following the abdication of the ineffectual John Balliol and the murder of his foremost rival, ascended to the throne, only to meet with more setbacks. But eventually he was to rally his people and to lead them to a series of victories against the English King Edward II and his allies.

It was during this period that the old feudal system began to give way before a new concept—"the community of the realm," a forerunner of the present-day national political unit.

Writing objectively, after massive research, Barrow presents both virtues and vices of Robert Bruce. But he makes it clear that, judged by the standards of his time, he feels the Scottish king entitled to a favorable verdict as a monarch and man from the historians.

Barrow does not hesitate to differ with and correct his fellow historians. Indeed, he seems to rejoice in so doing. But he writes with conspicuous honesty, admitting frankly those subjects and periods upon which he feels himself unqualified or upon which the record is incomplete and inconclusive.

While Barrow's writing style is reasonably lucid and readable, it does pre-suppose a certain amount of knowledge on the part of his readers of Scottish history, tradition and geography. Those who tackle this book without those prerequisites will likely encounter sticky going. Those properly prepared will find the book both authoritative and interesting, according Bruce the attention and respect that he has long deserved but seldom received from historians.

Motor racing driver Jim Clark tells the story of his rise to the world championship in that exciting and dangerous sport in "Jim Clark at the Wheel."

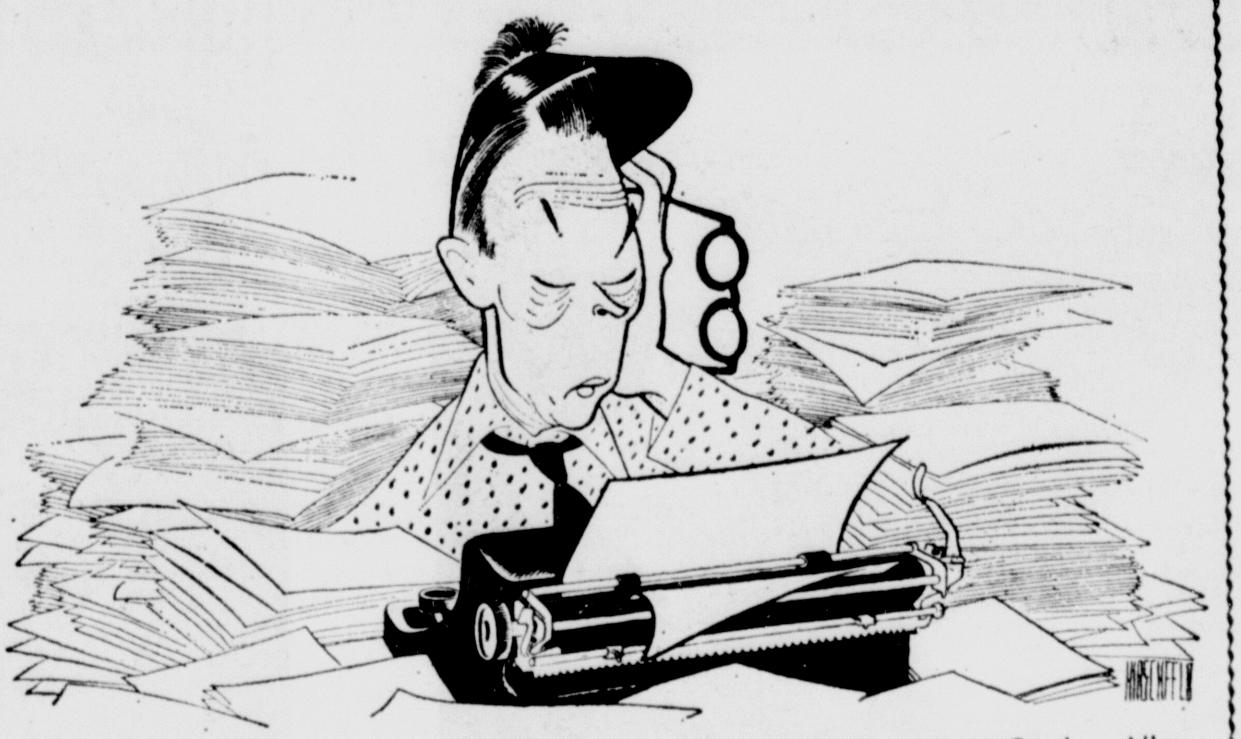

It is a book limited in appeal to automobile buffs and racing fans. The racing jargon, on top of the free use of British slang, is likely to make much of it virtually incomprehensible to the uninitiated.

The bulk of the book seems little more than a long narration of the bewildering variety of breakdowns that sidelined or threatened to sideline Clark-driven entries before he hit upon the skein of successes that carried him to the world title. Indeed, at times, it appears that the major triumph for driver, car and crew lies simply in completing the prescribed circuit, rather than in passing and defeating rivals.

Quiet and competent, Jim Clark is not a particularly colorful personality as sports champions go, and thus primary interest must be focused upon the sport instead of the man. Automobile enthusiasts, however, will no doubt be entranced by Clark's accounts of the races and by his discussion of the comparative technical merits of the various makes of racing cars. Of somewhat more general interest is his commentary upon why men are attracted by the hazardous sport, his theories on motor racing, and his opinions of competitive driving in America (generally favorable).

Motor racing writer Graham Gould is thanked by Clark for his assistance in the writing of the book. But it is likely that Clark himself is the primary author, since the young Scot has already done considerable writing on motoring subjects and expects to do still more after his retirement (in the not too distant future, he indicates) from competition.

"HERZOG," Saul Bellow's runaway best-seller, has been scheduled for reprinting as a Crest paperback in 1966 by Fawcett World Library.

THIS CARICATURE of the late Fred Allen, by Al Hirshfield, appears on the jacket of the Doubleday book, "Fred Allen's Letters," edited by Joe McCarthy. Allen was a profilic writer as well as popular comedian.

Sleuths & Suspense

In "Homicide Blonde," Maurice Procter has retained the touch that has made all his Inspector Martineau novels such gripping reading.

This time Martineau and his Granchester police force colleagues are faced with a particularly nasty puzzle—a killer who preys on small girls and young women. It is a race against time and death, for the murderer is driven to repeat his crimes over and over again.

There is a suspect. But the problem is to be sure—and to have the evidence that will justify an arrest and bring about a conviction.

Procter has a final surprise for his readers in a story marked by particularly strong and interesting characterizations.

Our Reviewers And The New Reading

Buchwald's Best

AND THEN I TOLD THE PRESIDENT by Art Buchwald, G. P. Putnam's Sons, 244 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Buchwald, one of the nation's most humorous columnists, is at top form in his latest collection of comments on the Washington scene.

Unfortunately for Marin readers who can catch Buchwald's column in the Independent- Journal, some of the material will be familiar.

The only other drawback is that many of the columns cover topical news, such as the last presidential campaign, and they lessen in appeal as time goes by.

There are of course timeless columns that will delight the reader and give some perspective to the foibles of government and those who govern.

Buchwald doesn't stop at government, however. but ranges into morals, advertising, show business and status symbols, sticking his pointed quill into hot air wherever he finds it.

Washington's Time

WAR IN THE GOLDEN WEATHER, by Stephen Longstreet, Doubleday, 470 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Fighting at the side of Virginia Militia Maj. George Washington, the self-styled painter Will Cortlandt surveyed the forest land and built roads for the major to save himself from hanging as a common horsethief.

The rough and tumble pre-Revolutionary life in the Colonies is less than encouraging to the artist, and Will finds himself involved in the march of the colonials and the British under General Braddock toward the French and Indian War, which was to see Braddock and Washington's troops mowed down in massacre. But after the retreat Cortlandt settled himself to the rugged frontier routine as a trader and Major Washington lived to fight another day.

It is an exciting and fast-moving tale with plenty of gusto and character.

With this novel, Longstreet completes the trilogy of the pre-Revolutionary days which include "Eagles Where I Walk" and "The Painted Feather."

Today's Church

THE SPLIT-LEVEL FELLOWSHIP by Wesley C. Baker, Westminster Press, 151 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Clayton K. Harrop.

This book is a serious attempt to face the question as to whether the church of today is accomplishing all that God intends that it should. And the author's answer is that it is not.

This work is the outcome of a careful consideration of the actualities faced in the church situation.

At the outset, the author suggests that the role of the church is looked at in a far different way from that which prevailed in the first century. Many of the features of the church may and do present dangers to the true work of the church.

The heart of the problem, as seen by the author, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael and San Francisco Theological Seminary faculty member, is that there are two levels of church membership—the small minority who take their faith seriously, and the vast majority who are on the fringes of the church yet dominate the life of the church.

This two-level membership is neither recognized nor taken into consideration in the program of the church. The entire book is written with this in view.

This inner circle should be the active ministry of the church, with the distinction between confirmation to membership and ordination removed. While a place is retained for conversion, it is not looked upon as the requirement for membership in the larger circle of the church. This removal of such a requirement would be a means of retaining the contact of the church with the unregenerate element of the world.

The author deals with what he terms the three fruits of the Spirit: liturgy, Christian nurture, and evangelism, which he looks upon as the three critical areas of the church's activity. Following this is a provocative discussion of the role of the church in the field of ethics. Finally, the key figure of the "cell," the small group for prayer and study, is used as the basis for the development of fellowship.

This is a book which seeks to raise questions perhaps as much as answer them. Certainly it does. Some of the suggestions put forward in it will probably shock and offend many, but they should cause all who read it to do some thinking of their own concerning the situation in which the church of today finds itself. If this be so, it will have accomplished its purpose, in spite of the disagreements that will have been aroused.

American Realist

The great trove at the University of Pennsylvania of some 40,000 letter by or about the pioneering novelist provided Swanberg with a wealth of material to create this comprehensive biography of Theodore Dreiser.

And Dreiser himself, convinced that he indeed was a great literary figure, saved everything including his bills, swatches of clothing and piles of clippings — a bonanza for a patient biographer.

Research alone took two years and the result is the portrait of a fascinating if often petty, boorish and difficult man, who wrote in a tangle of syntax and was sometimes careless with a fact, and, who nearly all agree, possessed the streak of genius.

Big and ungainly, with protruding teeth, Dreiser was phenomenally attractive to women all his life, and he used them to a shameless extent to copy and edit the lengthy Dreiser manuscripts.

An Indiana boy born to impoverished immigrant parents, Dreiser grew up as one of 10 children in the shadow of his high-living songwriter brother Paul Dresser, whose name was changed for stage purposes. And supposedly Dreiser inspired Paul to write "Banks of the Wabash," one of a string of his famous song successes. Knocking about the Midwest as a teenager, Dreiser lacked the interest to hold a series of unskilled jobs. And although he had mild success as a newspaperman writing feature stories, he lacked the succinctness that news writing required — a lack for which his novels were to be noted.

With no compunction about using his family's less savory experiences, he recreated the tough realism of life among the poorer workers of the early 1900s, first with the controversial "Sister Carrie" and then "Jennie Gerhardt." And Dreiser also produced countless articles and the novels "An American Tragedy," "The Titan," "The Genius," "The Financier," and finally "The Bulwark." The first two novels plunged him into a battle with the censors and persistent Victorianism that was to last even after 1925, the year a Dreiser novel — "An American Tragedy" — finally found a welcome reception.

A fighter for the realism in literature that he found in life, Dreiser early developed the distrustful manner toward all with whom he dealt, as Swanberg notes in detail. Yet it was his very pig-headedness and conviction of his own greatness that forced him to continue the battle for acceptance of the novels which were to pioneer in the great American realist tradition that followed in the works of Hemingway, Sinclair Lewis and William Faulkner.

Living Creatively

A NEW VIEW OF MENTAL ILLNESS, by D. Leonard Miller, M.D., Graphic Arts of Marin Inc., 14 pages. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

Dr. Miller, a Marin resident, has found a way to illustrate his viewpoint of human adjustment in our society based on astronomical orientation.

He points out that most of us try to live adult life in the familiar style of childhood—that is, we either assume the "up" position and lay down the law, or take the "down" position and follow orders.

Dr. Miller maintains that "up" or "down," horizontal or vertical, are not the only alternatives available to us. We can live creative lives by moving "around."

The last time I read this small pamphlet it seemed to me that he was saying that people in our society are generally threatened by a fluctuating situation. That we mistakenly think we can operate best only when we know who is boss. This is not necessarily so, he says. At least that's what I thought he was saying the last time I read it—my opinion or impression changes with each reading.

Come to think of it, that may be his point.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER
KBRG Program Manager

SOLER: Six Concerti for Two Keyboards—Anton Heiller, organ and harpsichord; Erna Heiller, harpsichord—Bach Guild Stereo 5069:

The music of Soler was never published during his lifetime.

He worked as organist and composer in Philip II's famous monastery, El Escorial. Many compositions for two keyboards were written during this period in Spain and Portugal which could be performed on any combinations available of organ, harpsichord or pianoforte.

The Heillers have performed three of these on organ and harpsichord and three others on two harpsichords. The music is quite similar to the sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti, with greater development of the themes. Stereo effects are naturally prominent, and exciting.

The Heillers are eloquent performers.

ROZSA: Concerto for Violin and Orchestro, BENJAMIN: Romantic Fantasy for Violin, Viola and Orchestra—Jascha Heifetz, violin/1) Dallas Symphony/Walter Hendl; 2) William Primrose, viola/RCA Victor Orchestra/Izler Solomon—RCA Victor Stereo LSC-2767:

This is the stereo version of the same performances that have been available for some years on the same label in mono. I don't know if this is re-channeled or genuine stereo—if the latter the effect is very limited, but the sound is fuller, it must be admitted.

The two works are a much more suitable coupling than with the pieces they shared space with on the two mono discs.

The very Hungarian Rosza concerto is an intense work, porbably one of the major serious pieces by the Hollywood-film composer now residing in Southern California. The Benjamin work is equally heavyweight compared to his popular Jamaican Rumba and other small pieces. Two 20th century works which don't forsake the total idiom and should therefore be even more familiar to concert-goers than they have been.

This is the only stereo version of Goldmark's most popular composition. The work is really somewhat mis-named—it does not describe a rustic, or peasant wedding, but rather a "countryside wedding" of perhaps a noble family.

Both the Austrian and Hungarian backgrounds of the composer are revealed in the music, a melodic and sincere symphonic structure.

It's always a bit unnerving to see the Utah Symphony listed as performing such music, but a splendid job they always do—to the great credit of maestro Abravanel and his musicians.

MASTERS OF THE GUITAR, Volume 3—HAYDN: Concerto No. 3 in G—Duo Pomponio — Zarate/Lamoureux Orch./Jean Baptiste Mari; SCHUBERT-MATIEGKA: Quartet in G. Tripp/Ragossnig/Stierhof/Skocic —RCA VICTOR Stereo LSC-2772:

Most compositions for guitar together with other instruments are appearing on disc along with the current re-birth of interest in the guitar for concert music.

The Haydn is one of five concerti originally written for a hurdy-gurdy type of musical oddity, the lira organizzata. It is arranged for guitar, of course.

The Schubert work is more accurately that of a Viennese music professor of Schubert's time to which Schubert added only the extra cello part.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania

UPPER LUCAS VALLEY area is expanding rapidly. Unfortunately, those of you who have purchased homes there find that in some areas the FM Stereo reception is quite poor. In the Upper Lucas Valley area, there is a centralized TV antenna system furnished to the homes. Our findings indicate that the centralized TV antenna system furnishes the homes with TV channels, but does not furnish the FM band of from 88 to 108 megacycles. Generally, connecting an FM unit to this cable results in no better signal reception than connecting to a two foot piece of wire.

Stereo FM reception requires about 10 times more signal than the conventional monaural reception. Also, to be clear, the signal must be free of multi-path or ghosting. In order to obtain enough signal, the user will have to have a quality antenna installation on his roof (this is prohibited in Upper Lucas Valley), or the user has to be furnished the signal via a centralized antenna system. The solution for residents of Upper Lucas Valley is to band together and ask the responsible organization to furnish FM antennas at the centralized antenna site, and to furnish the necessary FM line distribution amplifiers to provide FM as well as TV on the same cable. This can be and is being done in many areas.

Whether your FM Stereo music system costs $300 or $3000, your results will be no better than having an inexpensive portable radio. Your entire investment in musical enjoyment is wasted. Can you afford this?

Many of our clients in this area are asking me what can be done. My answer is for the home owners to band together and attend a meeting of the Home Owners Association and ask for the FM service that you are entitled to. The other alternative is to have your beautiful area look like an antenna farm with individual antennas on all of the homes. The biggest problem seems to be "the finding of interested home owners." I will be happy to help obtain a list of those people in the Upper Lucas Valley area who want good FM reception on their cable. If each of you that are interested who read this article will call me and give me your name, address, and phone number, I will add it to the list. Also, you can cut out this article and circulate it down your block. Then one of your spokesmen can pick up the list from me and you are on your way for an eventful meeting.

One of the most frequent offenders in this respect is the water or flush tank in back of the toilet bowl. If water drips or flows from the tank into the bowl when it is not in use, the waste of water over the period of a month can be tremendous, far more than that which usually occurs when a faucet is in need of a new washer.

THERE ARE a number of reasons for the leakage from a flush tank, too many to go into detail about them in this alloted space.

But we can at least discuss one of the most common causes —the failure of the rubber ball valve at the bottom of the tank to drop perfectly on the valve seat. If you lift up the top of the tank, you'll see a vertical rod, at the bottom of which is a rubber valve shaped like a ball or bell. After the tank has been flushed, this valve returns to its position on the valve seat, keeping the water in the tank sealed in.

When it doesn't fit properly, water leaks under the valve and into the tank.

ONE TROUBLE may be improper positioning of the bracket that keeps the vertical rod in place. See if the bracket is loose. If so, tighten it after being certain that the vertical rod is directly over the center of the valve seat. If the bracket is tight, and the rod is in position, the next step is to inspect the rubber ball valve.

Remove the valve by unscrewing it from the vertical rod. If it seems defective or worn, replacing it with a new one is a cheap and effective remedy. But it may be that the valve seat is at fault. Rub emery cloth or steel wool around the inside of it to clean off any rust or grit.

In most cases, it is best to clean the valve seat and replace the rubber ball valve. While you're at it, buy a new vertical rod if it has begun to corrode.

After making the repair, leave the tank cover off while you flush the tank several times, allowing time between flushings for the tank to refill. This not only will enable you to be sure the vertical rod is centered properly, but will give you a better idea of the over-all operation of the somewhat complicated mechanism.

THE BEST WAY to make a bank of windows important is to incorporate it into a unit of built-ins. Installation here is built to sill height and contains drawers, magazine rack, shelving for books and TV cushions. Curtaining problem is solved with fabric-faced shades that retract under the wooden valance. Excellent woods for this project include Ponderosa pine, Engelmann spruce and Douglas fir.

Booklet Offers Help In Planning Plumbing System

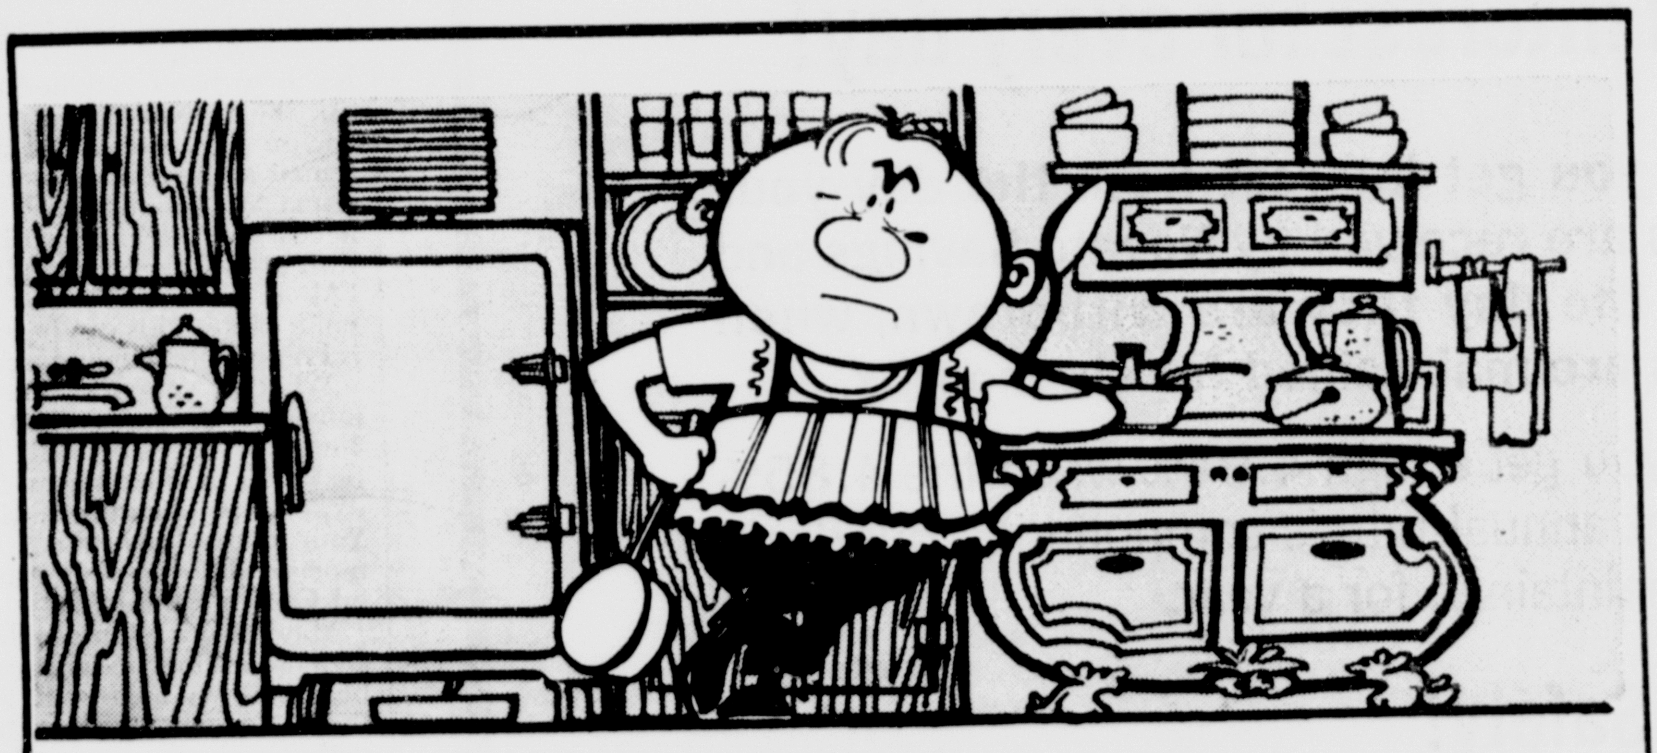

The average household plumbing system represents an investment of about 12 to 15 per cent of the value of the house.

No part of the house is more important. A smoothly functioning plumbing system is a protection of health, adds to the convenience of modern living, and safeguards the investment in the house.

The fundamentals of good plumbing may be summed up in the word quality — quality in fixtures and quality in installation.

If it's a quality system, the water flows freely from all faucets and valves and the waste water drains away quickly from all fixtures.

The importance of the concealed part of the plumbing system as well as the visible part, the plumbing fixtures, is explained in a booklet "What You Should Know About Plumbing" published by the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601. Price of the booklet is 15 cents.

A Mother's Day Suggestion—

Still without a Mother's Day gift for the woman of the house?

All is not lost.

There is something special about giving a plant on Mother's Day, and this year's selection is better than ever, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

ASK YOUR nurseryman to set the blooming plant of your choice in a handsome container. When the flowers are gone, the container can be used for arrangements of flowers from the garden.

Many gift plants get a second life after they are finished blooming in the house. For example, a potted chrysanthemum contains as many as five individual plants. All mother needs do is trim off the spent flowers and set the plants in a sunny location.

This summer and fall the 'mums will bloom again.

Mother's Day is a good time to add plants to the rose garden. Most varieties (including new introductions) will be showing buds and blooms in the nurseries, where they are growing in handy containers.

ASK YOUR nurseryman to set the plants, container and all, in a slightly larger redwood or ceramic planter. This gives mother the choice of setting the rose in the garden and growing a special plant in the planter, or growing the rose in the container.

With summer, and the beverage season coming up, how about a fruit-bearing dwarf citrus plant for a gift? There is nothing like a handy lime or lemon to add zest to a fruit drink, or iced tea. The fragrant flowers provide a second dividend from the useful citrus.

A gift of a dozen pelargoniums and geraniums will keep mother's garden alive with color from now through summer. They are available at your nursery in all sizes from small plants in bands to bushy specimens in one-gallon containers.

The Green Zinnia Has Arrived On Garden Scene

Ever think that you would live to see a green zinnia?

Well, it's here.

Envy, being introduced this year, is a soft apple-green (chartreuse) flower that grows two and a half feet tall. Blooms measure three to four inches across and vary in color on the same plant.

The flowers that are shaded by the foliage are slightly greener than those in full sunlight.

Growers can cover the plants with cheesecloth on sunny days to achieve a darker green flower without affecting growth.

The Envy zinnia, if you can find it (it will probably be in somewhat short supply for a time), will make a real conversation piece in the garden.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Weeding and feeding are high on the gardener's list this week. The spring rush of growth is underway, and the weeds are thriving too. Keep them from taking over by pulling shallow-rooted ones by hand, attacking stubborn ones with a good, sharp hoe, and using "selective" weed killers in lawns, and other areas your nurseryman recommends.
- Feed all established annuals and perennials this month to keep them growing vigorously. Lawns flourish with regular monthly light fertilizing. After azaleas and rhododendrons finish blooming, give them a feeding with acid fertilizer.
- You need not be without roses if you failed to plant during bareroot season. Nurseries have roses in bloom, growing in containers, ready for transplanting to your garden for immediate color and blooms. Floribundas in particular make excellent container plants to display on a sunny patio.
- If you are planning to put in a new lawn or reseed an old one, do it now so it will be started before the hot weather arrives. Regular, deep watering of established lawns forces the grass roots farther down into the soil so they can withstand periods of hot weather without damage.
- Set out asters, petunias, phlox, marigolds and zinnias now. You'll have a head start if you plant from small pots or plant bands.
- Set out plants of lettuce, tomatoes, eggplant and peppers this month.

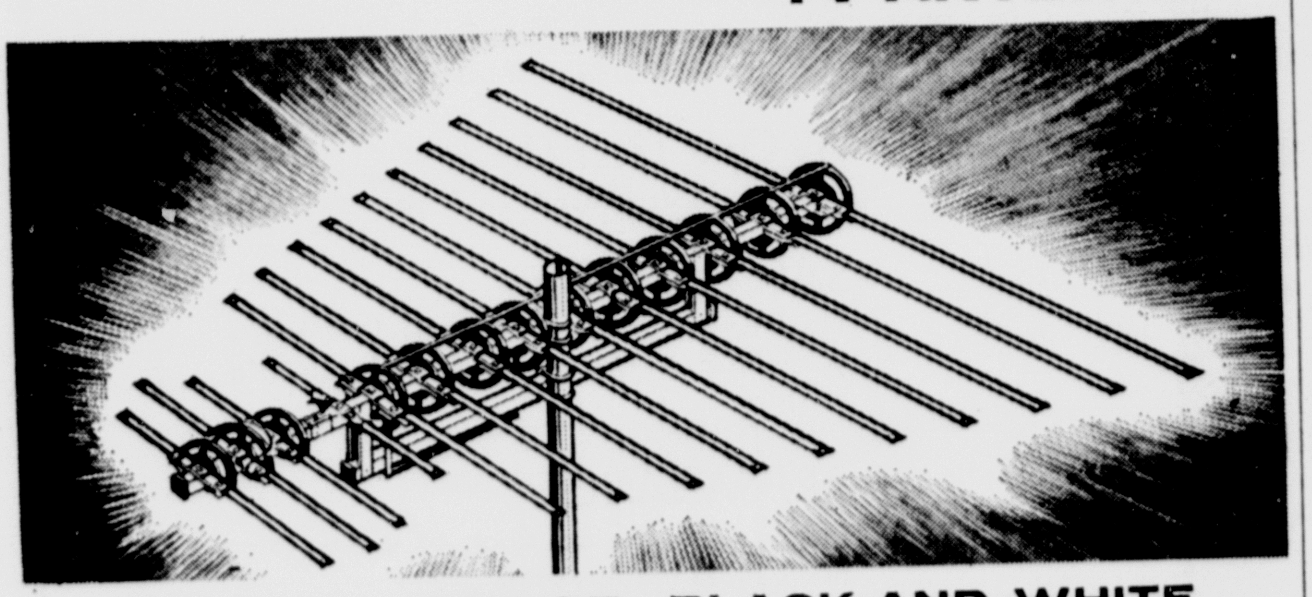

Takes you out to the ball game, right at home in your chair!

THE HISTORIC LANDING of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, Mass., is re-created in the ABC news special, "The Pilgrims," to be seen Monday at 7:30 p.m. on KGO-TV. To provide added authenticity for the program, part of the "Saga of Western Man" series, producer John H. Secondari obtained the use of this exact replica of the Mayflower.

WEEKEND SHOWS

Ike And Monty Remember

The CBS network special commemorating the 20th anniversary of V-E Day, "Europe, 20 Years After," and including reminiscences of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, will be repeated this evening at 9 o'clock on KPIX-TV.

KQED will re-show a one-hour performance of the Red Army Chorus and Dance Ensemble from London's Royal Albert Hall at 10:40 p.m.

The "Peace in Terris" convocation on the same channel at 9 o'clock will feature a discussion of U.S. peace and disarmament policies by a panel including Norman Cousins, Marya Mannes, Hans J. Morgenthau and Harold E. Stassen.

And controversial dam proposals for the Colorado River and its Grand Canyon will be explored on KQED at 8:30.

Best of the movies would seem to be the 1960 British comedy "School for Scoundrels" with Terry Thomas and Alastair Sim on KGO at 12:30 a.m. The superb team of Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant stars in "Indiscreet" on KRON at 6 o'clock. Charlton Heston is in the adventure film "The Naked Jungle" on that channel at 9. KGO features Robert Mitchum in "The Enemy Below" at 11:15. And KPIX shows a Gary Cooper western, "Man of the West," at 11:20.

Steve Lawrence is the "Hollywood Palace" host on KGO at 9:30 with a guest list including Mickey Rooney, Bobby Van and the Back Porch Majority.

SUNDAY, NBC-TV will report on the current status of the Republican Party on KRON at 5 p.m.

Sports fans can watch Colonial Invitational Golf competition on KTVU at 1:30 and hear Dizzy Dean and Pee Wee Reese discuss baseball on KPIX at 1 o'clock.

KGO offers three movies of more than ordinary interest. The Helen Keller story, "The Miracle Worker," with Anne Bancroft and Patty Duke, will be seen at 9 p.m. The James Mason spy thriller "Five Fingers" is scheduled for 5:30. And a three-hour 1938 spectacle, "Marie Antoinette," with Norma Shearer in the title role, is scheduled for 2 p.m.

KTVU will show the laughfest "The Golden Age of Comedy" at 3 p.m., and the touching "All Mine to Give" with Glynis Johns and Cameron Mitchell at 7 p.m.

KPIX has slated "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" with Gary Cooper for 11:35 p.m.

Ed Sullivan's lineup on KPIX at 8 p.m. includes the Three Stooges, Della Reese and Juliet Prowse.

Clergymen will look into the farm labor problem at 12:30 p.m. on KRON.

The TV Log For The Week

MR. SHOWMAN, Sammy Davis Jr., demonstrates his versatility when he stars in an hour-long special, "The Swinging World of Sammy Davis Jr.," on KGO-TV Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Sammy will sing, dance, mug, act, mimic and emcee. Among his guests will be two of his fellow "Golden Boy" Broadway cast members, Lola Falana and Billy Daniels. Also an hand for the fun and music will be Peter Lawford. It represents Sammy's first featured appearance in a TV spectacular, although he has been a frequent performer and guest on both musical and dramatic shows.

IN A BATTLEFIELD REUNION, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, left, and then President Dwight D. Eisenhower visited Gettysburg together in May of 1957. The two great wartime leaders are "meeting" again as they reminisce about their World War II experiences on the CBS news special, "Europe, Twenty Years After," commemorating the anniversary of V-E Day. Co-produced by CBS and the British Broadcasting Corp., the show was first seen via Early Bird satellite this afternoon, and will be repeated on KPIX tonight at 9 o'clock.

It's Automobile Show Time In Marin

By HARRY CRAFT

The Marin County "Showroom Auto Show," now celebrating its third year, has proved its worth in stimulating automobile sales.

Marin automobile registrations are higher than ever before and total more than 80,000 passenger cars. Marin families average 1.5 cars each—one of the highest averages in the state.

True, not all these are purchased here, but most of them are. And the increased tendency to buy from local dealers is noticeable. Indeed, several Marin dealers report frequent sales to out-of-town owners—an indication that trade-in allowances are as generous here as elsewhere.

THE SHOWROOM Auto Show had its origin in Marin as an effort to overcome a handicap. We have no auditorium or other indoor facility anywhere near large enough to accomodate both the vehicles which should go on display and the crowds which would be expected to view them.

There is no question that a gigantic, centralized showroom would have its advantages, but since we are without one it is a credit to local car dealers that they have joined in utilizing what they do have—attractive, individual showrooms, each quite suitable for a creditable display of that dealer's own latest models and tied in promotionally with all the others.

Why an automobile show in May?

WITH ALL due respect for the Marin Visitor's Bureau's "May in Marin," the show was not designed to become part of this program.

The time is just about midway between one series of new models and another. While basic styles now are still the same as last fall, some intermediate changes introduced since then will appeal to the many spring and early summer buyers who generally prefer to skip the first run of new models off the production line. Recently released higher powered Oldsmobile 88s, Ford Mustangs and Plymouth Barracudas are examples.

Trade-in allowances are also comparatively high at this time, and stocks of various models and styles are plentiful, allowing more freedom of choice and quicker deliveries.

One Big Year Follows Another For The Car Industry

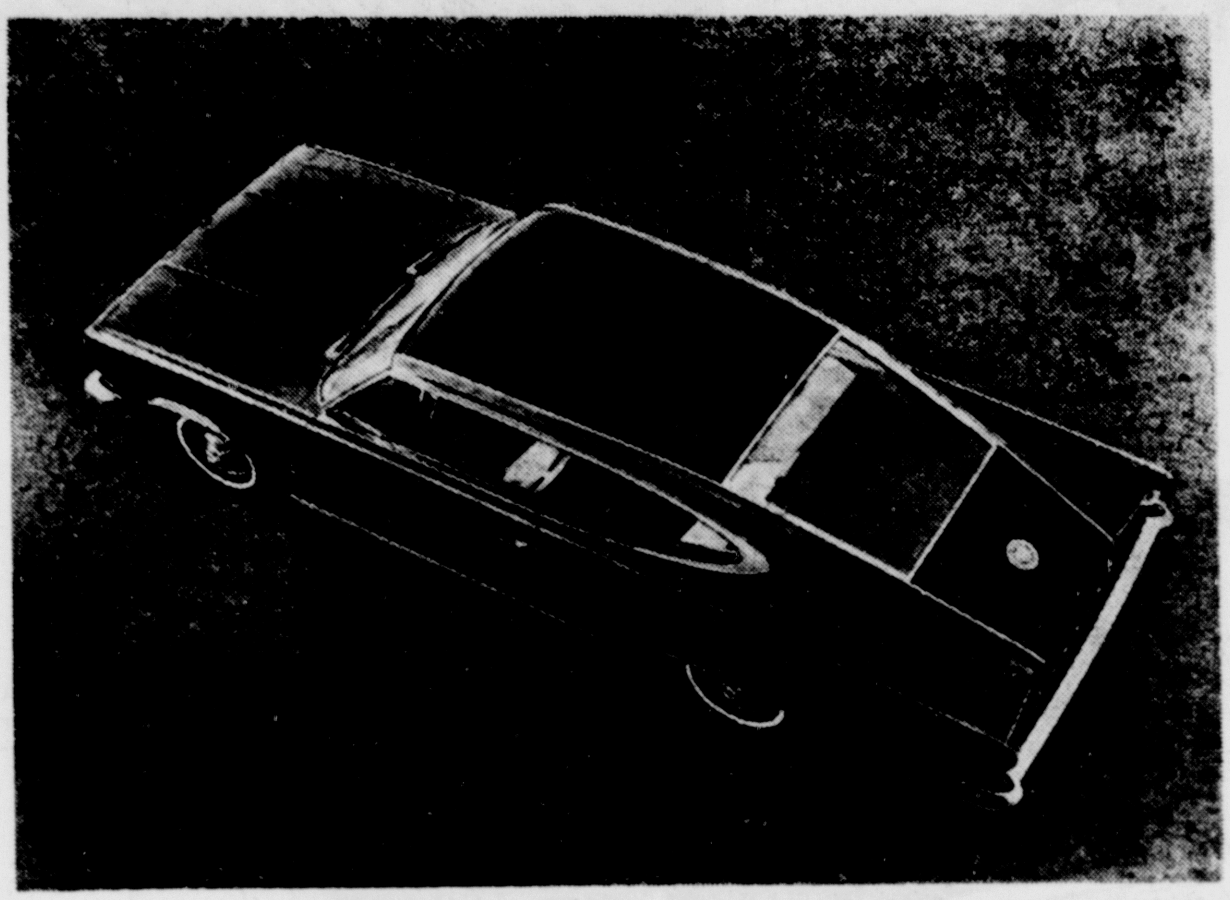

Production Records Set During 1964

The U.S. automobile industry rolled to its greatest year ever in total vehicle production during 1964, the Automobile Manufacturer's Assn. has noted.

Along with the record-shattering 9,307,443 vehicles turned out last year, U.S. manufacturers toppled two other records—total trucks and buses produced during a year and most cars built during a single month.

The highest-ever total for motor vehicles was better than the 9,204,049 turned out in 1955, said the association. In addition, the year-end truck total of 1,561,952 surpassed 1963 when 1,464,399 were produced.

The manufacturers also built a record 866,631 passenger cars in December, 1964—the highest ever for a single month. The previous record had been 799,375 in October of 1963.

THE ENTIRE ROOF PANEL of American Motors' new Marlin hardtop is outlined with a chrome molding which separates the two-tone finish and emphasizes the fastback styling effect. The straight front-to-rear fender line, capped by a chrome molding, accentuates the flowing roofline of the two-door Marlin hardtop. The Marlin has been the sensation of the late winter-early spring auto season.

1965 Is Off To An Even Faster Start

Five separate records tumbled in the first three months of 1965 as U.S. motor vehicle production raced to its highest quarterly and monthly totals.

Included in the record figures was the highest quarter ever, in total vehicle output — 3,013,668. The previous high until the January-February-March total this year had been the second quarter of 1964 when the total reached 2,746,045.

Also hitting a new high was monthly total vehicle production during March. The 1965 figure of 1,136,718 easily surpassed December of 1964 when 1,014,417 vehicles were produced.

Other record-setters include the highest quarter ever for passenger cars, 2,561,880; the highest month for passenger cars, 963,097, and the highest month for trucks and buses, 173,621.

THE "TURNPIKE TWIST" is a new dance that all new model Plymouths must master before their coming-out parties. Test engineers at this finishing school — the Chrysler Corporation Proving Grounds — insist that no new-model Plymouth is ready to be introduced to the public unless it behaves like a lady on this wracking road. The surface has precisely designed bumps and grinds which introduce un-ladylike vibrations into the body of any car unless its suspension system has the mechanical muscles to absorb them. If it does, the car from beltline up travels smoothly while tires and suspension absorb the shocks. The road is so constructed that either left or right side of the car may be tested independently for smoothness. Plymouth above is one taken at random from assembly line to assure that high pre-production standards are maintained.

They Find Out If Your Car Can Take It

That car of yours, as you probably know, takes quite a beating, and the way that it can be bumped and bounced and battered around is sometimes quite brutal.

Engineers at the automotive factories know what the cars they design are in for, and they go to no end of testing and trouble to make sure that these cars will be able to stand up under it all.

THEY TEST the strength and flexibility of the chassis and body by setting the car in what they lovingly call a "shake rig," a device that holds the front end of the car firm while it twists and turns the rear end just as it would be twisted and turned on the highway. They test the stiffness of the chassis and body by placing what would be a maximum passenger load in both front and back seats and then measuring the bending of the steel all along the car.

To check up on vibration and road noises, they set the car's wheels in revolving rollers that have offset cams and interchangeable cylinders, and then, with the touch of a dial, they can simulate the car's traveling over any kind of road surface at any kind of speed. Vibrations thus set up throughout the whole car are carefully measured by delicate meters and charted on graphs so that performance characteristics can be studied.

Rattles, squeaks, chatters, and hums are all recorded on a sound recorder so that the deficiency of sound absorbing materials may be detected and corrected.

ON THE ROAD in summer and winter it is important that your car keep out both dust and water, and its ability to do so is always being carefully checked at the factory. Engineers place a car in a specially constructed room, blow chalk dust into the room, create a partial vacuum in the car by pumping out some of the air, and then check to see what dust has been sucked in and where. Then again they will shoot as much as 500 gallons of water at a body from 30 high-pressure jets or drive a car through a 1,000-foot "bathtub" at 60 miles an hour, just to make sure that everything is watertight.

Other tests bring out the weakness or strength of other construction features and by the time the engineers are through with a car it really has proved that it is ready to "take it."

THE 1965 CAR TRENDS

The Automobiles Are Wider And Longer Offering You Greater Value and Variety

Following the trend of the past several years, the 1965 model cars reflect increased value while offering the prospective buyer the widest choice of body styles, engines, transmissions and suspension systems in the history of the industry.

This year he may select from 343 body styles, up from 336 last year.

A wide range of optional equipment also permits him to tailor the basic car to fill almost any need or desire.

SETTING A new high for a single year, 16 passenger car bodies are all new and 10 other lines have made sweeping changes. Most models are longer, wider and offer greater interior space.

The improved performance trend is continued with vehicles operating better under all kinds of driving conditions.

Increased use of galvanized steel and changes in car design to keep water from collecting in underbody areas add to corrosion resistance. Aluminum trim is in wider use than a year ago but stainless steel still pre-dominates.

MANUFACTURERS this year offer 40 different basic engines, a new high for the industry. In addition a wide range of optional equipment, such as multiple carburetors and special camshafts, augment these basic powerplants.

Much of the improved performance in the '65 engines results from larger valves contributing to better breathing. Better design also provides more power output per pound of engine weight. Cylinder wall thickness has been reduced and combustion chambers are more efficient.

Engines run quieter and greater care has been taken to stop engine noise and vibration from reaching the passenger compartment.

Many cars have increased fuel tank capacity and a number are utilizing cross flow or horizontal radiators instead of the traditional vertical type.

SEVERAL CARS have adopted perimeter type frames and a number are offering new rear axles and improved ball joints in their suspension systems.

In the transmission field, variable pitch stator blades appear to be favored over fixed position blades. A definite trend is showing this year in a switch from two-speed to three-speed automatic transmissions.

The call for "four-on-the-floor" manual transmissions is exceeding anticipated demands.

Less noticeable but equally important is the large number of transmission refinements that are making possible smoother and more accurate automatic shifting, particularly in the middle range of operation.

Brakes show a big improvement with a number of cars featuring increased ribs and flanges to aid heat dissipation. The tendency of some vehicles to shudder under certain stopping conditions has been reduced.

Disc brakes are coming into prominence this year appearing on 10 different lines of cars, usually as optional equipment. With one exception, this marks the first time disc brakes have been used on American cars since 1949 and the first time this type brake is being used on a heavy car.

NEW FRAME designs linked with curved glass side windows are providing increased passenger comfort through greater shoulder, hip and leg room.

Flatter front doors and larger entrances and exits are features of many models. Several have completely redesigned their ventilating systems to provide a larger supply of fresh air and to minimize wind noise.

Engineers have been paying increased attention to the various elements of the electrical system seeking to fool-proof the entire network. The '65s reflect this work most noticeably in the ignition system.

Included in numerous other improvements for the new models are windshield wipers that clean larger areas, interval adjustable wipers, third seat heaters for station wagons, telescoping steering columns, simplified air conditioning and heater controls, and systems that lock or unlock all four doors simultaneously.

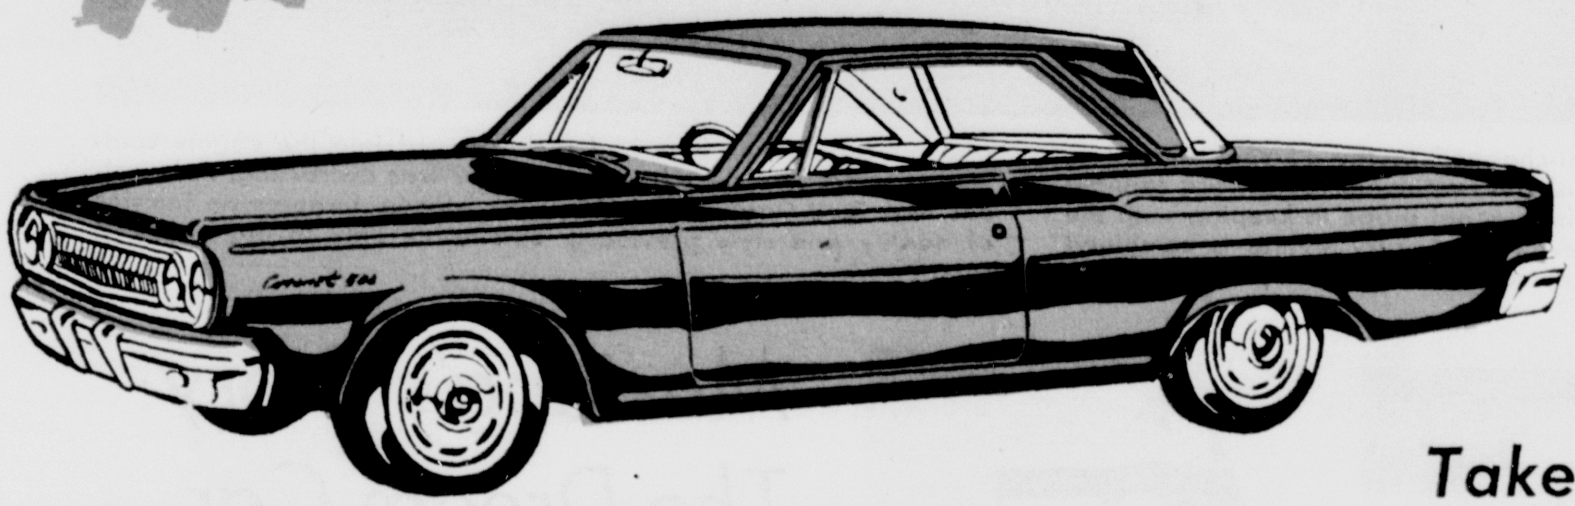

Tension Check Can Prolong Fan Belt Life

The life of a car fan belt can be prolonged by an occasional checkup of the tension.

Most car owners realize that a tight fan belt is under a constant and destructive strain, points out National Automobile Club, but many motorists forget that a slipping belt is also subjected to excessive wear through friction caused by the rubbing of the slipping pulleys.

The right adjustment for long belt life lies between the two extremes and an occasional examination of the belt will help to maintain the correct tension.

THE 1965 FORD IS THE most-changed in the 15-year history of Ford Motor Co.'s Ford Division. The traditional round Ford taillight is replaced by a modernistic hexagonal shape in keeping with the crisp, elegant look of the new Ford. Luxury styling is combined with a luxury ride described as so smooth and so quiet the heater and air conditioner fans had to be moved into the engine compartment because their low-toned whirr was distracting. A luxurious new Ford Galaxie 500 LTD series, above, features an interior of quality and style previously obtainable only in higher-priced cars.

Mustang's Story: The Dream Car That Became Reality

The popular Ford Mustang is a "dream car" come true.

Within a month after its introduction, the racy new Mustang had established itself as an unqualified sales success. It quickly proved to be the best-selling new model automobile ever introduced.

Underlying this success story is the appealing styling of the Mustang. The design of the Mustang is a tribute to Ford Motor Co.'s continuing program of advanced styling — evidence that "dream cars" are styling forerunners of production cars.

THE CORPORATE Projects Studio at the Ford Styling Center in Dearborn is responsible for investigation of new automotive types, sizes and shapes.

As early as 1961 several "sporty" vehicles were designed in this studio under the direction of chief stylist Robert H. Maguire. Three which helped establish the "package" dimen-

A NEW LOOK of size and motion is combined in the 1965 Fairlane, restyled from bumper to bumper for the first time since its introduction three years ago. Although new styling makes the middleweight Fairlane look bigger, it remains about the size of the 1956 Ford on the outside and the 1959 Ford on the inside. Improved ride and economy; new low-profile tires for greater directional stability; better traction and longer life; significantly improved interior quietness; alternators and automatic chokes standard on all engines; and a complete line of options including low-cost air conditioning are features of all 1965 Fairlanes including the Fairlane Sports Coupe (top). Power tailgate window, locking storage compartment and chrome luggage rack are among special items available for the Fairlane 500 Stotion Wagon (below).

PROGRESSIVE REFINEMENTS to its classic styling and additional mechanical improvements are offered by Lincoln Continental for 1965. Skilled craftsmanship in manufacture and assembly produce a car of unmistakable quality which justly fulfills its role as the nation's prestige car. Power disc brakes on the front are standard for 1965, as the Lincoln Continental attains new peaks in roadability. America's only four-door convertible is offered, in addition to the four-door sedan shown above.

'Ingredients' For Ford Come From All Over The Globe

Dearborn writes the automotive recipe, but it calls on the whole world for the ingredients.

There's a bit of Turkey in the bumpers, a dash of Cyprus in the brakes, and a touch of Egypt in the upholstery of the automobiles that roll off the assembly lines of Ford Motor Co. plants throughout the United States.

Raw material shipments earmarked for Ford may originate in trading centers of South America, Mexico, Africa, Europe, Australia or the Philippines.

STRANGE, EXOTIC sounding names often appear on bills of lading.

Take San Luis Potosi, Mexico, for instance. This south-of-the-border town ships some 10,000 gross tons of fluorspar each year by rail via Tampico. Fluorspar is a mineral used as a flux in iron and steelmaking, and Ford also buys it in Newfoundland and Dakar, West Africa. Ferromanganese, also used in steelmaking, comes from France and Japan.

In a typical year, Ford purchasers must find sources for approximately $3.5 billion worth of materials and services. A sizeable part of this sum represents foreign imports. Buying abroad not only permits Ford to continue improving the quality of its products, but also spurs the economies of world markets so they in turn buy more of the finished products stamped "Made in USA."

BESIDES THE foreign shipments of raw materials to Ford's Rouge Plant, many other imports go to its thousands of supplier firms.

Tires, fan belts, weather stripping, hoses and floor mats use rubber from the trees of Malaysia. Cork for gaskets originates in Algeria, Portugal and Spain.

Chromite is shipped from the Philippines, Turkey and South Africa, and nickel ore comes in from Canada to suppliers who use it in stainless steel and bright plating.

Bauxite ore from British Guiana, Jamaica and Surinam becomes aluminum for car body trim, panels, grilles, pistons and transmission parts.

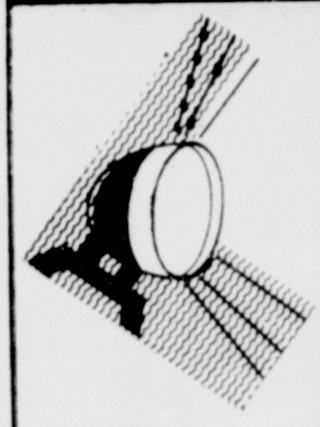

THE COPPER in electric wiring and radiators has its origin in Chile, Canada and several South African countries. Lead used in solder, batteries and gasoline is derived from ore shipped half way around the world from Australia, French Guiana, and South America.

Bolivia and Cyprus furnish asbestos for brake linings. Scottish and Canadian hides are used in making leather upholstery, and Egyptian and Mexican cottons become bodycloth.

New Caledonia, Brazil, India Peru and many other nations more than 50 in all—have a hand in Ford Motor Co.'s foremost product.

MERCURY FOR 1965 is crafted in the Lincoln Continental tradition with three inches more in wheelbase and over-all length. It has a new torque box frame and rigid body design with coil spring rear suspension for greater riding comfort. Mercury's unique Breezeway ventilation with retracting back window is offered in a four-door sedan model in the Monterey and Montclair series as well as in the Park Lane, pictured above.

IMPROVED PERFORMANCE with increased fuel economy for gas savings up to 15 per cent have been achieved in the tastefully restyled Ford Falcon for 1965. More powerful engines — including a redesigned 206-cubic-inch Six with seven main bearings for added smoothness — combine with three-speed Cruise-O-Matic or three-speed manual transmissions for the economy and performance improvement. New interiors and new instrument panel ornamentation; new low-profile tires; improved steering responsiveness; alternators and automatic chokes on all engines; and larger fuel tanks are other 1965 Falcon features. Falcon for 1965 offers 13 models, including the Falcon Squire Wagon (above).

ENTERING ITS second decade, the 1965 Thunderbird continues its styling and engineering leadership with such advanced features as front wheel disc brakes standard equipment on all models. Other 1965 Thunderbird standard equipment owner-benefit features include distinctive sequential turn signals which create a light pattern in the turning direction, reversible keys which may be inserted into ignition and trunk locks either side up, keyless door locking, and a dome light on convertible models. New or revised options include an AM/FM radio on which all five push buttons may be used for AM or FM operation, an electric antenna, power vent windows, a vacuum deck lid release, and a limited slip differential. The three 1965 Thunderbird models are the Landau, the convertible, (above) and the hardtop.

sions for the 1965 Mustang were called the Mina, Median and the Open Sports Car.

Of these, the Median attracted the most favorable attention of Gene Bordinat, Ford vice president and director of styling, and other officers of the company. The Median captured the styling "feel" of the 1955-1957 two-passenger Thunderbirds but was designed to seat four people.

DURING THIS same period, the Corporate Projects Studio developed the Allegro, using the Taunus 12-M engine and chassis components to create a sleek car quite unlike the sturdy, utilitarian 12-M made by Ford of Germany. The Allegro's long hood and protruding grille, which thrusts ahead of the headlamps, obviously influenced the Ford stylists who ultimately were assigned to design the production Mustang.

In conjunction with Ford Division, the Corporate Projects Studio continued design explorations of sporty, four-passenger cars during 1962. Ford management reviewed two models in May, gave the code name Avventura to one of them, and asked the stylists to pursue its styling theme in greater detail. In all, 13 variations of the theme were developed and reviewed.

ANOTHER assignment was handed to Maguire and his staff while they were working out the 13 Avventura models: to design a two-passenger sports-racer. By October of that year, the sensational two-passenger Mustang was ready for introduction to the public as a one-of-a-kind experimental vehicle.

With uncluttered aerodynamic styling and such innovations as fixed seats, movable foot pedals and an adjustable steering column, the Mustang evoked enthusiasm both in the United States and throughout Europe. Encouraged by the favorable response to the original Mustang model, the company decided to extend its search to include a sporty car that could carry four passengers.

By then the exploratory work of the Corporate Projects Studio had paved the way for production styling of such a car. In August, 1962, three different studios were asked to submit designs to top management for review. Seven models were produced, including four by the Corporate Projects Studio.

THE FORD Studio, under the direction of chief stylist Joseph Oros, created the model that was selected as the car to be built in volume. At that time, it was given the code name Cougar, complete with a Cougar emblem in the grille mouth where the familiar galloping Mustang appears today.

When the styling of the Cougar (later to be named Mustang) was given final approval by top management, a show-car version of this design, called Mustang II, was fabricated and introduced to the public. It was not an exact duplicate—front fender configuration was different, the roofline was a little lower, and no bumpers were included in the Mustang II.

But it was close enough to the design of the then-secret production car to serve as a valuable market research tool. Favorable response to the Mustang II's styling, and to its sporty two-plus-two concept, confirmed management's judgment that the Mustang could be a successful new entry in the automobile market.

MUSTANG'S styling obviously is indebted to the heritage of the Lincoln Continental and Thunderbird models that preceded it.

But with its low price tag, the Mustang aptly is described by Bordinat as "the car for the masses with styling for the elite."

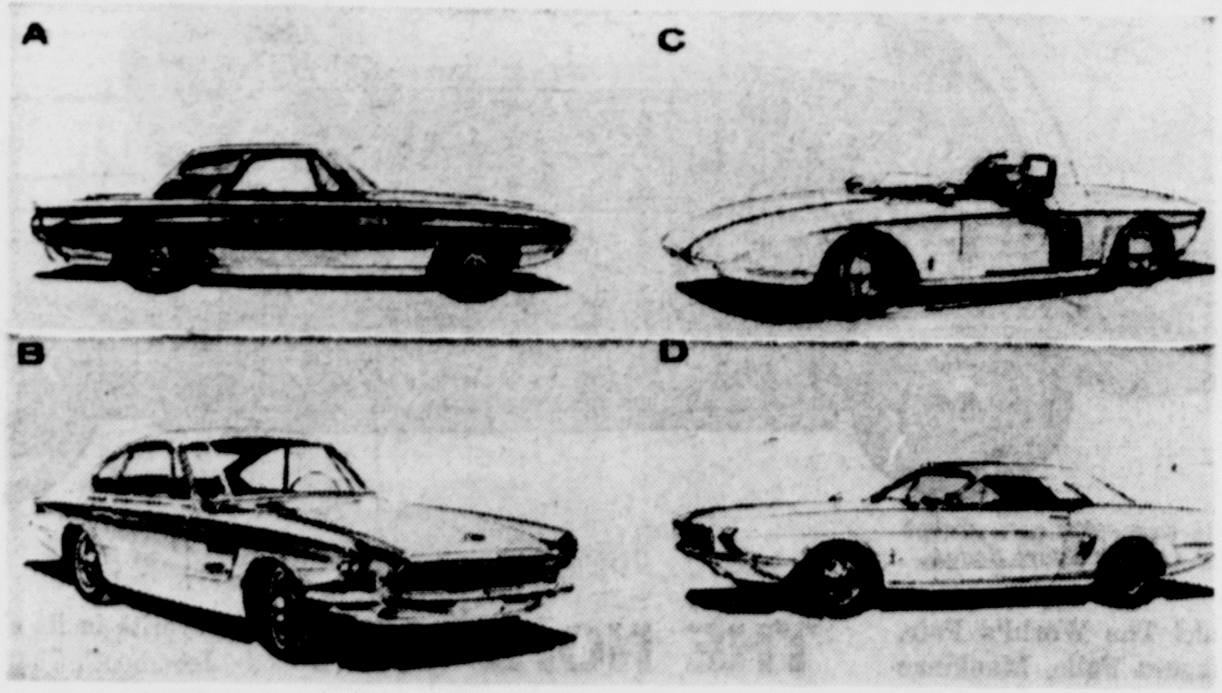

Driving Manual Offered Free To Teen-Agers

The 1965 edition of the teen-age safe driving handbook, "How to Earn the Key to Dad's Car," now is off the presses.

The third issue of the popular booklet — published by Lincoln-Mercury Division of Ford Motor Co. — features a message from Carolyn Mignini, 1965 Miss Teen-age America, with 10 pages of safe and skillful driving hints, a page of tips "for parents only," and the useful Teen-age Driver's Pledge.

Last year, some 1,100,000 copies of the 1964 edition of the booklet were distributed to fill requests from teen-agers, parents of teen-agers, driving instructors and schools, police departments, traffic courts and other local and national government groups.

As in the past, "How to Earn the Key to Dad's Car" booklets may be obtained free by writing Teen Driving, 3000 Schaefer Road, Dearborn, Mich.

FOUR OF THE "dream cars" that preceded the public introduction of the Ford Mustang are shown above, showing how styling experimental cars are forerunners of production models. A — The Median was the first of many models in the Mustang design program. It had much of the styling "feel" of the two-passenger Thunderbird, but was designed to carry four people. B — The Allegro, first shown publicly in 1962, had a fastback roof much like the Mustang 2-plus-2. Its hood and grille design obviously influenced designers of the production Mustang. C — Another 1962 project was the original Mustang two-passenger sports car. Encouraged by the favorable response to this X-Car, Ford stylists extended the search for a sporty car that could carry four passengers. D—The Mustang II was introduced in 1963 as a market research vehicle. Extremely favorable response confirmed Ford's belief that such a new car could become a large-volume seller.

SPORTY LUXURY of the completely new 1965 standard Chevrolet lineup is accented by the styling of this Impala sport coupe. Emphasizing this appearance is the new "sweepline" roof and curved side glass. All 15 standard Chevrolet models are longer, wider and lower in 1965 and roomier where it counts inside. Chassis advances include a new perimeter frame and wider tread along with new suspension design for greater ride and handling characteristics.

ADHESIVES THAT STICK, HOLD TONS

Can you, who have trouble successfully gluing together your wife's favorite but broken teapot, imagine a single drop of a fantastic new adhesive that would stick two pieces of steel together securely enough to support the weight of a two-and-a-half-ton truck?

Phenomenally strong new adhesive compounds which can do just that and even more are already in use by industry in hundreds of less spectacular but more profitable ways.

The auto industry is rapidly becoming one of the major users of synthetic adhesives, using them instead of rivets, clips, screws, bolts and frequently, in place of welds.

American-built passenger cars contain anywhere from eight to 25 pounds of adhesives in their construction, with the average about 10. This means that about 35,000 to 40,000 tons of these new miracle glues — most of which were unknown less than 10 years ago—were used by the auto industry in 1964.

THE CORVAIR CARS underwent their first major styling change in five years as well as significant mechanical changes for 1965, becoming longer, wider and lower, and with a new shape that has an international sports flavor. At top is one of the new Corsa models, a convertible, that are newcomers to the Corvair ranks, replacing the Spyders at the top of the line. In lower photo is the convertible of the popular Monza line.

New Tires And Ivy League Look

It's the "low profile," a kind of Ivy League look with gently rounded shoulders replacing the usual squared appearance at the tread.

The source for the name can be seen easily by examining a cross-section of one of the new tires. The height has been decreased while the width has been increased to give a flat oval look.

The change wasn't made for appearance, however, but to bring a wide range of improvements. Included are better cornering, less rolling resistance to increase fuel economy, longer tread wear, reduced tire squeal, more skid resistance and a greater ability to withstand the heat build-up from sustained freeway driving speeds.

Use of the low profile tire lowers car height about a half inch or permits use of a larger wheel without the need for enlarging wheel wells. For this reason they also can be used as replacement tires for earlier model cars although the tire size will be different.

For example, a 6.00-14 size tire would be replaced by a 6.45-14 and a 6.50-15 by a 7.35-15.

A HIGHLIGHT in Pontiac's 1965 lineup is the 2 Plus 2 option shown above. Available in the Catalina sports coupe and convertible models, the 2 Plus 2 offers many exclusive interior and exterior features. Standard equipment includes Pontiac's high-performance 421-cubic-inch engine with four-barrel carburetion and a three-speed synchromesh transmission with floor shift. Body paint stripes just below the fender upper peak extend the full length of the car and bucket seats come in four colors and are trimmed in expanded Morrokide. Lower left shows the simulated louvers on the lower front fender to the rear of the wheel opening and the 421 emblem back of the head lamps. The popular Pontiac vertical mounted head lamps and distinctive 2 Plus 2 emblem are shown lower right. Also included in the 2 Plus 2 option is a dual exhaust system.

THE POPULAR Pontiac option, the GTO, is shown here on the Tempest LeMans convertible series. The GTO offers a rare combination of stylish appearance and peak road performance. It has a new hood with a distinctive center intake and a special instrument cluster backing plate for 1965. A premium fuel 389-cubic-inch engine with four-barrel carburetor and a three-speed synchromesh transmission are standard equipment on the GTO.

Don't Be Too Sure It's The Other Guy's Fault

Some drivers are so busy criticizing the driving technique of "the other guy" that they have no time to examine their own.

Whenever they drive down the street or highway, points out the National Automobile Club, they spend most of their time criticizing that "other guy."

They criticize the way he makes his signals, the way he makes his turns, the way he weaves back and forth from lane to lane. They criticize the way he starts, the way he stops, and the speed he cruises at. And when he gets in an accident, they feel that that was to be expected because accidents always happen to "the other guy."

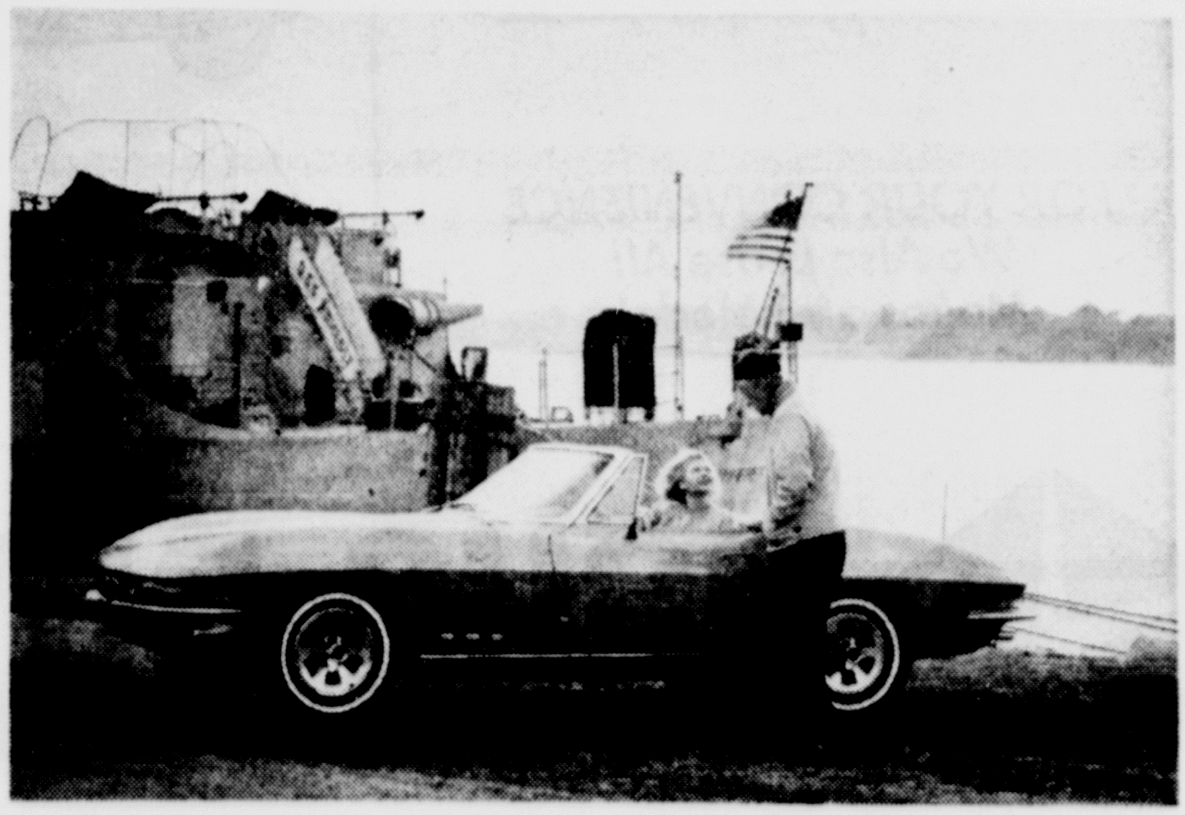

Accidents, however, don't always happen to "the other guy." Sometimes they happen to you. And poor driving technique isn't always the failing of "the other guy." Sometimes it's the failing of you.

Have you examined your own driving lately? Have you looked at it objectively and studied how it might be improved? Check up on the way you drive out from the curb, on the way you cross at intersections.

Remember, to these other drivers, you are "the other guy."

THE SPIRITED Oldsmobile Cutlass for '65 has taken on a new appearance with new exterior molding, front bumper, grille, head lamps, fenders, hood, rear bumper and tail lights. Shown is the popular Holiday coupe, one of three F-85 Cutlass models. A Cutlass 315 horsepower V-8 engine with four-barrel carburetor, combined with the smooth Jetaway transmission (optional), provides exhilarating performance.

THE CORVETTE STING RAY registered another first with four-wheel disc brakes as standard equipment for 1965. The new caliper-type disc brakes are virtually fade-free and are enhanced by 1965 styling refinements. Adding to the sportiness, a telescoping steering column is among optional equipment for the Corvette in 1965. Offered along with the convertible is the Corvette Sting Ray sport coupe.

NEWEST BUICK MODEL is this 1965½ version of the Skylark — the Skylark Gran Sport — with new roof and side treatment, plus new ventiports and other features. It's a completely new model — performance-oriented with a V-8 engine of 400 cubic inch displacement that revs up 325 horsepower. To match this performance the Gran Sport has heavy duty springs and shocks, huskier rear axle and new brakes, plus a heavier stabilizer bar. A reinforced convertible frame is used in the three Gran Sport models — two-door hardtop, convertible and two-door sport coupe.

THIS 1965 CADILLAC Calais Sedan shows the new thin pillar design that has replaced the six window body style in the De Ville and Calais series. It marks the first time since 1957 that a thin pillar has been used in a Cadillac sedan except for the nine passenger models. Tastefully complimenting the new exterior look are 150 interior options, 26 more than in 1964.

AUTOMOBILE ACCESSORIES

There's Added Comfort, Safety Available To Car Buyer Today

Like the shopper in a huge supermarket, today's car buyer faces an avalanche of choices when it comes to selecting accessories for his new automobile.

Never before has there been such a variety of equipment available to provide the driver with the comforts of home, remind him of tasks he must perform or generally make his trip a safer one.

If he's so inclined, the music-minded motorist can order a cartridge-type magnetic tape recorder that is mounted under the dashboard and plays through a radio speaker.

OR HE CAN specify something as conventional as bucket seats, air conditioning or windshield washers.

He can select from a rainbow of colors or a practically unlimited combination of devices that will stamp his vehicle as distinctive.

Auto styling officials believe that this almost endless choice could result in there being no two cars exactly the same on the nation's streets and highways.

The automotive marketing picture wasn't always this attractive to the buyer.

The driver of the early 1900s considered himself fortunate to have a roof over his head to protect him from the elements as he perked along in his touring car.

NOW, AS THE nation's living standards continue to climb, accessories once considered as luxuries are taken for granted. The heater, the cigar lighter and sun visor are good examples of this.

For the most part, little effort is spared by manufacturers to insure that today's owner is able to personalize his car in the most obvious or most subtle way.

There are upholstery combinations, for instance, that run the color spectrum from palomino to burgundy hues. Such innovations as the trip odometer, the parking brake warning light, the fuel warning lamp, and the electric door lock signal have been installed on the instrument panel for the forgetful and the curious.

THE WOMAN of the house has found it easier to slip into the driver's seat with the advent of the adjustable steering wheel that allows for more room when needed. Once she's behind the wheel, she can help reduce driving fatigue by using a "floating" accelerator pedal and power adjustable seats.

For the woman who feels a quick "once over" is important before she steps out at her destination, a mirror is available on the backs of some sun visors. A tissue dispenser can be put within easy reach, too.

Safety-conscious drivers are particularly interested in features such as padded dashboards, sun visors and recessed steering wheels. Also readily available now for the same purpose are retractable seat belts, shoulder belts, emergency flashers, back-up lights, head rests, automatic speed control devices and remote controlled side view mirrors.

THE NEW model cars are flooded with more lights than ever before. There are instrument panel courtesy lights, ashtray and glove compartment lamps, one for under the hood and another for the luggage compartment.

One manufacturer notes that in 1962 more than 87 per cent of the buyers of one of its models specified the inclusion of white wall tires. Another 55 per cent felt their new cars should be equipped with windshield washers and 55.8 per cent wanted radios.

Just about the fastest growing feature in popularity has been the air conditioner. The total installed topped the million mark for the first time in 1962. The estimated number for 1964 is one and a half million.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF ROBBER

Not all the highway robbers went out with the horse.

We may not have to worry about Black Bart any more, but we could do some worrying about underinflated tires or faulty plugs.

According to the National Automobile Club, tires that are under-inflated just five pounds can cost you half a gallon of gasoline out of every 20, dirty air filters can steal about 10 per cent of your mileage, and poor compression, faulty plugs, and slow-acting chokes can pick plenty of pennies from your pocket at the gas pump.

Avoiding such losses can add up to many dollars in savings in a comparatively short time.

Cars Are Needing Less And Less Maintenance From Their Buyers

Few auto engineers will make a flat prediction of a totally maintenance-free car in the future.

Nevertheless, these practical-minded men continue to make long strides in that direction.

Today's cars are a far cry from the day when the oilcan and the tool box were carried in every car and owners zealously checked the engine oil level daily. Greatest change in this area has taken place in the past few years with every American car manufacturer lengthening the recommended period between oil changes and lubrications.

MUCH OF THIS has resulted from oil company research leading to the development of improved lubricants. Engine oil, for example, now contains detergents and other additives that keep moving parts free of impurities and neutralize harmful acids.

Chemicals added to greases used for lubricating chassis points make it difficult for the grease to rub or wash out while better seals aid in keeping impurities out and grease in.

But oil and grease are only two maintenance items that have been upgraded in recent years. Improved operation and longer wearing qualities are also noted in brakes and brake linings, batteries, tires, muffler systems, spark plugs, distributor points and headlamps, all requiring periodic maintenance and replacement.

MAJOR OVERHAULS of the engine or component parts, once the bread and butter of the mechanic, now are the exception rather than the rule.

A look through an owner's manual of the 1930's reveals a recommendation that some 26 points in the car be serviced every 1,000 miles.

Twice a year it was recommended that the rear axle housing and the transmission be drained, flushed out with kerosene and refilled with fresh lubricant.

The manual also pointed out the periodic need for such services as grinding the valves, adjusting or replacing connecting rods and bearings, and adjusting the clutch. Such services are seldom required today except on cars with very high mileage.

NEARLY ALL new cars today are equipped with self adjusting brakes that require the driver merely to back up and apply the brakes a few times to get them back in a positive operating condition. Backing out of driveways and parking spaces usually takes care of the requirements where once the mechanic had to make the adjustment on each wheel with a special wrench.

The annual spring-time ceremony of draining out the antifreeze and flushing out the radiator is gradually becoming a thing of the past with the development of year-round engine coolants.

Fan belts, at one time a common replacement item, seldom fail now even though they are smaller and subjected to heavier loads than a few years ago. Helping prolong battery life and assuring easy starting has been the replacement of the generator by an alternator, which charges the battery even with the engine idling.

IN KEEPING with the need for less maintenance and repair are new quality control methods employed by car makers. Not only do these help keep car owners out of garages but they aid in holding down car costs.

While the auto makers continue to push for the care-free car, they still advise strict adherence to the recommended maintenance practices outlined in the owner's manual for happy, trouble-free driving.

But Good Care Still Pays Off At Trade-In

The key to receiving the top price for your automobile when you trade it in is in the care you give it from the day you bring your new car home for the first time, according to Gary B. Hogan, national used car manager for Pontiac Motor Division.

Hogan pointed out several important items which, if attended to when the car is new, will give the owner more pleasure as he drives it and will prolong the "brand new" appearance, making it more valuable at trade-in time. He listed these items:

1. Purchase the proper color of touch-up paint and use it to cover minor scratches and nicks before they could develop into possible troublesome rust areas.
2. Keep the car clean and bright by washing it every other week and waxing it periodically. Waxing is particularly important in the spring as it protects the finish against dust and abrasive dirt left over from winter.
3. Take your car back to your dealer for recommended guardian maintenance and engine tune-ups. This will insure all parts of your care are running properly and will prevent unnecessary wear and tear to all working components of your car.

A DRY CLOTH or dry paper towel should not be used to clean the windshield, Hogan pointed out. Such constant "dry cleaning" will fill the windshield with minute scratches, making it look old before its time.

Several tips to keep in mind when it comes time to trade in a car were also listed by Hogan.

The entire inside of the car should be vacuumed and the trunk cleaned. Floor covering should be cleaned and torn mats replaced. A quality cleaner, either for vinyl or cloth, will remove any dirt and stains from the upholstery and the headliner or ceiling of the car. All interior metal parts should be cleaned and waxed.

All accessories, such as radio or air conditioner, should be in working order.

"DON'T BUY A set of cheap, worn tires and put them on the car just before you take it to the dealer," Hogan warned. "The tires could tell a false tale and in any event the dealer will replace them lowering your trade-in allowance."

"Take a peek at our new paneled family room"

"Over 18 feet long and more than six feet wide— the neighbors are simply green.

Power outlets? Glad you asked. 383 2-bbl. V8 standard; 383 4-bbl., 413 and 426 V8's optional. Other performance options include a Sure Grip differential and a trailer towing package. Two- or three-seat models available to suit your fancy. Custom 880 wagon—best-looking room on the road.

Assisting The Thief—

While the veracity of the old adage, "honor among thieves," is highly questionable, the auto thief, on the other hand, is surely held in high esteem by his fellow lawbreakers.

He is very likely the most successful among his breed, for four out of five times he goes unapprehended.

As some 460,000 car owners were made acutely aware in 1964, auto theft is on the increase. That's how many cars were stolen throughout the nation last year, according to the National Automobile Theft Bureau, an agency that assists in the recovery of stolen vehicles and actively promotes theft prevention.

THEFTS IN 1964 actually were up 16 per cent over the previous year, a "theft frequency" of one in 156. That is, one of every 156 cars was stolen last year, compared with one in every 237 just 10 years ago.

In spite of the efforts of the bureau as well as all law enforcement agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, between 10 and 20 per cent of all stolen cars are never recovered and only one such culprit in five is caught and convicted.

A major aid to enforcement agencies in retrieving stolen cars is the Auto Identification Manual, prepared by the AMA and containing representative photographs of all makes of U.S. cars produced since 1951. Police departments find the manual useful in identifying quickly the type of automobile they are seeking when an owner reports his car is stolen.

AUTO THEFT is generally considered to be "a young man's game," if such a casual term can be used to discribe a criminal activity. In fact, the majority of all persons arrested in stolen cars are less than 18 years old.

The so-called "joy - riding" thief, who steals a car and drives it at dangerous speeds and in a generally reckless manner until it runs out of gasoline, constitutes an extremely serious problem. The recovery rate for this type of car theft is favorable, but the car has often been badly damaged or vandalized when it is eventually restored to the owner.

There are scores of professional theft rings operating throughout the country and the motorist unfortunate enough to have his vehicle stolen by one of these thieves might not even recognize the car when and if he sees it again.

A POLICE department that reports such a "recovered" auto may in reality be referring to a bare chassis—the original vehicle having been stripped of its engine, transmission, tires, accessories and even the steering wheel. Many such recoveries are burned hulks, with the valuable parts removed and what remained set afire to hide clues.

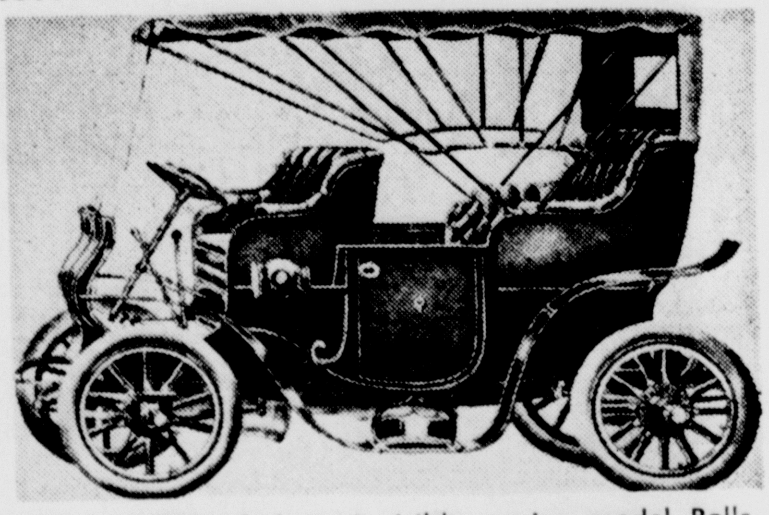

Most authorities are in agreement on one thing: The car thief's closest ally is the car owner himself, for it is he who leaves the doors unlocked, the windows ajar, the keys in the ignition or the vehicle itself parked in an unlighted, mostly deserted area. Any one of these is the equivalent of an engraved invitation to a car thief.

American auto manufacturers are working continuously to reduce car thefts by making it as difficult as possible for the thief to enter, start or drive away the vehicle. They are aware that every additional second a thief requires to steal the car serves as a deterrent. Door locks have been made increasingly secure and the modern ignition system is not easy to "jimmy."

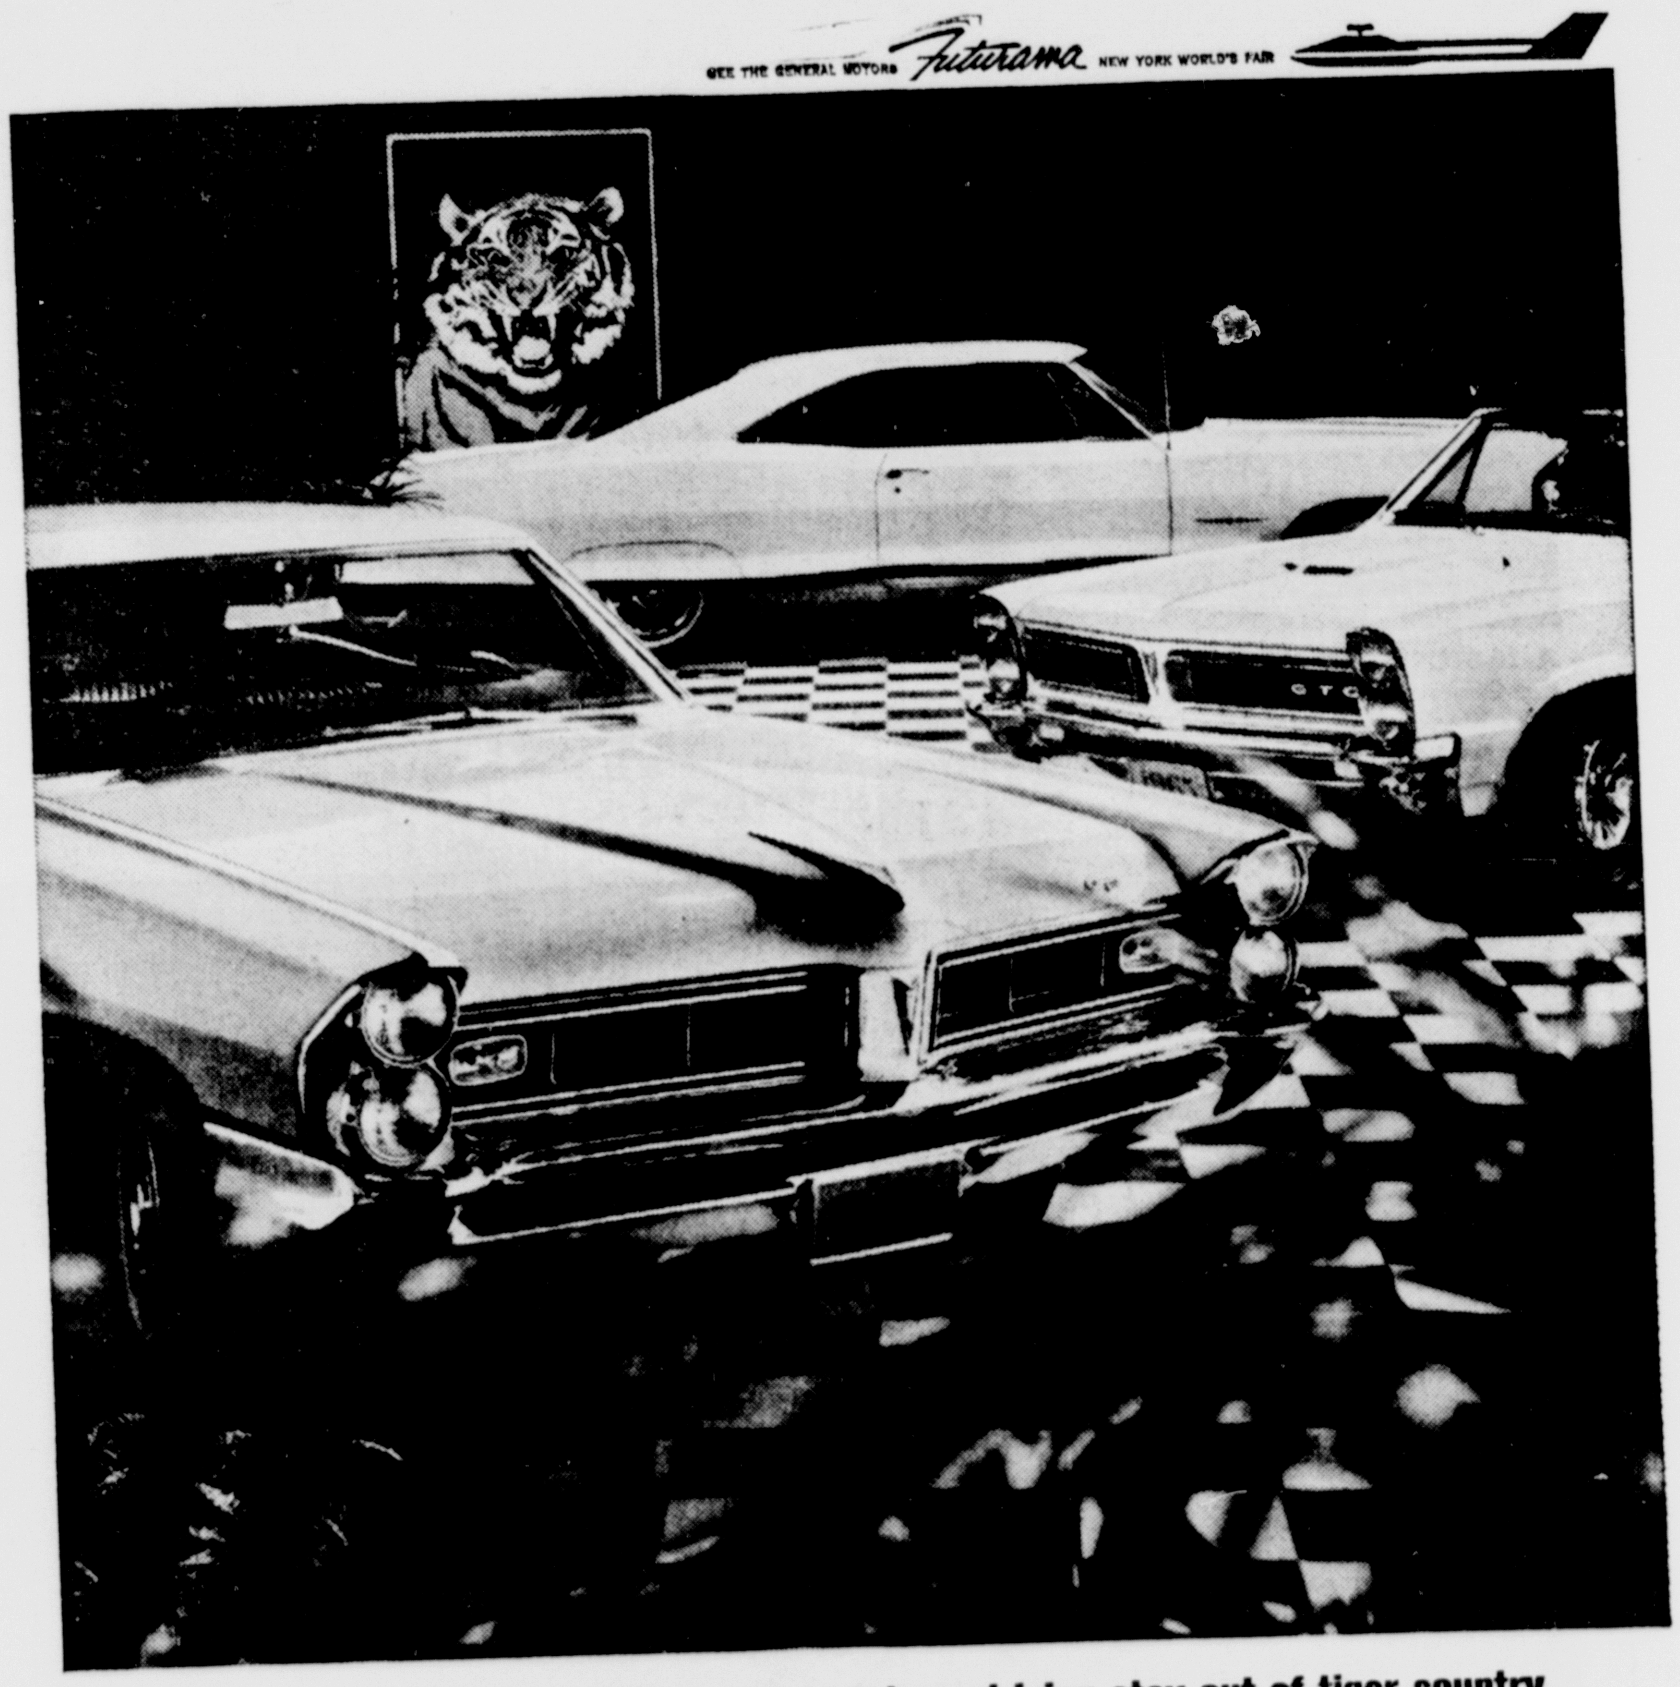

Many tricks once used with success by thieves have passed into oblivion because of car makers' efforts to frustrate them.

To Avoid Mishap

Many accidents occur when the foot of the driver of a car with automatic transmission slips off the brake while the car is stopped with the engine running. To avoid such mishaps, always put the gear selector into neutral or park position when stopped for pedestrians. It is also advisable to apply the hand brake when stopped for any length of time.

ONLY THREE of these invisible engine model Rolls-Royces were produced when the car was made in 1906, and none of them is known to have survived. The car is described with specifications in "The Rolls-Royce Motor Car" by Anthony Bird and Ian Hallows, published by Crown and selling for $15.

If you're completely satisfied with humdrum driving stay out of tiger country.

Fierce beasts such as the GTO roam at will, growling and snarling in the night. Sleek Grand Prixs and Bonnevilles slink silently by. Here, too, prowls the agile Le Mans and the ferocious 2+2; the graceful Catalina and the nimble Tempest. Bucket seats and luxury flourish. Horsepower: 140 to 376. People seen entering tiger country never leave. You have been warned.

GM Offers A Look At World Tomorrow

Exhibit At New York Exposition Proves Biggest Crowd Attraction

Futurama — General Motors' record-breaking exhibit—opened with the second year New York World's Fair April 21, offering an updated preview of the world of tomorrow.

Host to more than 15 and a half million persons, the Futurama was the most popular exhibit last year attracting almost half the people who came to the Flushing Meadow fairgrounds.

The same elements which were acclaimed in 1964 — the famed "ride into tomorrow;" the Avenue of Progress scientific and engineering exhibition; the display of General Motors automobiles, trucks and custom-designed kitchens — have been restyled for '65.

ARTISTS, SCENIC designers, painters, craftsmen and other skilled workers spent six months renewing the entire exhibit.

"With a year in which to experiment, we have produced an even greater show for 1965," GM Vice President William L. Mitchell said. The GM styling staff, under Mitchell's direction, created the Futurama exhibit.

"The ride scenes have been improved, the lighting and animation of various exhibits have been made more effective," he explained. "Some displays, particularly in the Avenue of Progress, have been replaced with newer developments and others have been updated."

"WE HAVE ALSO refined the means by which people are brought into and through the building," Mitchell stated. "This should result in greater comfort and convenience for every Futurama visitor."

Changes have also been made in the outdoor exhibits spotted about the eight and a half acre site and new displays have been added.

The site resembles a landscape artist's palette of colors. In bloom when the fair opened were 6,000 red, white, yellow or orange tulips; 6,000 white and yellow pansies; red and pink azaleas, pink weeping cherry trees and a host of other flowering shrubs and plants.

At night the 10-story high canopy which welcomes visitors to the Futurama is bathed in an ever-changing panorama of color, one of the most striking attractions at the fair.

VISITORS WILL see a better-than-ever "ride into tomorrow." Seated three abreast in sound-equipped lounge chairs, they will ride through animated scenes in which innovations in science and technology have enabled man to overcome the hostile environments which bar him from many areas today.

Thus man is shown exploring the moon, colonizing Antarctica, vacationing at the bottom of the sea, roadbuilding through the jungles and the mountains, farming the deserts and—lastly—creating a new city vibrant with beauty, culture and commerce.

Many of the futuristic proposals presented within the ride scenes are detailed along the Avenue of Progress in a series of exhibits devoted to the scientific and engineering research and development conducted by GM.

THE AVENUE features such developments as fuel cell power sources; missile control systems; underwater acoustical experiments; a cosmic ray spark chamber; a Stirling thermal engine and improved gas turbine; a mechanical heart; superaccurate gauging of materials characteristics and new auto safety devices.

Also along the Avenue of Progress are three experimental automobiles. One—Firebird IV—is the latest in a series of turbine driven cars developed by GM. It is a transcontinental cruiser designed for use on automatic highways.

A NUMBER OF advanced auto design concepts are incorporated within the experimental models. For example, the GM-X is fitted with air foils which help stabilize the car in a sudden stop; the Firebird is steered by hand grips in arm rests of the seat rather than a wheel; the Runabout entrance canopy would be activated by a sensor unit or voice command permitting "no hands" opening.

The Firebird boasts contoured, reclining swivel chairs; television; stereo; game table and refrigerator for full-family fun while cruising along automatic highways.

All three of these cars have advanced lighting systems for better safety, integral, fully-enclosed monocoque bodies and stand-up entrance and exit.

GENERAL MOTORS automotive and household products are once again displayed within the upper and lower product plazas. Each of the automotive divisions — Cadillac, Buick, Oldsmobile, Pontiac and Chevrolet — is presenting its 1965 line of automobiles plus new, highly-individualized "show" cars.

The Frigidaire Division is exhibting custom-designed kitchens whose motifs were drawn from five global areas.

In the outdoor product display areas GMC Truck and Coach Division exhibit a "Tower of Power," four trucks of different design stacked one atop the other. Also on display is "Turbocruiser II," a turbine-powered bus, and three new van-type vehicles fitted out for family camping.

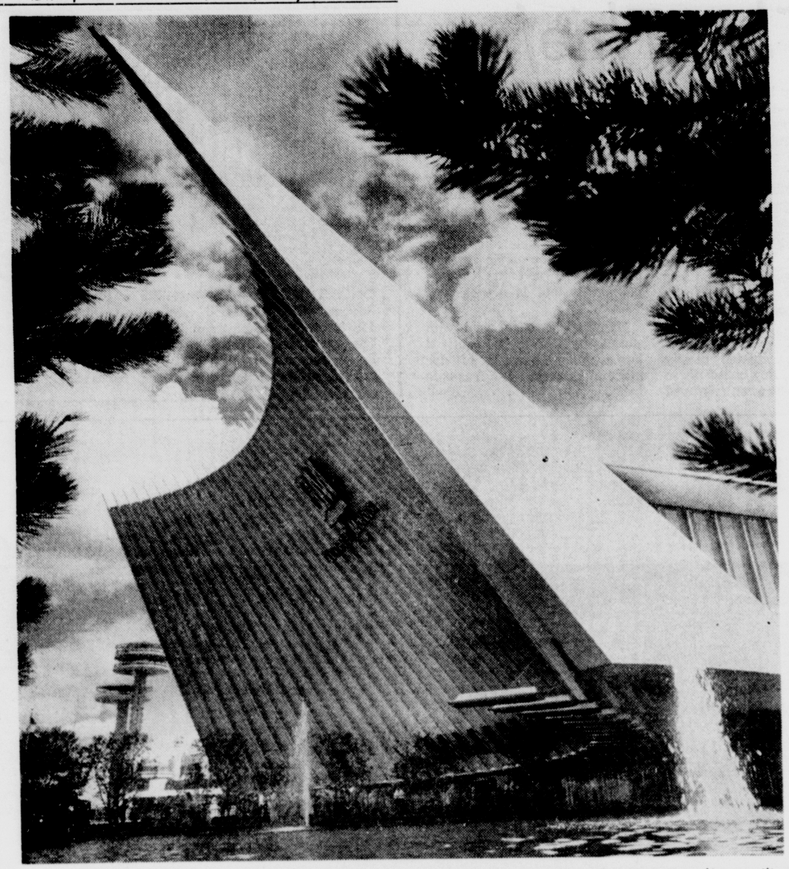

Automobiles and trucks manufactured by GM divisions in England, Germany and Australia are displayed as is heavy construction vehicles produced by GM's Euclid Division and a railroad engine made by the Electro-Motive Division.

THE ALLISON Division, manufacturer of airplane engines and other equipment, is displaying its products as is the Detroit Diesel Division.

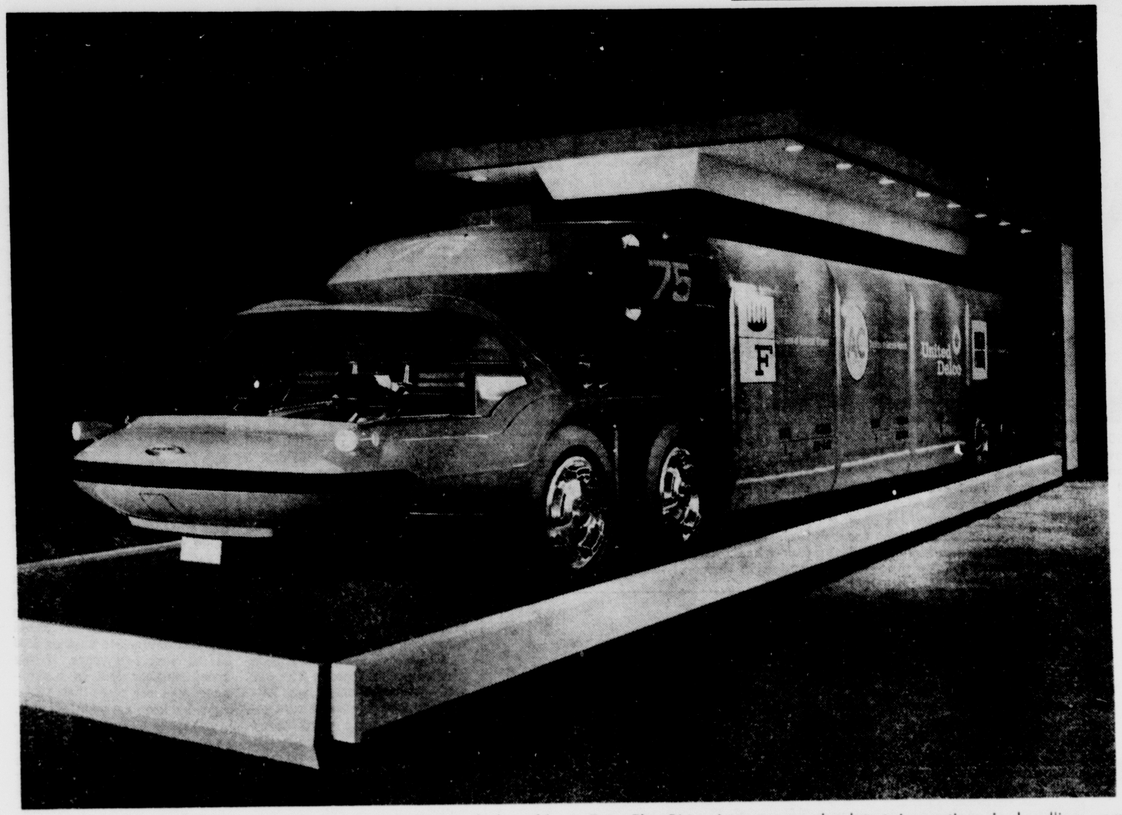

The United Delco Division which makes automotive service parts, and the AC Spark Plug Division offer newly-styled exhibits of their products.

"Metro-Mobility," GM's proposed solution to the problem of urban traffic congestion and mass transit, is detailed in an animated display.

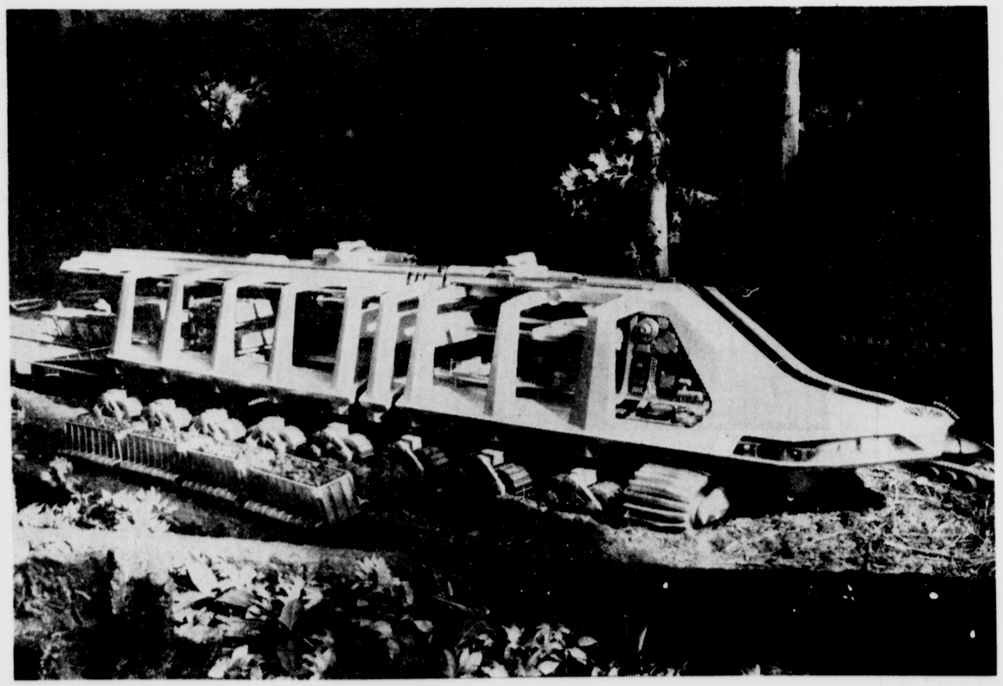

During the final season of the fair, the GM exhibit is facing two challenges: To retain its title as the most popular pavilion, and to break the one-year attendance record it set last year for an industrial exhibit at a world's fair.

A 10-STORY ENTRANCE canopy greets visitors to the General Motors Futurama exhibit at the New York World's Fair. More than 15 and a half million persons passed through the entrance last year, making the Futurama the most popular pavilion on the fairgrounds. The exhibit houses a 15-minute "ride into tomorrow," a preview of some of the research and development GM has undertaken for the future.

THE BISON, a twin-turbine freight hauler of sleek new design which could corry containerized cargoes at new peaks of efficiency on tomorrow's express highways, is featured by General Motors at the New York World's Fair. The Bison incorporates the latest innovations in handling, communications, maintenance and crew comfort, and is one of four new truck designs being shown.

A FINISHED HIGHWAY stretches in the wake of a jungle-road builder on the "ride into tomorrow" at the General Motors Futurama exhibit at the New York World's Fair. The factory-on-wheels sets the foundation, forms the surface slabs and lays them in place in one continuous operation. The machine is the largest working model created by GM styling staff for the 15-minute, admission-free ride.

AMERICAN astronauts will ride three abreast to the moon in a command module similar to the model above on display within the Avenue of Progress of the General Motors' Futurama exhibit. Kevin Knight, 6, inspects the Apollo capsule which will be lofted by a missile whose guidance system was developed by GM's AC Spark Plug Division.

THREE EXPERIMENTAL cars are featured at the New York World's Fair. Designed by GM styling, they represent the latest in GM's quarter-century series of advanced idea cars. From the top they are: The "Runabout," a highly maneuverable, three-wheeled utility vehicle to ease the commuting and shopping tasks of the future city and suburban resident; the "Firebird 1V," designed especially fo rfast, cross-country trips on automatic highways; the "GM-X," a two-passenger, high performance coupe with special appeal for the car enthusiast.

A 250-HORSEPOWER Vigilante V-8 engine is now available as a high-performance option for the "Jeep" Wagoneer. First eight-cylinder power plant ever to be offered in the "Jeep" family of vehicles, the new 327 cubic inch engine provides new dimensions of power and traction for rugged off-road service in sand, snow and mud, as well as smooth performance in highway travel. The Vigilante is available with Turbo Hydra-Matic transmission, and standard 3-speed and overdrive transmissions. With two-barrel carburetor and compression ratio of 8.7 to 1, it delivers peak operating efficiency on standard fuel. The Wagoneer series is offered in four-wheel drive and two-wheel drive models in two and four-door body styles.

What's The Proper Time To Trade In Your Present Car?

If your car is between two and three years old, you are probably wondering whether to trade it in or keep it.

Discovery Magazine, official publication of the Allstate Motor Club, offers some tips on trading in a car.

Car owners should consider their car's mileage, how they use it, and whether they want to spend the money for a new car. The third year is the best time to trade. Before that the car is still too valuable to trade; after three years the car's aging can be costly.

CARS DEPRECIATE about 50 per cent the first two years and then level off in the seventh year. Americans keep their cars an average of six years compared to seven years in 1955.

A two-year-old car with less than 25,000 miles on it is hardly broken in, while a car more than three years old with more than 30,000 miles on it may soon require major repairs. The car itself probably could last 100,000 miles with careful maintenance, but many parts won't last that long.

The fan belt, wiper blades, brake linings, bulbs, hoses, cables, the water and fuel pumps will wear out. The carburetor, will need to be overhauled at least once, while the radiator, generator, transmission and front suspension probably will need repair.

ONCE PAST the 30,000-mile mark, maintenance costs rise rapidly with major repairs likely. If you can't afford to trade, have your car thoroughly checked. Find out what will be necessary to keep it running well until you can afford a new one.

How long will your tires and battery last?

Talk to new car dealers and find out what your car is worth. Talk to several dealers and learn the cash difference between your car and a new one and what kind of trade-in you could expect.

After getting price quotations, check the price of the car you would buy and compare it with your estimated future costs on your old car. A three-year-old car will depreciate another $500 in the next two years. If you spend another $200 in maintenance you lose more than $300 a year by keeping your old car.

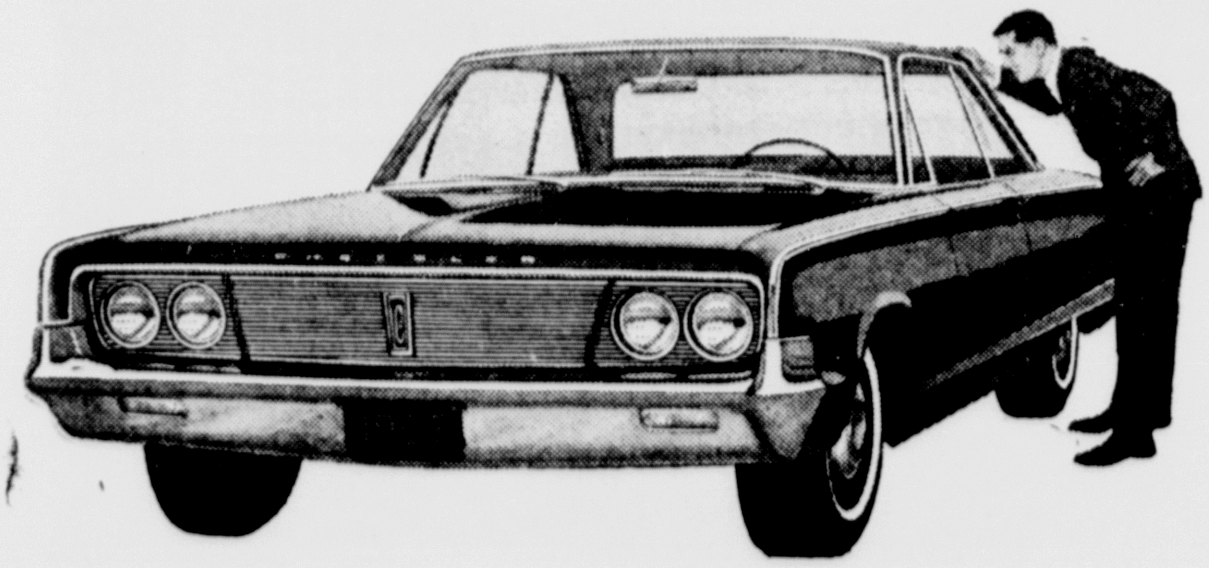

Whatever you do—trade your car in or keep it — the Allstate Motor Club magazine urges you to take care of your car. New or old, you must preserve your car's most important feature: Its dependability.

Check our price on a Chrysler.

Nearly half this year's Chryslers are priced only a few dollars a month more than the most popular smaller cars. That figure includes power steering, brakes, V-8 engine, automatic transmission, radio and heater. And every Chrysler is a full-sized big car. The factory builds no small ones. Auto Manufacturers Use Color Spectrum

Anyone who has ever stood high in a tall building and looked down at a traffic-filled street or a large parking lot has almost certainly marveled at the confetti-like picture presented by the automobiles below.

And if a person had done this each year for the past several years he would by now be convinced of one thing—that the auto industry is making full use of the almost unlimited colors available in the spectrum.

THERE IS A general, although erroneous, belief that for many years black was the only color in which cars were available. It's true that there once was no such spectrum-spanning array as is now offered, but as long ago as 1910 the new car buyer had his choice of at least a dozen different colors.

Black, of course, was considered for a long time the standard car color and, in many cases, unless the customer specified something else that is the color he got. Even as late as 1958, in fact, black constituted 13 per cent of the color production of one major automotive paint supplier. It has since fallen off to an all time low of barely 6 per cent in 1963.

IF QUERIED, virtually every auto manufacturer will report that white is far and away the most popular car color and has been since about 1955. It currently accounts for more than 20 per cent of the market.

This figure may be affected, some experts feel, because white is chosen so often as the top-color when a customer orders a two-toned car.

Two-toned cars, incidentally, are not as popular as they were 10 years ago when they accounted for 50 per cent or more of sales. They now make up about 10 or 12 per cent of new car orders.

Selecting the colors for American cars today is a serious time-consuming task that combines science and art in the auto styling studios.

THE REASONS put forth for the popularity of certain colors are almost as many as the colors available. Some experts are certain that a car purchaser's temperament or where he lives, or his income affects his desire for a specific color. According to color psychologists, a person who selects a yellow car, for example, is probably aggressive and has a warm personality.

Most stylists follow closely trends in fashions, house paints and, of course, what people seem to prefer in current automotive colors. Stylists admit there is no sure-fire way of predicting what the most popular colors will be two years from now when the colors they select today decorate the 1967 model cars rolling off the assembly lines.

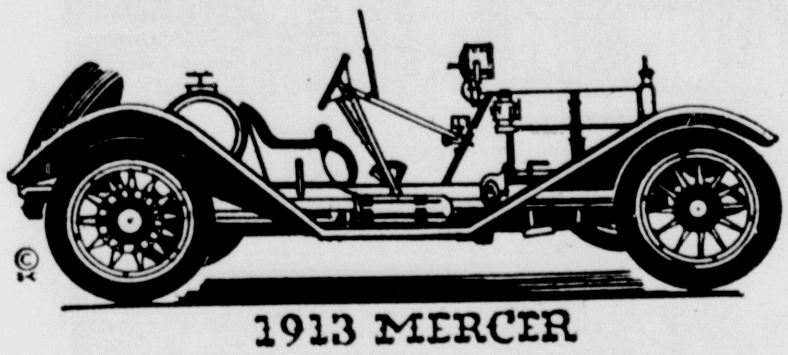

"The present trend in automotive finishes appears to be definitely in the direction of dark green, blue, gray, maroon and turquoise," says one color expert, a representative of a major automotive paint supplier. "And there is no evidence of a revival of the many pastels of the early '50s, some of which would be esthetically unacceptable today."

CAR MAKERS insist that the paint finishes they intend to use stand up under practically all weather or driving conditions.

At least three manufacturers operate paint test stations in Florida where sample paint panels—as well as interior and exterior trim parts and fabrics—are exposed to the sun-humidity-salt air combination for periods of a year to 18 months. Durability and fade-resistance are two of the qualities looked for in these tests, which may involve as many as 5,000 samples by one company at a given time.

Not all tests take place on the paint-panel exposure racks, however. The Florida test centers have extensive indoor laboratory facilities where technicians evaluate the ability of paint samples to resist chipping, cracking, acids, strong soaps and detergents and many other factors.

DRIVERS PLAN AHEAD ON NEW TIRES

Surprise! Here's an item about auto safety that's really a pat on the back for motorists instead of a scolding:

Only two or three drivers out of every 100 buy tires because their old ones fail; the others plan ahead, an industry leader has revealed.

"Our surveys show that between two and three per cent of car owners purchase new tires because of an emergency on the road," said P. W. Perdriau, president of B. F. Goodrich Tire Co. "The great majority wisely play it safe."

Perdriau said there are two main reasons why few drivers are "caught short" while en route.

"First, today's motorist is safety-conscious and realizes that his auto is only as safe as his tires," he said. "Second, today's tire is engineered for long wear and high performance. Sudden failure is rare expect when a tire has been abused or worn excessively."

The best way to tell when tires are worn?

"Look at them," Perdriau said. "And to make them last longer, treat them right. Avoid jackrabbit starts, excessive braking, and turns at high speeds, and be sure they are properly inflated."

The Imports Enjoy A Comeback Surge In U.S. Car Sales

Foreign Factories Are Catering To American Needs And Tastes

The foreign manufacturers are doing this by taking a few pages from the book written by Detroit's successful designers and builders of fine automobiles.

They have begun catering more and more to changing taste, to the desire for greater comfort, for style and speed.

SOME NOW use engines built in the United States, while retaining a distinctive continental flair in their design.

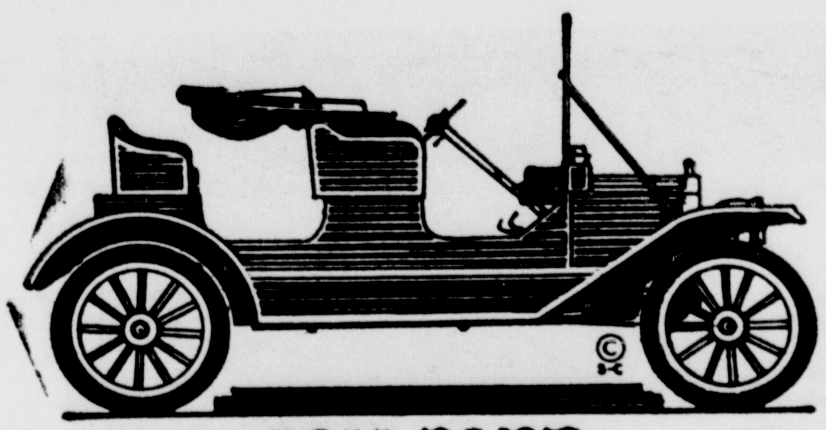

The imports continue to place a greater emphasis upon economy than do the domestics. But the imports are also moving in greater numbers into the popular price class.

The overall price level of the imports is slightly higher than last year, although there are exceptions.

The Japanese, in particular, are making major bids for gains in American sales. The British remain the leader in number of models, relying this year principally on refinements in silhouettes and engineering advances. French cars reflect a trend toward elegance. And the German ranks are again led by the ever reliable Volkswagen, still far and away the best-seller among the imports, still following the familiar and popular "beetle" design.

ITALY, SWEDEN and the Netherlands, too, have their entries in the field.

The foreign manufacturers have made it plain that they are determined to regain something of the prominence they once held in the American auto sales field, and that they have the imagination and flexibility along with the practical approach that is necessary to appeal to the U.S. buyers.

How States Choose Their Colors

Some states use color combinations that are recommended as most visible, most legible and with the most contrast.

Many states reverse colors back and forth, using one color in one year for the background and, in the next year, for the numerals. For years Kentucky has kept the same blue-and-white colors, reversing number and background from year to year.

Illinois, Indiana and Wyoming are three states that, at times, have used the colors of colleges within the states.

Other plates from time to time have borne the colors of state flowers, official colors of the state, or special colors to honor various groups or cities within the state.

Virtually all states now check with nearby states so that similar or identical colors aren't issued by two neighboring states.

INCREASED VISIBILITY, greater legroom and a new rear seat backrest which folds down to convert the rear passenger area into a utility compartment are three of the major improvements built into the Volkswagen sedan for 1965. Despite those and other changes, however, the 1965 VW still retains its distinctive "beetle" shape.

Driving As A Career

A Field Often Overlooked By Teen-Agers

A surprisingly large field, commercial driving now employs two and a half million Americans, according to a publication of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Truck drivers make up more than three-fourths of workers in driving jobs, with those classed as local truck drivers comprising almost 50 per cent of the total.

THESE ARE men who work mostly in and around cities, transporting smaller loads of goods for delivery to individual customers. Their primary job is driving, but the local driver also usually assists in loading and unloading the truck..

In addition to the estimated 1,200,000 local truck drivers, there are well over 600,000 over-the-road truck drivers, practically all of them employed by private and for-hire carriers. The "elite" of the truck drivers, over-the-road men drive the largest, most expensive equipment, draw the highest wages and also bear a great deal of responsibility.

"Driving the big over-the-road trucks does not involve the physical effort most people associate with truck driving," notes the publication. "The physical strain of such driving has been reduced by more comfortable seating, better highways and stringent safety regulations.

"DURING THE remainder of the 1960s and in the longer run, employment of local and over-the-road truck drivers is expected to expand as a result of increases in the freight moved by motor carrier. (Growth in) employment in other driving jobs is not expected to change much in the years ahead."

But, the bureau also says, "normal turnover in this large occupational field will also provide many job opportunities each year."

The "other jobs" to which the bureau refers include: route men, who are as much salesmen as they are drivers, selling merchandise or services directly to customers; taxicab drivers — 150,000 employed full time, mostly in large metropolitan areas; local bus drivers, who operate their vehicles over city and suburban streets and carry millions of Americans to and from work, schools, shopping centers, and other places every day; and intercity bus drivers, numbering fewer than 30,000 persons who operate the largest buses over open highways.

INTERESTED persons may obtain the report by writing Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. Ask for the publication, "Driving Occupations."

LANDMARK YEAR

In 1914 Automobile Came Of Age In U.S.

FIRST OF THE 1966 models to reach the market is the 1966 edition of that popular little economical performer from Japan, the Toyota. Above is the 1966 Toyota Corona sports sedan. This new style and performance champion from the world's third largest producer of commercial vehicles boasts a 90-horsepower engine that accelerates to 100 miles per hour in seconds.

The automobile came of age in America half a century ago.

It was the year 1914. Twenty-one years had gone by since the Duryea brothers drove the nation's first workable gas buggy on the streets of Springfield, Mass.

From that day in 1893, the gasoline-fueled internal combustion vehicle had come a long way. It still had a long way to go, but the average 1914 passenger car was a highly sophisticated machine for its day, admirably suited to the rutted dirt roads of the American countryside.

AS THE automobile reached its majority year, the nation, too, was in a period of transition.

World War I erupted in the same year. Woodrow Wilson was starting his first term as president. Morals and manners generally showed changes. A new era was at hand, an era in which the automobile would play a key role.

The automobile industry itself had ended a chaotic decade, and now united under the new Automobile Chamber of Commerce, displayed new - found maturity. Within a year it announced the famous patent cross - licensing agreement in which all signers would share inventions royalty - free.

A GRAPHIC symbol of the change taking place in the automobile itself was provided by the steering wheel, which for two or three years had been moving steadily from right to left. In 1914 the number of cars produced with left steering jumped to 66 per cent from 30 per cent the year before.

Now for the first time, most makes of automobiles in America had the driver's seat placed where the modern motorist would expect to find it.

Undoubtedly the most striking 1914 automotive development was the rapid electrification of the passenger car, stimulated by the success of the electric self starter. Now almost 90 per cent of new cars were equipped with an electric cranking system. Just two years before it was available in merely two per cent of production cars.

BECAUSE A strong battery and generator were needed to operate the cranking motor a reserve of electric power was now available for other purposes. Engineers were quick to seek new ways to put it to use.

One, of course, was electric lighting which spread like wildfire from 1911 on. By 1914 more than 90 per cent of all makes had it. Ignition, too, became integrated with the electric system, dooming the faithful magneto to extinction.

A starter of trends as well as engines, the electric crank assured the growing popularity of the gasoline car.

WOMEN COULD now drive independently without having to call on a man to start the car. An old favorite of the ladies, the electric town car, was marked for oblivion.

Electricity's magic offered a host of new conveniences—map reading lights, courtesy lights that went on as doors opened, and even cigar lighters.

But the quest for convenience led engineers to some frontiers that the 1914 motoring public was not quite ready to cross. One of these was pushbutton electric gearshifting. It failed to catch on and the successful automatic transmission waited a quarter century more for development of the fluid coupling and torque converter.

THE STANDARD touring car was by far the most popular 1914 body style, but fancy limousines, landaulets, berlines and sedans on display at auto shows attracted big crowds. These luxurious masterpieces of coachwork rivalled the beauty and comfort of modern automobile interiors. But cost and the weaknesses of wooden construction rendered them less than practical for regular cross-country use over the rough roads of the day.

In design and detail features, however, these early closed bodies suggested the popular cars of later years. And the word "streamline" was already in use to describe a trend toward smooth rounded lines.

All in all, 1914 was a great automotive year.

The gas buggy reached its majority and its future seemed boundless. Nearly 600,000 new cars and trucks were sold in America that year. By 1916, this figure would be more than doubled, leading ultimately to nine-million-vehicle years such as 1963.

Bugged By City Traffic? Tips To Ease The Strain

The National Automobile Club offers five tips to ease the strain of big city driving.

1. Motorists will find the going easier in lanes toward the curb. The lane nearest oncoming vehicles can become snarled with drivers turning across traffic.

2. "Pick a lane and stick with it," advises the auto club. Constant changing of lanes is murder on nerves, results in very little additional progress, and increases the chance of accident.

3. Keep your speed consistent with traffic flow. Slower speeds tie-up movement. Faster speeds waste gas, and only result in "getting nowhere fast."

4. Stopped at a signal light? The auto club suggests motorists follow a compact, foreign car, light pick-up or panel truck. These types of vehicles usually pull away from signals sooner than larger and heavier makes. Younger drivers too will move into traffic more quickly, and are often more alert. Try to avoid vehicles with out-of-state license plates. The driver may be confused and unfamiliar with the surroundings.

THE ENGLISH FORD Cortina GT performs and handles like a sports car. Winner of more than 200 international competition events during the last two years, the GT offers as standard equipment such features as a modified 85 horsepower high performance engine, front bucket seats, stiffened suspension, a four-speed fully synchronized transmission and front disc brakes. The five-passenger car can accelerate from 0 to 60 miles per hour in 12.1 seconds.

Your Camera Adds Enjoyment To Vacation Months

Just Make Sure You're Ready To Take Some Good Pictures

Vacation time is usually a time when you get out that camera, dust it off, and start shooting pictures all around.

To help you shoot some pictures of which you might be proud, National Automobile Club has a few suggestions to make:

Know your camera. Look it over carefully and understand completely what the instruction book is talking about. And know the film you put into it. Tell the man in the photography store the kind of pictures you hope to take and he will be able to tell you the best type of film to use.

WHEN YOU understand your camera, have the proper film placed inside, and are out "on location" ready to shoot, don't just "shoot from the hip," but stop for a moment to plan your picture. Walk around your subject. Consider it from several angles. Try to pick the angle from which it looks best, from which all the elements are properly arranged and the picture seems to have a clear center of interest.

Watch the lighting. A cross light or rear light that brings out interesting contrast of highlights and shadows is usually better than a flat, overall brilliance.

If you are taking pictures of people try to get them to look relaxed and natural. It is usually better to have them doing something interesting than to have them just gawking into the lens.

BEFORE YOU snap the picture, make sure that the camera is perfectly set. Having decided on the amount of exposure you will need, try to get it with the longest possible exposure time and the smallest possible opening. Fast speeds and large shutter openings will stop fast action in your subject, but such stopping is rarely necessary and the resulting picture is usually shallow in the range of objects in sharp focus. With the longer exposure and the smaller opening you get greater "depth of field," a greater, deeper range of objects that are in sharp focus. And, along this line, be sure your camera is properly focused on that main object.

Following these suggestions you should get good pictures. With your growing knowledge and experience your pictures will get steadily better.

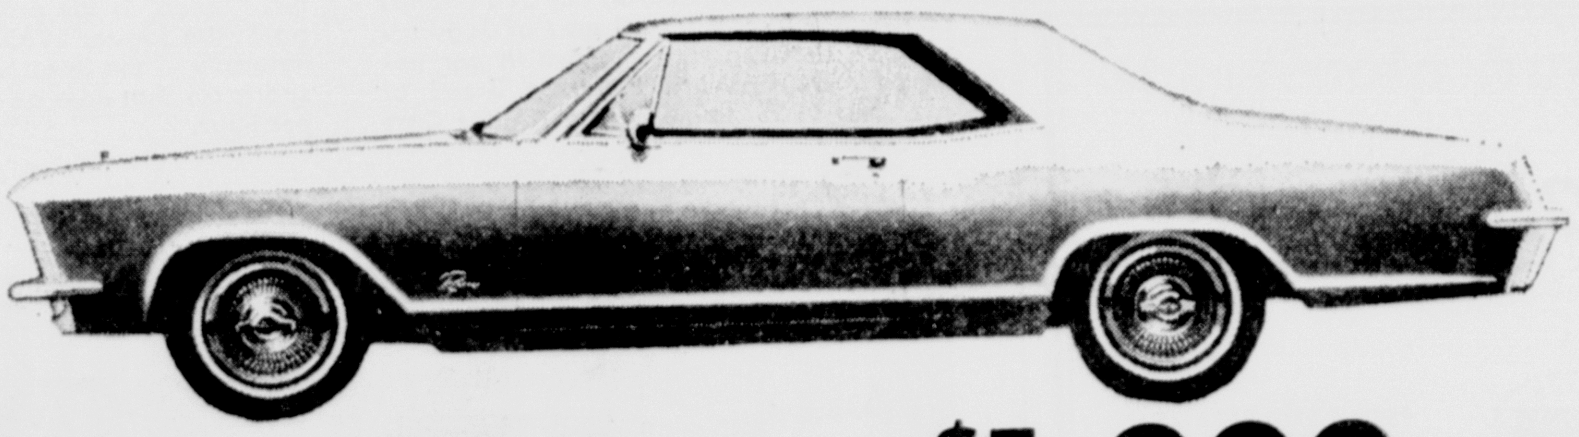

RESTYLED FROM THE ground up, this new Datsun is described by the factory as the "first deluxe, quality-built economy car to offer so many delivered extras — so many design, engineering and performance features for less than $1,700 delivered" with most extras. Distinctive in looks with its new, low sculptured profile, panoramic view windows and dual headlights on both sides, the new Datsun four-ten boasts a host of engineering and design changes for added performance, comfort and rugged dependability.

Avoid Tragedy By Making Certain Children Are Safe

Some Common Sense Rules To Protect Them While Riding

Nearly 2,500 children under 14, riding as automobile passengers, are killed every year.

Half that toll consists of tots 4 or younger.

And many, many of these tragedies could have been averted if parents had insisted that their youngsters cease making like "space cadets" by orbiting around inside their moving automobiles.

Harass driving mothers and fathers.

Distract other drivers.

"No!" is one of the first words children learn. They should know its meaning by the time they are big enough to start cutting up in the car. But parents should do more than constantly shout: "No! Don't do that! Stop it!"

The youngsters should be taught to lean back and sit squarely on the seat. They should not lean out or put their hands out of windows.

If there are seat belts for them—and there should be—the belts should be used.

Teach them to keep their hands off door handles, the gear shift, ignition key and light switch, and not to tug on the driver's arm or try to sit on his lap.

DON'T GIVE them lollipops or ice cream on a stick that might hurt a child's eyes or mouth in case of a sudden bump or swerve. A car is no place for big, heavy or sharp-edged toys or inflated balloons.

Noise and activity should be kept down. Rough-housing should be forbidden. On long trips, stop occasionally where the children can get out of the car for a bout of vigorous play.

Car toys should be light and compact, made of rubber or plastic. Games should include such things as jig-saw and crossword puzzles.

TEACH children always to leave a car from the curb side, away from traffic.

Parents should make sure that all car doors are tightly closed before starting out. If children are to be left alone in a car, turn off the ignition, remove the key and set the hand brake.

Children should ride in the back seat, where there's more padding and less danger of injury in a sudden stop. It is best if an adult or an older child rides in the back with them. Safety door latches on the rear doors provide extra insurance against tots being thrown from the car on a curve.

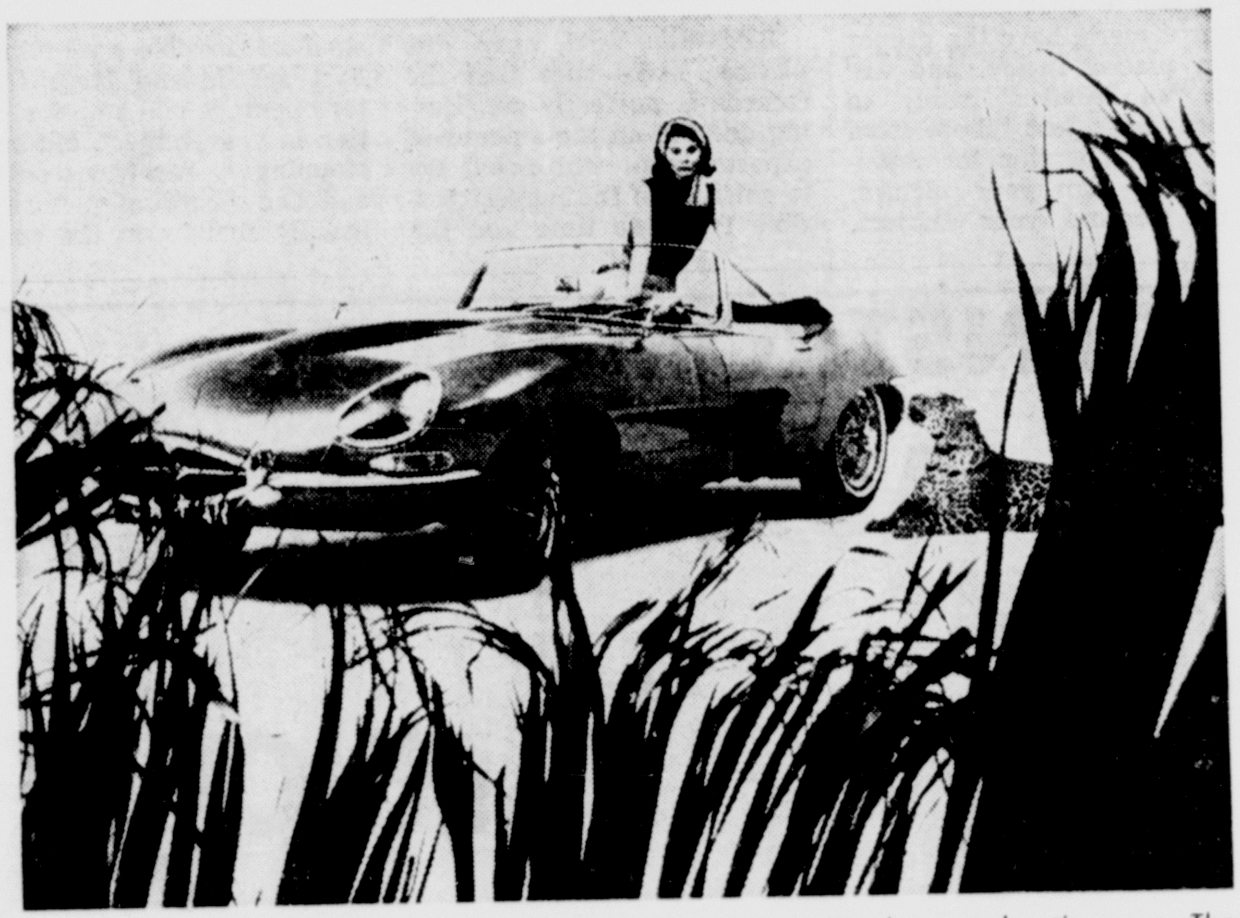

KEEP VERY small children in your lap, unless you're driving; or provide them with a special car seat or harness, firmly fixed.

Don't try to deal with a commotion while in motion. Pull over to the curb and park.

Sharp or heavy objects have no place on the rear shelf. They might fly off in a sudden stop.

NEW SPITFIRE MK 2 is Triumph's 1965 answer to increased demand for a real sports car at a popular price. It features increased power, faster acceleration, improved interior comfort factors. The twin-carburetor, four-cylinder engine now develops 67 BHP. Top speed has been stepped up to more than 90 miles an hour. The MK 2 accelerates from zero to 50 in 10 seconds. There's a four-speed gearbox, diaphragm-type clutch, rack and pinion steering, all-independent suspension. The body is by Michelotti, with improved bucket seats, roll-up windows, padded dash and carpeted floor.

NOT A STUFFED JAGUAR, but 300 pounds of live jungle cat! It's all part of Jaguar's way of showing that the British car importer's cars are "a different breed of cat," the 1965 theme of the Jaguar Cars Inc. "Jongo" is the proud cat's name. The girl? Miss Jaguar 1965. The car? a Jaguar naturally — the latest version of the XK-E sports car that does an effortless 140 miles per hour.

EPITOMIZING THE height of small car luxury, a new version of the British Motor Corporation's 1100 series, the MG Princess, is being shown to America for the first time. The new model has a coach-built body, a distinguished-looking radiator grille and built-in auxiliary lights. Inside, the polished walnut fascia and door sills, English leather seats and deep-pile carpets all lend an air of distinction to this elegant new sub-compact. Its roomy interior will accommodate five adults.

In Buying Used Car, A Little Care Pays Off In A Big Way

Most people who set out to buy a used car do so with considerable concern over the idea that somehow or other they are going to be picking up a "lemon."

While it is always possible that in any used car some defect may lie concealed, the average buyer, points out the National Automobile Club, can make fairly sure that he gets what he pays for by using a little care when making his buy.

DON'T GIVE too much attention to overall appearance, but keep your eyes peeled for significant details.

When you look over the body don"t be carried away by the luster of the lacquer but look to the locks and hinges, the lifting gears in the doors and windows, to see if they are worn or not working porperly. Walk around the car and make a check of the tires for bruises or bad cuts. Then lift up the hood and take a look at the cooling system to see if there are any leaks in hoses or in the radiator.

When you start up the motor watch the instruments on the dashboard to see if the ammeter, the oil pressure gauges, and the temperature indicator are working.

RUN THE motor for a little while then get out of the car, go around to the rear, and listen closely to that exhaust. If the sound that it gives out is smooth and even, the chances are that valves, pistons, and rings are all in shape and the compression is good.

Then start out on your trial run along the road. Watch how she accelerates when you press down on the accelerator, see if that pickup is steady and strong.

THIS ATTRACTIVE little car is slated to make its American and Marin debut soon. The NSU Spider (with the one-cylinder NSU/Wankel engine) was awarded the Gold Medal for appearance at the great Baden-Baden car parade last year. Here actress Kai Fischer is behind the wheel of the German-made car for which a bright American future is anticipated.

Find out how she takes the hills, and when you come to a fairly level stretch slow her down to a reasonably slow pace and see if the engine still pulls without chugging or jolting.

AS YOU ride along, listen for any chatter or clatter in the transmission or differential and watch for any slipping or dragging of the clutch when you change gears. Get the feel of that steering wheel and notice if there is any unsteadiness or backlash that might indicate wear on slackness.

Make sure, of course, that the brakes are sound.

By using a little care, you can be fairly sure of getting yourself a lot of car.

Youth And Speed— A Deadly Combine

Youthful drivers, those under 25 years of age, represent about 15 per cent of all licensed drivers in the country.

Yet, they were involved in more than 29 per cent of all highway deaths and more than 25 per cent of all non-fatal mishaps in 1964.

The figures are contained in a report by The Travelers Insurance Companies compiled from a country-wide survey of state motor vehicle departments. The report has been published since 1931 and more than four million copies are distributed.

OLDER DRIVERS, those over 65, were involved in 7.7 per cent of the fatal crashes, and represent about 7 per cent of the driving population.

A Travelers spokesman noted that excessive speed was the number one killer in 1964, as it has been for the past several years. He said that "the young driver's desire for speed, coupled with a lack of maturity, makes this category the most dangerous on the road."

He pointed out that "highway lunatics" can be found in any age group, but the fact remains that the greatest percentage of them are under 25 years of age.

THE OVER-ALL 1964 highway death toll stands at 48,000, with 3,840,000 persons injured.

The Travelers survey covers a great number of factors, but as yet no one has been able to prove statistically that the woman driver is more dangerous than the male. Such things as the number of miles driven by the female or the male are not contained in motor vehicle department reports.

A Look At The Traveling Habits Of U.S. Motorists

American travelers—and they take in virtually the entire populace—are pleasure loving individuals.

This fact is supported by a survey recently released by the U. S. Bureau of the Census, which shows that in 1963 some 61 per cent of all trips—as defined by the Bureau—and 70 per cent of all travelers were dedicated to visiting friends and relatives and other pleasure purposes.

AS THE survey report notes, trips were counted for all modes of passenger travel. However, for purposes of the survey, trips were counted only if they involved being out of town overnight or making a one-day trip of 100 miles or more.

Americans have taken seriously the lighthearted counsel to "hit the open road." The census survey indicates that from 85 to 90 per cent of all trips are made within the traveler's own region. The largest portion of both business and pleasure trips fall within the 100 to 200 mile range.

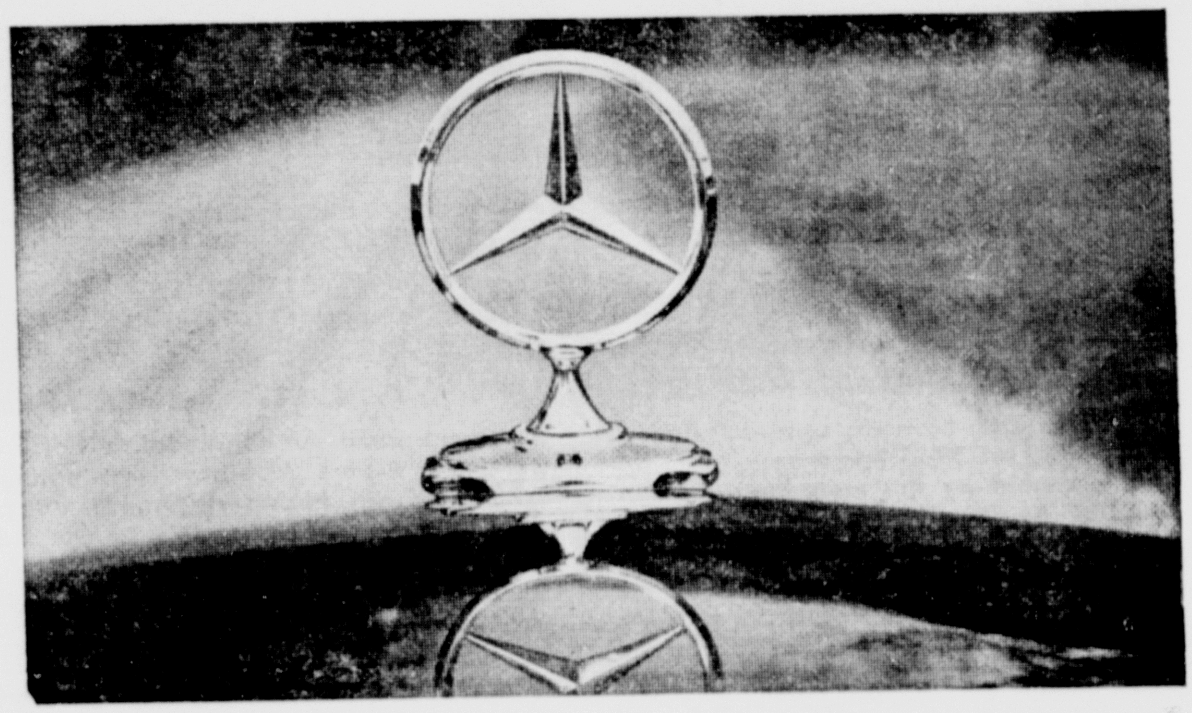

Total trips completed in 1963 amounted to 257 million. This involved 487 million travelers who spent more than two billion nights away from home in trip status.

Automobiles were by far the most popular mode of transportation. They accounted for 84 per cent of the trips and 89 per cent of the travelers.

Help For Motorists In Distress Devised

Plans to encourage establishment of a nationwide communications network to aid motorists in distress have been announced by the automobile industry.

The system, known as H E L P for Highway Emergency Locating Plan, calls for the use of Citizens Band two-way radio equipment in private passenger cars.

Motorists in need of aid would make their needs known on CB Channel Nine where it would be picked up by a round-the-clock monitoring station within the 10 to 20 mile range of the equipment. Monitors would include volunteer citizen teams, police agencies, road service stations and hospital emergency rooms.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the new plan was made by the Automobile Manufacturers Assn. which pointed out that well over two million pieces of CB equipment already are in use. Nearly all are transceivers, which both receive and transmit messages, and approximately half are in motor vehicles.

AMA officials said the plan grew out of a growing concern by government agencies and highway safety groups over the lack of emergency communications facilities for motorists. They pointed out that this lack will become even more apparent as the nation expands construction of its limited access roadways.

In seeking a solution to the problem, various s t a t e s a n d areas have experimented with systems of roadside telephones, solar powered emergency signal systems, roadside radio transmitters and emergency road patrols.

"SUCH SYSTEMS, while commendable, may not be the most practical or economically feasible in attempting to cover the nation's entire road system," AMA said. Therefore, the industry was asked to aid in developing improved systems.

In developing the plan, a special association engineering task force has been working more than a year in cooperation with leading radio manufacturers and volunteer citizen groups.

A number of volunteer groups are successfully operating smaller programs in various parts of the country, AMA said, and would be urged to join HELP to effect a coordinated plan throughout the nation.

Transceivers presently a r e available from radio s u p p l y shops throughout the country so that interested drivers can begin using them immediately.

OPERATION OF the transceiver requires merely turning on the set, switching to Channel Nine, pressing a button to talk and releasing it to listen.

Use of the equipment is controlled by the Federal Communications Commission but no operator's license is needed. An application for the required station license, valid for five years, can be sent to FCC when equipment is ordered. Licenses are open to non-aliens over the age of 18 years.

In addition to having the benefit of an effective emergency communications channel, motorists equipped with CB radio will be able to use other channels for their business or personal communications, AMA pointed out.

Even non-equipped vehicles will benefit from the program through "Good Samaritan" motorists with the required equipment who broadcast on their behalf.

AMA SAID THAT rapid expansion of the H E L P program might require assignment of protected channels limited to automobile emergency use. The auto industry is petitioning F C C to study a proposal for the assignment of two such "clear channels" to encourage optimum utilization of H E L P installations and reduce mutual interference stemming from use of a shared channel.

An AMA Spokesman said that design engineers already are working to develop specialized auto radio equipment so that the highway emergency communications concept can be expanded.

Because the range of the equipment is limited and will be used by individual motorists only for short periods of time, the engineers feel that the "unused messege capacity" could be used to a safety advantage by messages to motorists from police and highway authorities.

Statistics To Help Planners

Roads Bureau Collects Valuable Data

The Bureau of Public Roads has set out to erase the giant question mark that now represents the nation's 95 million owners of driver's licenses.

Until now little has been known of this huge army of drivers that comprises more than half the population, according to the Bureau's Highway Statistics Division.

Through distribution of a recently published report, federal officials hope to broadcast new information.

BUREAU statisticians have sifted through a mountain of figures to come up with totals on the age, sex and number of drivers in each state. Now, by teaming up with sociologists, economists and businessmen, the federal agency hopes to convert the information volunteered by the record total of license applicants into guidelines for future planning and highway safety.

Public agencies, for instance, will be able to use the data in planning, research, making administrative decisions and formulating safety programs. In addition, the figures can be useful in analyses of accident exposure and rates.

Where it is available, data on the sex and age distribution of drivers is also a useful source of information for social and economic analysts, and for business in the study of the wants and needs of a particular market area.

HELPING PLANNERS who read the report are figures showing that:

Licenses are readily obtainable by persons in all economic levels because of their relatively low cost.

In the 19 states where the information was available, 60.2 per cent of the drivers were male and only 39.8 per cent were female.

Male license holders substantially outnumber females in all states and in all age groups.

Kentucky has the highest percentage of male drivers at 62.8 per cent while Delaware has the lowest at 57.7.

Male drivers in Illinois drive more than twice as far each year as females. Indications are that nationally males do approximately 80 per cent of all driving and women motorists about 20 per cent.

Wyoming has the highest number of licensed drivers with 672 per 1,000 persons. Mississippi has the fewest with 353.

Mississippi, with 629, also has the lowest number of drivers' licenses per 1,000 persons in the 15-74 age group. The state with the highest number, 992, is Kansas.

The bureau hopes its report will spark further efforts by others to extract data from driver's license records, thereby utilizing as much of the available information as possible.

AN ENTIRELY NEW styling theme, new body structure, and a new suspension system have been introduced in the 1965 Chrysler. AN IDEA CAR

BOLD IS THE LOOK of the "V.I.P.," Plymouth's new idea car. The over-all car has a futuristic design. Although the basic color is magenta, the paint is iridescent and changes in various shades from pink to brown, according to the way the light strikes it. The interior of the car is designed for maximum comfort in freeway travel. Installed in the center console are a tape recorder, stereo and telephone, and on the instrumental panel, a television set which can be viewed by all passengers, but is shrouded from the driver's eyes.

A Plymouth idea car was shown for the first time at this year's Chicago Auto Show.

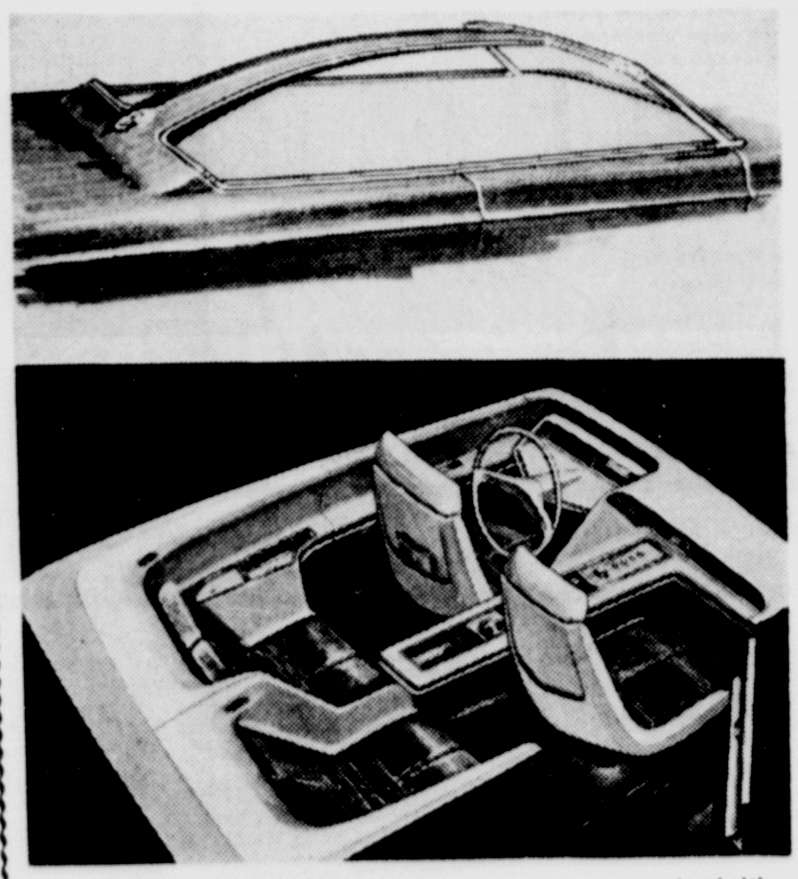

Designated to provide the ultimate in comfort, convenience, communication, entertainment, and safety for freeway travel, this unique "idea car" contains many items never before built into a passenger car, according to P. N. Buckminster, general manager of the Chrysler-Plymouth Division.

There are no plans at present for producing this newest Plymouth commercially, Buckminster pointed out.

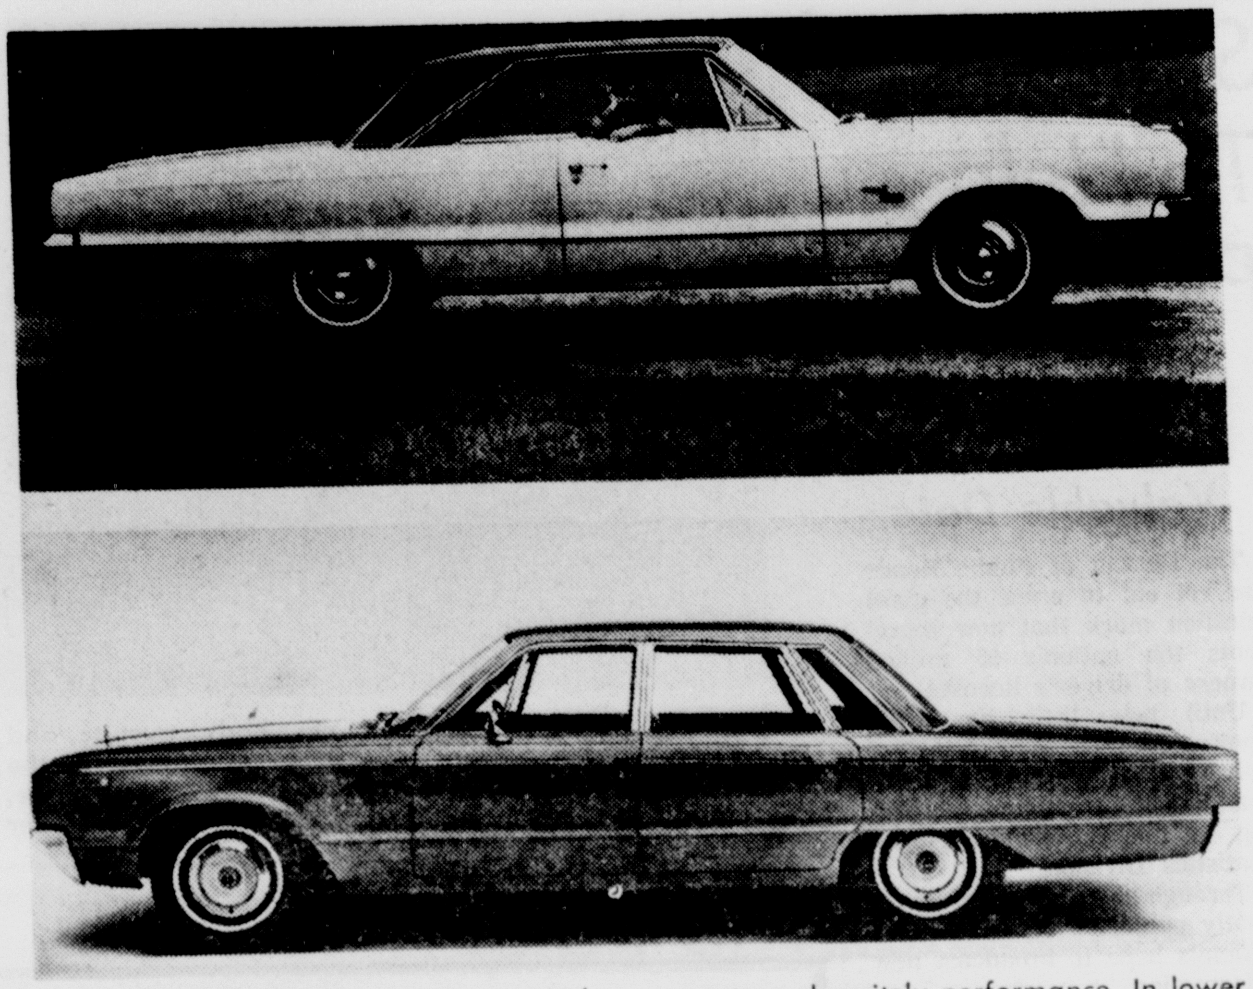

From the standpoint of convenience, the car could almost be used as a traveling office. While driving, the driver may make phone calls, dictate letters, or listen to tape-recorded business messages. At the same time, passengers may escape the boredom of long day's travel by listening to music over the stereophonic system, hear radio newscasts or watch television while sipping beverages from the car's refreshment center.

A glance at the instrument panel would give the driver much more information than today's driver has available. No need to look up into the rearview mirror. The mirror is replaced by a rear-vision scope which is actually a television screen providing a constant picture of the road behind.

The over-all car has a futuristic design. From the front and rear it looks wide and low. From the side, the Plymouth appears to be practically all glass from the belt line up.

THE CAR OF the future may look a great deal like this Plymouth V.I.P. idea car. The metal part of the top is a longitudinal roll bar, varying in width from four to eight inches. The bar acts as a guide for the upper portion of the flexible top glass, which retracts into the trunk area making it virtually an open car. A new light-sensitive glass, which darkens upon exposure to light and then clear again when the light fades, is specified for the top. The interior of the car is designed for maximum comfort in freeway travel. A glance at the instrument panel tells the driver his speed, the flow rate of his fuel, an estimate of time of arrival, and distance traveled. Rear seats recline into built-in head rests.

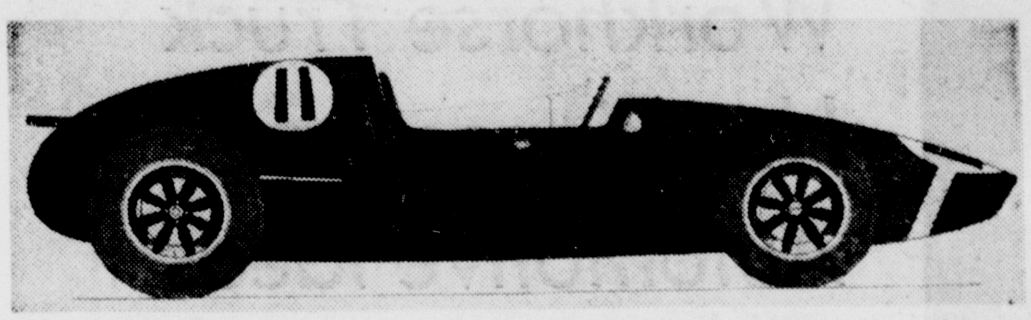

THE MONACO, top photo, is an entirely new line of prestige sports models introduced by Dodge for 1965. The car combines stylish design, luxurious appointments and spritely performance. In lower photo is Dodge's deluxe custom 880 four-door sedan. The model has six side windows, providing a greater expanse of glass than any previous sedan.

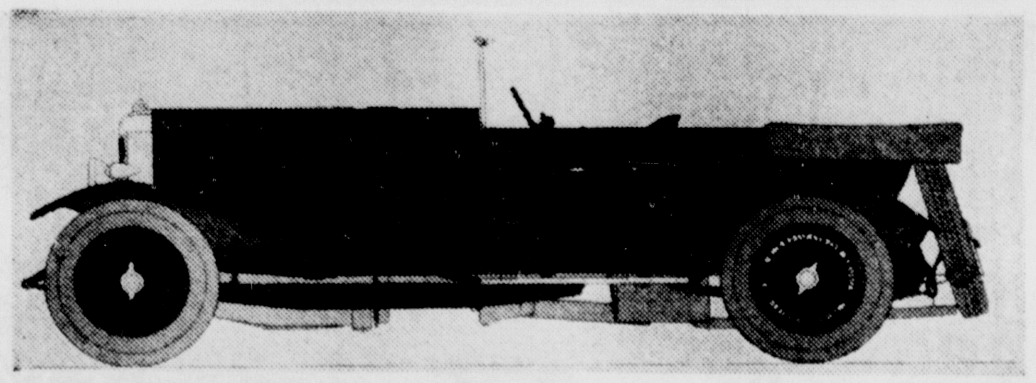

DODGE'S SPORTY two-door Dart GT hardtop for 1965 features an optional black or white vinyl covering for the roof that gives a landau effect. The GT hardtop is one of 20 six and eight-cylinder models offered in the '65 line of the family-size Dart compacts.

The Auto Show Is On Again

cations this year should be noted here. Campbell-Bishop Chevrolet is no longer at 373 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, but is occupying a brilliant new location at 5880 Paradise Drive, east of the Redwood Highway in Corte Madera, and visible from it.

MILL VALLEY Volkswagen has also given up its close-in Mill Valley location at 18 East Blithedale Avenue and has prominent new showrooms at 900 Redwood Highway. This is on the east side of the highway—south of the Belvedere-Tiburon exchange. According to manager Greg Weatherford, sales of new and used cars have doubled, and parts department sales have gone up 35 per cent since the move.

Weatherford, in his capacity as president of the Marin County Automobile Dealers Assn., said he is urging all members of the association and of the Marin Independent Garage Assn. to promote automobile safety checks this year.

By next year, still another Mill Valley dealer will have left its location (on East Blithedale Avenue) for new showrooms on Paradise Drive, Corte Madera — J and B Ford Sales.

MARIN BAY Lincoln-Mercury is the new name for what last year was E. Bugna Lincoln-Mercury, San Rafael. The firm is headed by Herkimer Viglienzone, previously associated with Bugna.

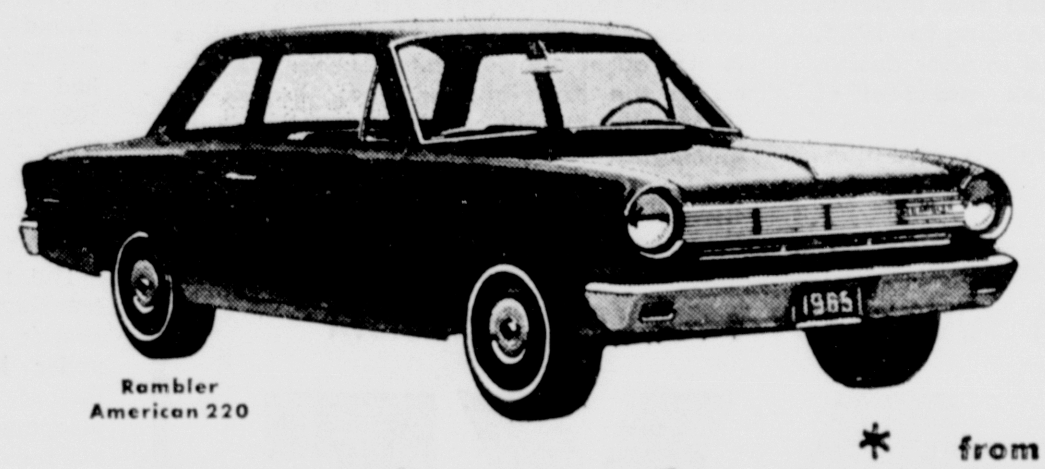

Viglienzone thinks a centrally located auto show would be a particularly stimulating event for Marin automobile sales, but also believes in the effectiveness of the present showroom promotion in calling buyers' attention to the advantage of doing business on this side of the bay.

"We have several customers from the other side," he said. "They prefer buying here—and it's not a matter of dealer friendships so much as it is dealer attitudes."

SOME DEALERS have programmed special service in hosting showroom visitors during the coming week, but more emphasis is being placed on having popular models available and attractive trade-in allowances.

As Bianco Motors president Leonard Proaps put it, "We're not pushing entertainment — we're selling high class transportation. I don't know of any better 'act' for this show than a good-performance car teamed up with an attractive price tag."

Workhorse Truck Has Pioneered Automotive Ideas

The motor truck, hardworking "Plain Jane" of the motor vehicle industry, has contributed many technical advances to its more glamorous relative, the automobile.

Many of these truck developments have added to the safety, comfort and reliability of motoring.

Power steering, for instance, one of the most widely-accepted options on today's passenger cars, was used on an American steam-powered truck as far back as 1876, according to one French trade journal.

THE FILES of the Automobile Manufacturers Assn. show the Columbia Electric truck also had a power steering unit in 1903. By the 1920s several motor truck manufacturers were offering power steering systems to make commercial vehicles more maneuverable.

The rugged demands of the trucking industry inspired research for longer engine life under heavy duty conditions. One of the results was the development of air cleaners for commercial vehicles in 1915. By 1925 oil bath cleaners were offered for light trucks.

As early at 1911, in an effort to get better traction, truck engineers at several companies were developing locking differentials. Within the past decade these devices now commonly referred to as "non-slip differentials" have been offered as optional equipment on nearly all passenger cars.

A POPULAR option on cars today is the four-speed transmission. These transmissions were initially designed for trucks in 1906.

Since the 1930s truck manufacturers have pioneered a number of components which are standard equipment on all new passenger cars. Some of these are directional turn signals, crankcase ventilation systems and alternating current generating units.

Commercial vehicles have filled the role of proving grounds for many of the materials and parts in modern automobiles. For example, truck fleet owners have cooperated with tire manufacturers in new tire experiments. Chrome-plated piston rings, power brakes, durable alloys for bearings and better suspension systems were checked out in commercial vehicles before their wide-spread use in passenger cars.

THREE MILES AN HOUR

Automobile Laws And Customs Have Seen A Lot Of Changes

With a roar of power and a squeal of tires, 1965 goes motoring along. But it wasn't always this way.

Today, our lives revolve more and more round the automobile, says National Automobile Club, with 86 million vehicles on the road, over 800 billion road miles traveled in 1964, and nearly 70 billion gallons of motor fuel consumed in the United States during the past year.

Although licensing laws and highway codes affected the lives of our ancestors as far back as a century ago, these laws and codes involved a very much smaller percentage of the population and the laws were slightly different then.

TAKE THE Red Flag Law of England, for example. Exactly one hundred years ago, in 1865, stagecoach owners and railroad investors were becoming fearful of competition from the new steam-driven public vehicles. Consequently, the British Parliament passed a law forbidding these newfangled vehicles to exceed a certain speed. That speed was three miles per hour!

To enforce this speed limit, a man with a red flag was obliged to precede each such vehicle.

In later years, at the turn of the century, extremely strict and unwarranted licensing laws were introduced. But, despite the rigid clauses contained in the new laws, a few fundamental elements were forgotten. The basic requirement that a driver should be fit and able to see was entirely omitted. As a result, a blind man obtained his driver's license.

This eccentricity was not only limited to licensing laws. It also extended to the fashion of the times.

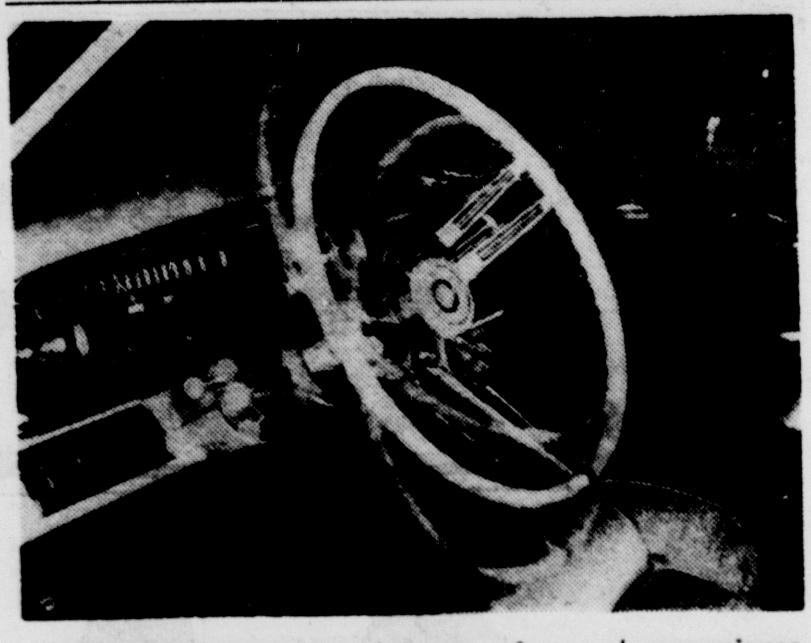

CAR OWNERS of earlier days were usually wealthy people and were thus able to afford outfits to match their new sport. The first automobiles had no roofs or windshields and this created a problem, especially for the ladies. To counteract the ever-present dust and other weather conditions, fashions adapted accordingly. Head to toe outfits were created. Ladies wore head fashions with all-enveloping veils. These were known as dust curtains and closely resembled a beekeeper's headgear. And men wore floor-length coats, with goggles and masks covering their entire faces.

Elaborate procedures were certainly taken against the weather, but even more elaborate procedures were taken against breakdowns. The tools considered necessary for a motor trip of any kind took up nearly as much room as there was passenger space.

A few of the items recommended in a standard tool kit in those days included: One small axe, one carpenter's nail set, one hand pump, one roll electrician's tape, blow-out patches, and spare parts of almost every component of the car. And for personal consumption: four gallons of water, two pounds of chocolate, two pounds of canned meat, two pounds of fruit, and four pounds of additional food. They certainly anticipated being stranded.

AND SO DID some manufacturers, especially one trying to promote a hatchet. His advertisement read: "When the wheels drop out of sight in the mud . . ."

We have come a long way since those days of using a hatchet to extract wheels out of mud, and the automobile has gone through many shapes and changes. But the strangest shape of all must have been the 1905 model with the two detachable passenger seats. One was located in the trunk of the car, the other on the roof.

A VW has fewer parts than other cars because it needs fewer parts.

There's no bulky drive shaft to transfer engine power to the rear wheels. Our car's engine is in back to start with (and to maintain traction with). That's why it doesn't need a drive shaft.

And it doesn't need a radiator, or a water pump, or hoses. Because the engine's cooled with air, not water.

(When you drive your first Volkswagen, you may miss putting in antifreeze, rust inhibitors, and whatnot. But you'll soon get used to it.)

The stuff a Volkswagen doesn't use, it doesn't have to haul (and waste gas on). Which is one reason it averages 32 miles per gallon of regular.

So you can't waste money on that.

Now you know why you can drive a VW for years and years with a lot of parts missing. And never miss them.
